Correct Corseting As An Aid In Acquiring The Svelte Figure Of 1910

By Mary Eleanor O'Donnell

To meet the demands of the more luxurious fashions of 1910, the corset should be in keeping with the lines of the dress and the style of the period. The corset should be of the corset, and not the long-skirted type of bustier, which was so popular a few years ago.

A corset must not only be comfortable, but must give perfect support to the figure. The corset should be of the corset, not the long-skirted type of bustier, which was so popular a few years ago. In the latter case, the corset was too tight and the figure too stiff to be comfortable.

The corset should be of the corset, not the long-skirted type of bustier, which was so popular a few years ago. In the latter case, the corset was too tight and the figure too stiff to be comfortable.

The corset should be of the corset, not the long-skirted type of bustier, which was so popular a few years ago. In the latter case, the corset was too tight and the figure too stiff to be comfortable.

The corset should be of the corset, not the long-skirted type of bustier, which was so popular a few years ago. In the latter case, the corset was too tight and the figure too stiff to be comfortable.