JULIAN ELTINGE, CLEVER FEMININE IMPERSONATOR, IN "THE COUNTESS CHARMING" AT RIALTO THEATER

JULIAN ELTINGE, FORMER BUTTE BOY IN "THE COUNTESS CHARMING" AT THE RIALTO.

Eltinge, a former Butte boy, a feminine impersonator, who for the past few years has been the rage of the theatrical world, had made an amusing experiment in making his first photoplay for Paramount. This "Countess Charming," written by Wyn Wells and Gelett Burgess, will be shown at the Rialto theater in three days starting tomorrow. Eltinge, being accustomed to the theater, at first was induced to walk out into the air in broad daylight clad in his evening gown. The first day in the "set," Donald Crisp, the director, was waiting and Mr. Eltinge had been notified that he was to wear a ball gown. The dressing room was some 200 feet from the portion of the studio where the set was built. Mr. Crisp called him to come over. Mr. Eltinge stuck a carefully coiffed head out of the dressing room window, removed a pipe from his mouth and said: "Not on your life. I wouldn't walk across that place in this getup for a million dollars." Finally, however, after much arguing, Mr. Eltinge consented to appear, but threw a heavy dressing gown over his costume. He then insisted that his set be boxed in so that his first day's performance would be concealed from prying eyes. But after the novelty wore off it was nothing to see the star walking carefully around the studio, pipe in mouth and dainty skirts wrapped high around him, calling on some of the other Paramount stars or watching them work. The shock was terrific at first, but now even the primmest ingenue has recovered and Mr. Eltinge, familiarly known as "Bill," bids fair to become one of the most popular members of the studio. Another O. Henry story, "John Tom Little Bear," in which Al Jennings, the former reformed outlaw, appears, completes the bill.

CAMP LEWIS BOYS GO IN FOR BONDS

Camp Has Already Subscribed $200,000—Protection of Soldiers Planned.

Camp Lewis, Tacoma, Wash., Oct. 13.—The Liberty bond campaign at Camp Lewis is rapidly gaining momentum. The 166th depot brigade, comprising less than 2,000 men, has subscribed $115,000 for Liberty bonds, the rate running practically $57.50. Subscriptions from the entire camp total more than $200,000.

Military authorities at Camp Lewis yesterday asked the active co-operation of Tacoma and Pierce county in their fight to keep vice and its attendant evils away from the soldiers at the army post.

A private meeting was held at the courthouse yesterday, attended by Maj. David L. Stone, construction quartermaster; the four superior court judges; the three county commissioners and prosecuting attorneys. The object of the conference was to give the army authorities control of the amusement zone strip of land near the army camp by condemnation proceedings as soon as possible. This was promised by Judge Clifford, who is hearing the case.

Major General Greene, commander of Camp Lewis, will make an address in Trinity Episcopal church Sunday morning and in the First Congregational church Sunday evening.

DRAFTED MAN TAKES HIS LIFE; WAS HOMESICK

Seattle, Wash., Oct. 13.—Millard F. Goldberg, aged 23, of San Francisco, who came to Camp Lewis with the selective draft men, was found dead in his room at a hotel here today. By his side lay an empty bottle of poison. Goldberg left a note stating he took his life as he could remain away from his home and fiancee no longer.

CLARA KIMBALL YOUNG'S GREATEST EFFORT STARTS AT AMERICAN TODAY

Clara Kimball Young's newest production, "The Easiest Way," by Eugene Walter, opening today at the American, is a super production of the great Belasco success, not merely including all the details which made the play the rage for several successive seasons on the stage, but adding numerous features which could not be staged in the theater. The combination of the names of Miss Young, Walter, Capallani, Belasco, with the American's guarantee of highest standard, makes this offering one of the biggest recent events of the year.

In "The Easiest Way" Miss Young has the dramatic and sympathetic role of Laura Murdock, an actress who, after her husband's death, finds her without a protector, and without the influence necessary to obtain an engagement. Her career seems to have been brought to an end, until Brockton, a wealthy broker, becomes interested in her, and offers to use his power with producers in her behalf. She accepts his aid, though rather reluctantly, as she realizes that it means she will eventually have to pay the price.

While playing a western engagement, Laura falls in love with a poor man, and before returning to New York promises to wait for him to make a fortune. But again she finds herself helpless and not hearing from her lover, turns in despair to Brockton, when the old bargain is renewed. The lover strikes it rich, comes east and discovers the situation. He turns from Laura in disgust and the play then speeds to an intensely dramatic finale.

Supporting Miss Young in the picture are such favorites of footlights and screen as Joseph Kilgour, Rockcliffe Fellows, Louise Bates, Cleo Desmond, George Stevens, Frank Kingdon, Mae Hopkins and Walter Ewan. There are many novelties introduced in the telling of the story and the entire production is regarded as the superior of even "The Common Law," in which Miss Young reached the zenith of her popularity. As originally produced for the stage, "The Easiest Way" was declared by critics throughout the country to be the greatest drama ever written by an American playwright. Eugene Walter, already famous because his "Fair Play" was deemed to be the pinnacle of fame among native dramatists, from which he never has fallen. His incisive thrusts at the very heart of American problems, revealing at the same time the strength and weakness of men and women, have placed him in a class by himself.

In developing the story into picture version, Director Capallani has added many features which were merely implied in the play as written for the stage. Incidentally, a new ending has been provided by Mr. Walter himself, which solves the question, often asked when the piece was staged by Belasco, as to the eventual fate of Laura Murdock. This is no sentimental concession to the demand for a happy ending, but a dramatic and logical conclusion.

NOTABLE ADDRESS AT CELEBRATION

Stephen J. Cowley is Principal Speaker at the Columbus Day Exercises.

Attorney Stephen J. Cowley of Great Falls was the orator on the occasion of the celebration of the four hundred and twenty-fifth anniversary of the discovery of America, held at the high school auditorium last night. The exercises were entirely of a patriotic character and the large audience showed appreciation by frequent outbursts of applause. The gathering was presided over by W. J. McMahon, grand knight of Butte council of the Knights of Columbus, under whose auspices the celebration was held. After making a brief address of welcome Mr. McMahon introduced Mayor W. H. Maloney, who spoke on the significance of Columbus day to the American people and in an eloquent manner praised the men who were responding to the call of the president to fight for liberty and peace throughout the world.

A Notable Address.

Attorney Cowley, who is chairman of the second state exemption board, was greeted with rounds of applause when introduced. The speaker first referred to the hardships endured by Christopher Columbus in the discovery of America and afterwards took up the great struggle in which this country is now engaged in conjunction with other European countries against Germany for peace and liberty. As chairman of the exemption board for his part of the state, Mr. Cowley referred to the unpatriotic acts of people who sought to have persons exempted from conscription. He said that it was true that every conceivable means were being used from coming under the conscription act. He referred to the second Liberty loan and pointed out that the annual income of the United States is $40,000,000,000. He said that if half of the people fail to bear the burden of the Liberty loan, then the burden must fall upon the other half, and if the second half fail, then the money must be raised by taxation.

"Patriotism is not dead," he said, "but it must be aroused. No alien should be allowed to make this country his home and see America passing through the shadow of death and withhold his hand from helping her."

"The United States is going to win the war and the hand that has guided the country in the past will continue to guide it."

Patriotism assumes two natures: One that leads to the battlefield and makes heroes; the other that assists the government in accomplishing the great and every day tasks of peace. Each is noble, great and grand. The best patriot is he who develops his intellect to assist the government along the path which leads to peace, or gives his body to defend the flag.

Test of Patriotism.

"We allow insignificant things to interfere with our patriotism. Among these things are avarice, politics and religion. True patriotism loves peace better than strife. What is the test of patriotism? War? No. It lies in obeying established laws. This is the proof of patriotism and the test of courage. It is this that has made Woodrow Wilson the admiration of America and the envy of the world."

The celebration was brought to a close by the singing of "The Star Spangled Banner" by Mrs. Frances Hart-Parks and the entire audience.

The Cristoforo Colombo society celebrated the day with much enthusiasm. During the afternoon the society held the Anaconda Copper Mines band give concerts in this city, Meaderville and Walkerville. In the evening there was a meeting of the Italian residents in the Auditorium, which was presided over by P. M. Bonino. Rev. Father Franchi was the principal speaker. Following the exercises there was dancing, which was continued until midnight.
