

Prominent Omaha Women Who Drive Cadillac Cars

No city of its size in the United States has more women who are automobilists than has Omaha. Fine big gasoline cars driven by women are common sights on the street of the city at all seasons of the year. The gasoline car has so developed in the last two or three years that it has no terrors for the feminine enthusiast and it is easy for a woman to handle the largest of the touring machines.

The picture above shows a group of women who are driving Cadillac cars every day on the streets of Omaha. These are other women Cadillac drivers who were unable to get into the picture: Mrs. Samuel Burns, Jr., Miss Anne Blotcky, Mrs. A. M. Myers, Miss Marjorie Carpenter, Miss Maude Davies, Mrs. Lester Deihaus, Mrs. H. A. Deiweller, Miss Frances Hochstetler, Mrs. Frank Crawford, Mrs. F. S. Knapp, Mrs. M. I. Gordon, Mrs. H. R.

Bixby, Mrs. Jake Klein, Mrs. Samuel Wertheimer, Mrs. John Madden, Miss Ann Offerman, Mrs. A. F. Smith, Mrs. P. A. Wells, Mrs. H. A. Waggener, Mrs. John J. Pryor, Miss Harriet Flack. There are in the list a number of women who do much more than simply handle the steering wheel on their cars. They are able to locate faults in the operation of their cars and correct them if necessary. They are able to demount a rim and set a tire in place if caught with a puncture away from a repair shop. They know the mechanism of their cars and if the motor is not working properly they know why. A novel feature of this big collection of Omaha women, all driving the same make of car, is that they are all real motor enthusiasts and would not for a minute believe they could do without their automobiles. They drive down town for their shopping, make their calls and take their vacation trips in their cars. A number of them have big distance records to their credit and think nothing of motoring to Des Moines, Chicago or Denver. To them a motor car is a necessity, but they get a good deal of pleasure in the operation of their machines. Electric starters, improved gears, electric lights, quick demountable rims, and other late improvements and accessories have made the operation of a motor car easy and a woman is as much at home at the steering wheel as her husband or brother. It used to be that husband or brother had to go out and crank the motor for the fair driver, and at night, manipulate the gas lights. Now the woman mounts her car, starts the motor with a touch of the finger and with another touch turns on her entire lighting system. She has before her the gauges to show her how her car is running and has full control of the machine within easy reach of either hand.

These Omaha women know their cars thoroughly and they are prone to gather in small groups at their club and talk automobile by the hour as do men who drive. They know all about transmissions, carburetors, magneto and ignition and when it is necessary can discourse intelligently on these subjects. Modern motor car methods have made this possible and Omaha women are taking full advantage of the pleasures offered by ownership of an automobile.

What Women Are Doing in the World

WITH the approach of autumn comes the resurgency activity of women's clubs. After a summer of complete rest, members of the various organizations will return with renewed interest in the work they have set out to accomplish.

During the last week the Frances Willard union and the West Side union of the Woman's Christian Temperance union have held the annual business meetings and officers for the coming year were elected. The members of these societies are most active in their work. Mrs. T. J. Roberts was re-elected president of the Frances Willard union and Mrs. Horace Claggett, president of the West Side.

The Omaha Suffrage association met Thursday at the cottage of Mrs. Frost, at the Carter Lake Country club, and plans for the coming campaign were discussed and made. The warm weather is almost over and the actual work for the year is about to be commenced.

The Equal Franchise league of South Omaha will meet Wednesday of this week. While this is a very young organization, it has a splendid membership and much is expected to be accomplished by its members.

The Wyebe Story Tellers' league will hold its first meeting the latter part of September. The Mothers' Culture club will meet September 11. The annual business meeting of this club will be held in October.

Prominent members of the Omaha Society of Fine Arts, who have been in Europe and in the east for the summer, will have much that is new and interesting to bring to the attention of the society during the work of the coming year. Mrs. Arthur Crittenden Smith, president of the society, has spent the summer on the Massachusetts coast and in Boston. Mrs. Charles Kounice and Mrs. Ward Burgess have spent the summer in England and have visited the galleries there.

part of September to resume her work with the club. The club studied Japanese history last year and will continue the study of it this year. Mrs. McDonald will have many interesting things to tell the members of her trip through Japan in regard to the work. Omaha women are very much interested in the visit of Miss Mary O'Reilly of Chicago, to this city. Miss O'Reilly is a most enthusiastic suffragist, socialist and is a great worker for the cause of both. She addressed several women on the subject of suffrage at the home of Mrs. W. C. Sunderland Saturday morning. She will make an address on the Labor day program at Krug park Monday afternoon. Miss O'Reilly is in touch with the labor situation in Chicago and told the women of Omaha that the cause of suffrage would not be helped until the laboring women became interested and worked with them. It was largely through these societies that the work in Chicago was done, said Miss O'Reilly. Miss Mary Galvin of Chicago, who is an associate editor of Life and Labor, accompanied Miss O'Reilly and will be among the honor guests at the Labor day celebration.

The regular meeting of the Equal Franchise league of South Omaha will be held Wednesday at 2:30 o'clock at Library hall, South Omaha. Mrs. W. W. Widow will speak on the books on suffrage. Mrs. Edward Kenney of Chicago will also take part in the program. Mrs. Kenney is a member of one of the Chicago organizations and a most enthusiastic worker. Other prominent local suffragists will take part in the program. All who are interested in the cause of woman's suffrage are most cordially invited to attend the meeting.

The West Side union of the Woman's Christian Temperance union held its annual meeting at the home of Mrs. Grover Thursday afternoon. Mrs. Horace Claggett was elected president; Mrs. A. Q. Mead, vice president; Mrs. Frank Dunn, secretary, and Mrs. S. C. Jennings, treasurer. Delegates to the county convention were elected as follows: Mrs. B. E. Gantz, Mrs. Frank Hensman and Mrs. E. G. Grover. The alternates are: Mrs. John Blake, Mrs. H. S. Miller and Mrs. B. Givens. The county convention will be held at Valley September 12.

The Omaha Woman's Democratic league will give a luncheon at Happy Hollow Thursday, September 11. Following the luncheon a business meeting will be held and plans for the coming year made. All democratic women are cordially invited to attend. Reservations may be made to Mrs. Earl Stanfield, who is chairman of the entertainment committee. Others on the committee are Mrs. James Dahlman, Mrs. C. Vincent and Mrs. W. C. Challa.

Armies of North and South to Meet in Peace at Lookout and get right behind that old tree again and live over that incident. "You see, we were advised to retreat. There was the battery on the mountain, and batteries on all sides—the 'rebs' you know. Right when it was the hottest of the fight, in comes the colonel. I believe, and says something about retreating. Incidentally, we did not retreat.

"I may say in passing that the southern hospitality we hear so much about was permitted to become lax in those turbulent days. All the receptions we attended were hot ones and those who 'retained' did not flatter us by wishing most heartily that we would call again some time. The war taught both sides something—it taught the north that a man with a principle to defend could be particularly obstinate, and it taught the south that Old Glory was not to be trifled with; and both sides soon made the discovery that the war would not be ended in two or three months, as the recruiting officers would have one believe.

"But now the southern hospitality has been restored, of course, and the Grand Army of the Republic man is most welcome down there where he did so much damage fifty years ago."

And so on and so forth, all the way down the list of names of the men who will attend the reunion. The "hard feeling" has subsided with time, and there is no resentment. But they all admit, rather sadly, that there is now, and shall be for years, a distinction made between the north and the south. There is no animosity, of course—that is dead.

John Dempster has written to a committee at Shiloh, stating at what time to expect the Nebraska "boys," and a hearty reception is promised. The survivors will ride in comfort over the old southern line, now called the Mobile & Ohio, which they helped destroy during the war.

"We pulled up the rails," Mr. Dempster said, "and the ties. We piled the ties in a heap and placed the rails across the top. The ties were burned and the rails bent in the middle by the heat. We took the rails' ends and tramped them around trees along the right-of-way."

"Although that road suffered a good deal we are given a special rate of 1 cent a mile. They seemed to admire our actions. But these roads around here won't do anything like that for us. I told them that my fellows should get out and wrap a few of their rails around trees; they might give us a similar rate then."

"We are assured of every consideration while in Tennessee. We shall travel on a special. I do not know how many cars will be necessary yet. There will be standard and tourist sleepers, an observation car and dining cars. We will leave on the Burlington September 12."
