AT THE RIALTO THEATER

An O. Henry Comedy-Drama,
With Scenario by H. W.

CAST.

Hetty..... Mildred Manning
Cecile..... Alice Mann
Man..... Frank Glendon

A cool-eyed, impersonal buyer in the big store where Hetty Pepper worked pinched her arm three inches above the elbow and was knocked three feet by the same. Thirty minutes later Hetty was without a job and with only 20 cents in her lean purse. The two dimes were exchanged for some rib beef. One hot beef stew, a good night's rest and Hetty would be fit to again go out and get a job.

Dazing in her cupboard disclosed the tragic fact that no potatoes or onions were evident. Beef stew cannot be made without onions and potatoes. Taking her pan she went out into the hall and there she discovered the artist girl from across the hall industriously carving potatoes with a shoemaker's knife. Hetty suggested that they bunch their commissariat. If they only had an onion their heaven would be complete.

Hetty escorted Cecile, the painter, into her room and set the stove hot on the one-burner gas stove. Cecile's eyes rested on a chromo of a ferry-boat on the wall and then she burst into tears. Two days ago she had been over to Jersey and was returning after another disappointment and in despondency had slipped over the side of the ferry-boat. But a young man had seen her and the next thing she knew she was supported by his arms. She had refused him her name and address, but he claimed that he would find her anyhow as she belonged to him by right of salvage.

The beef and potatoes boiled merrily on, yet they lacked the soul that an onion would give them and Hetty determined to have one. In the hall she ran into a young man with a large pink onion in his hand. Hetty invites him to donate to the cause. He acquiesces and Hetty goes in to inform the other member of the corporation. But when she returned she finds the young man leaning out of the window and giving instructions to a chauffeur in his limousine below. He turns out to be the man who rescued Cecile and they are soon in each others arms. In addition, a new co-star combination is seen at the Rialto in "The Hunting of the Hawk." The story deals with gentlemen crooks and secret service men and, with thrills, romance and adventure in good measure, affords splendid roles to the two stars, William Courtenay and Marguerite Snow. "The Third Ingredient" and "The Hunting of the Hawk" will be shown at the Rialto tonight and Saturday only.

FINAL PRESENTATION OF WONDERFUL FILM
AT THE BROADWAY

Those who have not yet seen that wonderful moving picture production, "A Daughter of the Gods," one of the greatest known, will have a final chance to do so at the Broadway tonight when its local engagement will come to an end.

William Fox spent a vast sum in the production of this marvelous film offering.

He cared nothing for expense and the results of his lavish expenditure are plainly to be seen in the views.

Annette Kellermann, the famous diving and swimming beauty, is the central figure in the production, and there also are hundreds of men, women and children in this fascinating picture play.

Words are inadequate to express the magnificence of the scenic importance of this production or to tell of the superb scale on which the story is carried through.

A musical score was specially composed for it by a famous professor of music.

131 CLAIM REWARD FOR LANDING TRAIN BANDIT

Cheyenne, Wyo., June 1.—It was only because the Union Pacific railroad waived its strict legal rights that any of the claimants for the $6,500 reward for the capture of William L. Carlisle, train bandit, were able to participate in the reward at all. Judge Charles E. Winter, arbitrator, in handing down his decision recently by which 22 of the 134 claimants received portions of the money, declared every man who claimed a share of the money was either an employee of the railroad or a member of a sheriff's posse and, therefore, could not legally share in the prize. The railroad insisted, however, that the money be divided.

One man received $750; one, $650; two received $500 each; two, $400 each; six, $300 each; nine, $150 each, and three, $50 each.

Carlisle held up, single-handed, three Union Pacific trains between Feb. 9 and Dec. 1, 1914. He exhibited considerable bravado in each case and extended marked civility to the women passengers, refusing to take more than half their jewelry. He talked constantly to the passengers as he went through their pockets.

After the last holdup, posses scouted the hills in the vicinity of Wamsutter and, after several days, a party found the bandit. When surrounded he gave himself up. He now is serving a life sentence in the Wyoming penitentiary and spends his idle time making leather sofa pillows.

RED CROSS TO BE ORGANIZED HERE

Mass Meeting Called at Auditorium Tomorrow Evening. Much Work to Do.

First steps were taken last evening toward the organization of a Butte chapter of the American Red Cross society. A committee to which had been delegated authority to act from Red Cross headquarters at Washington met at the Silver Bow club and completed arrangements for a mass meeting at the Auditorium Saturday evening. At that gathering, which has been called to meet at 8 o'clock, the local branch will be organized.

Several speakers, it is understood, will explain the purposes of the Red Cross society at tomorrow night's meeting. Among those who have been invited to speak is Mrs. W. A. Bower of Anaconda, who has had experience in Red Cross work and who was instrumental in part in organizing a very successful chapter of the national society at Anaconda. It is also expected that Dr. T. C. Witherspoon will make a brief address on the purposes and methods of the Red Cross society.

Back of the enterprise in this city are a number of earnest women on whom much of the work of the Red Cross locally will fall. These women are determined to have a share in the patriotic work of the nation in the present emergency. There is a great deal to do and, to do it well, the people must organize.

The Red Cross society is known the world over. It has a leading part in relief work in Europe at the present time, but its duties are not confined to the battlefield. In this country on a number of occasions it has performed very notable services in the matter of relief work. In disasters by flood and fire, it has always been quick to respond where its services were needed. It is expected that nearly everyone in Butte will want to be a member of the local Red Cross. The dues are only $1 a year. Tomorrow night's meeting is for the public and everyone is invited to be present.

FIRE CHIEF MAKES ANNUAL REPORT

Recommendations Made for Improvements in Department.

Recommendations to make the Butte fire department one of the most efficient in the northwest were made to the city council last night in the annual report of Fire Chief Fred Martin. The record during the past year has never been equalled in Butte. The fire loss was practically nothing, due to the efficiency of the department and because the equipment here is first class.

The chief recommends the immediate purchase of a new automobile city truck service. The truck is needed because of its speed.

Additional hydrants on the south side and in the warehouse district are asked for. This is because of the rapid growth in that region south of Front street.

During the past year the department responded to 356 alarms, of which 21 were false. In all there were 335 fires.

The property involved in value was $4,398,085, upon which there was insurance for $2,164,015. The total loss by fire during the year was but $27,412.50.

Aside from salaries, the department spent but $15,813.57 for running expenses. Included in this amount $6,500 was paid for the new La France combination machine and 4,000 feet of hose.

"In conclusion," reports Chief Martin, "I wish to thank all members of the department for their co-operation in working for efficiency and for their loyalty. I wish also to thank the newspapers of our city, the police department, the water company, whose service is satisfactory, the telephone and telegraph companies, his honor, the mayor, the city council and the different city departments and the citizens of Butte in general for their co-operation and assistance in aiding the Butte fire department to furnish the right service to the community."

AMERICA NEEDS AUXILIARY SHIPS SAYS MARINE EXPERT

Government Should Take Steps to Take Over All Ships Now Building in This Country for Foreign Capital, Says P. H. W. Ross.

P. H. W. ROSS.

BY FREDERICK M. KERBY.
New York, June 1.—To protect our foreign commerce in the present international crisis and to provide the government with a fleet of auxiliary merchant vessels, without which our military and naval establishment will be helpless in the event of war, the United States should immediately assume right of eminent domain over all ships now being built in this country for foreign owners. This is what P. H. W. Ross, president of the National Marine League, declared to me today to be absolutely necessary as a war measure.

Ross, a national authority on maritime matters, and whose league is conducting a nation-wide movement to increase and stabilize American export trade, believes that it will be necessary for this government to take over the ships being built for foreign owners in American yards, and that this can be done without injustice to foreign capital, which has greatly stimulated the recent expansion of our ship-building facilities.

Finding a Way.
"If no other way can be found," said Ross, "foreign owners of the large number of ships now on the stocks in this country could become stockholders in corporations that would be nominally and legally American, so the ships would be subject to the call of the United States government."

"Thus, if a ship owned, for example, by Norwegian stockholders in an American corporation, should be crossing the Indian ocean, and our munitions makers suddenly needed a cargo of nickel—which is produced in New Caledonia—the government could commandeer the vessel near the point of production without having prevented her from earning dividends meanwhile.

"As it is, our government possesses hardly any vessels suitable for auxiliary service. The British government also did not possess a single vessel adapted for war service at the outbreak of the present conflict, but the British admiralty knew the dimension, capacity, equipment and speed of the British merchant ship and the British navy.

"The British, in normal times, are prepared to do things, permitting owners to do on building their own account, that the United States will not do off as regards merchant ships in the war with Spain."

"The one great thing that stares us in the face is the certainty that unless the change of public opinion in the middle west, the mid and maintaining shipbuilding in this country will be so very much less than under foreign American flag will be taken from the mainstays of our navy."

"Certain conditions are made it pleasant and profitable to American citizens to own overseas shipping business."

"These conditions are afforded by wise or foolish governing the enactment of kind of laws lies in the country which holds the veto power."

WITH DUE ALLOWANCE
It happened in a little way. A visiting customer who had a grand old little hotel in the sun so down in a pile and gold.

"By George!" he exclaimed, "That's a grand old hotel!"

"The native started to look and looked critically at the west."

"Not bad," he declared, "for a little place like this."
