

THE CITY.

The temperature, as reported by the local signal office yesterday was as follows: At 7 a. m., 65°; at 10 a. m., 67°; and at 1 p. m., 68°.

William Osburn, vice master of Omaha lodge No. 2 of Oddfellows, is confined to his bed from the effects of a crippled foot received on a motor trip Monday.

Missie Thomas has filed an information against her husband, Arthur, whom she accuses of striking her and swearing at her and indulging other similar little pleasantries.

The quarterly reports of T. A. McGee, register of deeds, and J. J. Mahoney, superintendent of the county poor farm for the quarter ending October 1, are overdue since that date.

A little lad named Harry French, whose parents reside at Twenty-fifth and Farina, was knocked down by a carelessly driven horse on Monday morning and quite badly though not seriously injured.

A movement has originated among the merchants on Sixteenth street to change the name of that thoroughfare for another of a more distinctive character.

Thomas Howard is a vagrant who was arrested for begging on the street. While being taken to the station in the patrol wagon he attempted to pick the pocket of another prisoner, until a tap from Conductor Matza's club warned him to desist.

The Globe building company filed its articles of incorporation in the office of the county clerk yesterday afternoon.

Hood's Sarsaparilla has a steadily increasing popularity, which can only be won by an article of real merit. Give it a trial.

Conny Court. The county court monopolized the attention of the crowd yesterday afternoon, as with a back numbered history as a case, with Frank T. Hanson and B. S. Baker as plaintiffs were prosecuting Jake Werner of Hebron, in an effort to collect an attorney fee of $300.

Robert McCallister has commenced suit to recover $150 from Henry Berthold and Moses Henrich, which amount is due on the rent of a store building.

The clergy, the medical faculty and the people all endorse Burdick Blood Bitters as the best system remedy, blood purifier and tonic in the world. Send for the testimonials.

Mr. Walters' Dental. Recently there appeared an article in the World-Herald, stating that the Anheuser-Busch brewing company, if not actively, at least passively, were interested in the success of prohibition, for the reason that the passage of the amendment would not prohibit the company from selling beer under original package decisions.

Citizens of Omaha at home and abroad should remember that the remaining days of registration are: Thursday, October 23; Friday, October 24, and Saturday, November 1.

A Spirited Runaway. A span of mules attached to express wagon No. 340 became frightened yesterday and broke their fastenings at Twentieth and Farina and started on a wild runaway dash.

Death of Rev. J. M. Adair. Rev. J. M. Adair, who was the first pastor of the South Tenth Street M. E. church, died in Holyoke, Colo., on Sunday. The remains were brought to Omaha last evening and will be buried at Prospect Hill this afternoon.

A Sample of Gall. "The gall of some of the authorities of Council Bluffs," exclaimed County Poormaster Mahoney yesterday, "is simply and surprisingly supreme. What did they just do but send us over a very old and deformed looking woman and her daughter today, telling them if they came over here that Douglas county would give them both tickets to Portland, Ore., where they say they had friends. What did I do? I gave them 35 cents, put 'em on a car and sent 'em back to Council Bluffs."

"I hear, by the way," added Mr. Mahoney, "that the World's Fair management is negotiating with the Council Bluffs charity officials to put them on exhibition in 1893, just for their cheek."

Has Tom Benton, state auditor, was in the city Monday night and attended the rally.

MORUARY.

Death Yesterday Morning of Mr. J. B. J. Ryan, the Journalist. Mr. J. B. J. Ryan, the veteran journalist of this city, whom everybody affectionately styled "Doc," died at his residence at 19 1/2 blocks yesterday morning of typhoid pneumonia.

The news spread rapidly through the city and on every side occasional expressions of surprise and regret, because the event had not been expected, regret, because an event had been brought to a career the possibilities of which were known to almost every citizen of Omaha.

Mr. Ryan was born in New York city July 15, 1840. He moved with his parents to New York when a mere child, going thence to New York where he remained until he was 16 years of age, when he came to Omaha.

He then attended the Columbia law school at Albany, N. Y., where, after a course of three years, he graduated with honors.

In the year of his graduation, 1871, he came to Omaha with his father and mother and set up on the then seemingly boundless prairie, at a point now designated as Love and Mercier avenues.

He supported Senator Hitchcock in his first campaign, which ended in the scorching defeat of Washington he secured for Mr. Ryan a clerkship in the post office at the same time.

He remained in Rochester, dividing his time between the Herald and Democrat and Chronicle of that city until 1878, when he made up his mind to return to Omaha.

He subsequently became connected with the printing business of the Herald and later with Wolfe's directory of the city, again drifting back to legitimate journalism on the Herald when that sheet was about to be sold to the Missouri syndicate.

His regular work was performed upon the Globe of Council Bluffs, a place which he relinquished about a month before he was stricken with the disease which finally closed his career.

Two years ago his father died, succeeding his mother, who had died before. The property acquired by the parents was willed to the grand children, and comprises the land situated at the intersection above named.

THE OMAHA DAILY BEE: WEDNESDAY, OCTOBER 22, 1890.

The fact that Mr. Ryan's illness had not been known save to a few friends undoubtedly contributed to the shock. He had been confined to his residence for the past four weeks though it was only Wednesday last when he was compelled to retire to his bed, to anticipate his last moments.
