George Koper was arrested for being drunk and for fighting. He looked at the judge yesterday out of one eye, and was quite indignant that he should be charged with being drunk. He didn't care so much about being known as a fighter.

The shower which touched here yesterday morning seemed to be only the drippings of a heavy rain which had fallen south of here. One of the railway boys coming in yesterday morning reported a drenching rain, and terrible thunder storm all along the line from Kansas City to Noway.

Surveyor Brodbeck will to-day look after the motor line crossings and get the correct angles for them. Now that arrangements have been completed with the Milwaukee road, it is to be hoped that the crossings will shortly be completed, and the road will then be in running order, everything else being completed.

To-night the band concert at Lake Manawa will draw a crowd. Hacks and other conveyances will be in readiness to convey those who desire to attend. The band should be well patronized in this enterprise. The boys have had a stormy time of late, through no fault of their own. They have shown themselves a most worthy organization, and have aided materially in various public enterprises.

The Brotherhood of Locomotive Engineers of this city and Omaha enjoyed their first annual picnic yesterday afternoon and evening at Lake Manawa. Each dummy train from Omaha during the afternoon and fore part of the evening brought members of the order and their friends, and in consequence a large number enjoyed the picnic. The rain somewhat marred the pleasure of those remaining during the evening.

The board of trade seems to be sleeping at the very time when it should be awake. There are a number of enterprises which should receive the attention of this body, which has done so much in the past to advance the interests of the city. A meeting should be held at an early date, and a full attendance had to take action concerning some of the moves now on foot, in which business men generally are interested.

The Union Veteran Legion has arranged to have a pleasing entertainment Monday night next. The Fighting Chaplain's Lecture to be here, and will deliver one of his inimitable lectures, interspersing it with songs and recitations. He is said to be a host in himself. The entertainment is for the benefit of the Legion, and as such should be generously patronized, aside from the fact that the entertainment will itself be one of special interest. The tickets are only twenty-five cents, and children half price. The old soldiers of Omaha and the surrounding country are invited to attend, and a happy evening is assured all.

Pacific house is the nearest hotel to the majority of real estate offices in the city; $2 per day.

Emancipation Day. Yesterday was a gala one for the colored population. Emancipation day is always observed here, but this celebration was far ahead of any previous one. There was a large delegation from Omaha, accompanied by the colored band. The procession was quite a showy one, consisting of a goody number on foot, distinguished by bright red badges, a number of carriages well filled, and adorned with flags, a big band wagon in which a large number of children were seated, gaily dressed. The procession went to the grove where the exercises were held and the sports had. Addresses appropriate to the day were given, various games indulged in, and refreshments served. All seemed to have a merry time.

LOVE PEEKS THROUGH THE BARS

A Bridegroom Spending His Honeymoon in Jail For Forgery.

THE COLORED FOLKS' DAY.

A Quarrelsome Couple Held Together By a Baby—Schurz Still After Fees—Picnics and Personal.

A Honeymoon in Jail. The course of true love rolled into Judge Aylesworth's court yesterday on a writ of habeas corpus. The chief heroine in the romance was a young man named Charles Wilkins, whose home is in Pacific Junction. Young Wilkins became acquainted with a tender maiden at Glenwood, Lulu C. O'Brien, who is only sixteen years of age, and whose mother, now Mrs. Elizabeth Reynolds, is a widow. The acquaintance dated back to the winter months. The mother learning that the young man was given somewhat to drink, and that there were other habits which rendered him objectionable to her, forbade his going with the girl any more. After this their meetings were on the quiet, but they continued despite the mother's protestations. Last week the young folks decided to marry. The mother of course would not consent, and so there was little use of consulting her about it. Young Wilkins sent a friend to County Clerk Robinson to get a license for them, but this friend learned that it would be necessary for some one disinterested to make affidavit that the parties were of age, or the written consent of the mother must be produced. Young Wilkins then came himself. He was told the same thing, and informed the clerk that if he would make out a certificate for the mother to sign he would see that the signature was obtained. The bank was prepared, and Wilkins went away, only to return about supper time with it signed with what purported to be the autograph of the mother, giving her consent to the marriage of the girl. The license was accordingly issued, and the young man went off to get the knot tied. There was a circus in town, and all the justices and the preachers seem to have been in attendance, so that the couple had to wait for the show to be over. About 11 o'clock at night they found Justice Tolles at his house, and with some difficulty they allayed his suspicions sufficiently for him to take the fee and the knot. Then they hurried away to Pacific Junction. The girl not returning home the irate and anxious mother started on the war-path. She found the bridal party about sunrise. She had a warrant sworn out, and the bridegroom arrested on the charge of uttering a forged instrument, she having never signed her name to the certificate purporting to be her consent to the marriage. The same justice went to jail when he tried the case. He decided that the young man should be held over to await the action of the grand jury, and placed the bonds at $500. Not being able to furnish them, the bridegroom went to jail with a good prospect of spending his honeymoon there, as the grand jury does not meet until in October. He secured the legal services of E. Starbuck, who filed an application for a writ of habeas corpus. The hearing was had yesterday. County Attorney Geunig, of Hastings, and P. P. Kelley, of Glenwood, appeared for the state. The prisoner was present in custody of Deputy Sheriff W. A. Hawker.

The evidence taken on the preliminary hearing was introduced. It consisted of a complete rehearsal of the courtship and marriage, interspersed with racy bits of opinion on the part of the mother-in-law. The young man claimed that although the mother of the girl had ordered him away from the house, the girl had told him about a week before the marriage that the mother would give her consent. When he got the certificate from the county clerk, for the mother's signature, he thought it was better for the girl to ask for the consent than for her to do so. He took the paper to the house where he thought the girl was, but she not being there he left it with a woman to hand to her. Later in the day the girl signed the certificate all signed, and he did not know but what it was all right until the next morning when the mother hunted him up and raised a row.

Judge Aylesworth after hearing the arguments, decided to remand the young man to jail, and refused to lessen the amount of the bonds. The mother seems determined not to let him enjoy the marriage relations which he won by such subtlety, and insists that she will prosecute her new son-in-law to the bitter end. The girl seems devoted to him, and testifies, so far as she can, in his behalf.

To Excursion Parties. The excursion steamer and barge John M. Abbott is prepared to fulfill engagements for excursions on the Missouri river—either day or moonlight parties. Capacity 400 passengers. For terms and other particulars inquire of L. P. Judson, 929 Sixth avenue.

An Overheated Home. A tall, black haired young man, a Frenchman, stood before the police court yesterday morning charged with whipping his wife. He gave his name as Tom Lafey and residence No. 235 Tenth avenue. His wife, a slender little woman, with a baby in her arms, came into the room just as the case was called. The husband took the babe out of her arms and handed her a chair in a gallant manner, as if to conciliate her, but the court-tesis apparently came too late. Despite an impediment in her speech, she rattled off her story of abuses at a terrific speed. If half that the woman told is true the fellow needed a whip instead of a jail. She said he was a terror to her. She had to get up in the morning, chop the wood and get breakfast while he slept, but she was willing to do this if he would only treat her like a decent woman and not like a dog. After doing all kinds of work she was slapped and cursed whenever he had a little mind about anything. He had driven her from the house in her night dress and she had been once knocked down by him the blow in her face causing the blood to form a pool on the floor. The other thing which she did not deem proper, and going against his wishes often expressed to her. If it was not for the baby he would skip town and leave her. If the baby died, which it would if it didn't get better care than he was giving it, he would leave at once and not wait to bury it. Her own sister had advised him to leave her.

Judge Aylesworth tried to effect some reconciliation, but was not very successful. The woman at last said she did not want him fined or sent to jail. She needed his support, and there seemed no other way but to make another trial. The judge advised them to avoid both getting mad at the same time, and thought the couple could get along if they could stick to this and only one get mad at a time. By thus keeping their turns they might live together. The two went off up the street, the man carrying the baby, but so far ahead of the woman who followed behind that it seemed the couple were not in the same very loving frame of mind. The rows between them have been a great disturbance to the neighbors, but there seemed no one to care for the woman and her baby if the man was locked up.

After His Fees. In the superior court yesterday the taking of testimony in the case of Justice Schurz against the county was concluded. The arguments will be made this afternoon. Among the fees claimed by him, and which the county refuses to allow, are some for cases which he tried during the absence of Judge Aylesworth. It is claimed by the county attorney that the informations were filed, and the warrants issued by Clerk Burke, of the superior court, and that afterwards when Justice Schurz came to try the cases he entered the fees for information, warrant, etc., on his docket. The other side of the statement is that the clerk drew these papers under the direction of Justice Schurz, and that the cases being in Schurz's court the fees certainly belonged to him. Yesterday a number of attorneys were called on to testify concerning cases in which they had been engaged, and an attempt made by the county attorney to prove by them that in these cases there were not so many continuances as were charged in Justice Schurz's fee bill, and that bonds were not filed, although charged by the county. There was not much headway made on this line of defense. These matters had been quite fully explained by the justice.

The ceiling of one of the court rooms of the county's new mansion is finished. The decorations are quite showy, and the county evidently is getting its money's worth from the artists. The work of decorating the ceiling of the other court room commenced. The department work about the building is progressing well.

The jewelry man who worked Council Bluffs recently and who has been visiting other cities in this vicinity, was arrested at Denison the other day for not paying trial in the sum of $300. He can easily pay such bill from the proceeds of catching suckers. It is estimated that the fellow took about $7,000 from his corner sales here alone.

Justice Barrett yesterday officiated at a quiet wedding in the parlors of the Ogden house, the contracting parties being P. H. Swift, of Lincoln, and Miss Lucy D. Thompson, of Omaha.

A. Lowenthal, of Omaha, was complained of yesterday for not taking out the necessary license for doing scavenger work here.

A man was picked up in Bayliss' park yesterday, who seemed to be either sun-struck or dead drunk. Time decided in favor of the drunk theory. He gave his name as Al Wilson.

The Study of Things and Books. "Manual Training in School Education," by Philip Magnus, in Popular Science Monthly for August: An objection is sometimes raised to the introduction of manual training into elementary schools on the ground that, as the children of the working classes necessarily leave school at an early age, and spend their lives in the most menial and unskilled work, such time as they can give to study should be occupied in other pursuits—in cultivating a taste for reading, and in the acquisition of book knowledge. This objection is due to a misconception of the true objects and aims of education, and to an imperfect knowledge of what is meant by workshop instruction. To assume that the best education can be given through the medium of a factory, and cannot be equally well obtained from the study of things, is a survival of the medievalism against which nearly all modern educational authorities protest. But there is another and a more important error in this argument. People often talk and write as if school-time should be utilized for teaching those things which a child is not likely to care to learn in after life; whereas, the real aim of school education should be to create a desire to continue in after life the pursuit of the knowledge and the skill acquired in school. In other words, the school should be made, as far as possible, a preparation for the whole work of life, and should naturally lead up to it. The endeavor of all educators should be to establish such a relation between school instruction and the occupations of life as to prevent any break of continuity in passing from one to the other. The methods by which we gain information and experience in the busy world should be identical with those adopted in schools.

Rio De Janeiro. From a letter received from a friend on board the Thetis, bound for Alaska, the following extract is taken: Here we are at last at Rio. It is just as we thought to come from Barbados, and it seemed a long time to be at sea. You know now is the very middle of winter for this place, so the thermometer rarely ever gets above 87 deg., in midday and down to 66 at night. The dew is something frightful, everything is dripping in the morning. The harbor of Rio and the approach to it are the most beautiful I have ever seen. The hills rise up to great heights right out of the sea, and almost all around Rio the mountains are very high. We have taken surface cars to the suburbs of the city, and long walks into the country. There is one hill called "Canevado," which is a railroad up its side to the summit and a pavilion on top. When you are about ninety feet of the way up there is a station where you get off and walk along the side of the mountain on a well made road along which is an aqueduct which catches all the water from the mountain, and carries it to the city. After you have walked about three miles along this road you come to a bridge, called the "Devil's bridge," because it is so rotten that it is very dangerous to cross, so that people frequently fall through. It was told they fall only 2,000 feet or more. Of course we went across, but I must confess I was glad to get back safely, and have no desire to go over it again.

The city of Rio is a very interesting one, and no public buildings that amount to anything, and the people don't amount to very much, either, but the country is beautiful without any doubt, and so are the little parks and squares in the city.
