Of the events in the immediate future society is just now finding chief interest in the automobile flower parade which is to be one of the features of the carnival Whenever their support has been needed Omaha women, and particularly those of the set to which the city has a right to look to establish precedent and make things popular, have rarely been be no exception. Society women are lending their support and doing it enthusiastic. ally and the majority of those who own or operate automobiles, who are in the city, will participate in the parade on the afternoon of October 3. Elaborate preparation is being made for the decoration of the automobiles and it is estimated that about fifty will join the parade. Of course these will not all be run by women.

Among those who will operate their cars are Miss Mary Lee McShane, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John A. McShane; Miss Bessie Brady, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John S. Brady; Miss Helen Davis, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Fred H. Davis; Mrs. Ella Nash; Miss Florence Lewis, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. E. V. Lewis; Mrs. E. S. Westbrook; Miss Ruth Brandels, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Arthur D. Brandels; Miss Lane, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Vance Lane; Mrs. H. E. Fredericksen and Mrs. John The list is not yet complete and in addition to the Omaha entries there will probably be several from out of town.

Special interest in this season's debutantes is rife among the society folk, owing to the fact that this week witnessed the beginning of what promises to be an Secord to Mr. Arthur Seibel, the wedding unusually long and interesting series of to take place at the home of the bride's coming out parties, receptions and the parents, November 2. many other social events that always attend the entrance of youth and beauty into the fashionable world Already a num- re'll were married at high noon at the ber of dates for the various debutantes affairs have been decided upon, although not strest. This wedding plan is so very unpretentious that the prospective bride can now-if she wishes-took forward to her approaching nuptial day without the usual dread and petty trials, incidental to the issue of the formal invitations. But the burden falls heavy on her parents for upon them devolves the task-and it truly is a task-of bidding their friends to the ceremony. This is accomplished by personally calling upon each family named on the guest list and verbally extending the invitation to the wedding. Should any of the parties happen to be away from home, the parents leave their visiting cards, bear ing the daughter's name and the date and hours of the ceremony, and if necessary they repeat their call until the personal

It is the famous painting of the "Battle of Aughrim" by John Mulvaney, a graduate of the Munich school and an American, who became famous through his painting, 'Custer's Last Rally."

The "Battle of Aughrim" was the last battle fought on Irish soil. It was fought July, 1691, it being the last stand made by the followers of King James II., whose forces under, General St. Ruth, numbered 15,000, being opposed by the army of Wildam and Mary, 25,000 strong under General de Ginkell. Notwithstanding the heavy odds against them, the Catholics had the battle bractically won, when their generalin-chief, St. Ruth, had his head blown off by a cannon shot. They lost heart and fell nto disorder, as St. Ruth's plans of battle had not been confided to any of the officers under him The picture represents the charge of the Irish cavalry at the turning point of the battle. The Castle of Aughrim, seen in the background, capitulated on the day following the battle. It is still standing. The "Battle of Aughrim" is considered second only to the Custer picture in point of merit. and is unique in its way-it probably being the only picture ever painted of this particular battle. It marks a period of great historical interest and is sure to be visited of the Woman's club will meet at 4 o'clock by many thousand lovers of the beautiful during Bennett's grand fall opening week.
