

MISCELLANEOUS. TRADE WINNERS. PURE GOODS. Correct Weights. Best Quality. Low Prices.

POWELL & SNIDER. THE LEADERS IN. FINE GROCERIES. TABLE DELICACIES.

AT COST. Gents' Furnishings, and Hats.

THE ENTIRE STOCK OF SEASONABLE GOODS IN THE ABOVE DEPARTMENT AT PRIME COST, TO MAKE A CHANGE.

FIRST-CLASS GOODS! RARE CHANCE! GREAT BARGAINS! CALL EARLY!

30 South Main St. BON MARCHE.

ARDEN PARK HOTEL AND COTTAGES.

Per Month $40.00. Per Week 12.00. Per Day 2.00. Dinner and Tea Parties on one day's notice. 75 cents.

Thos. A. Morris, Prop., Arden, N. C.

J. W. V. WILLS. ARTHUR J. WILLS.

WILLS BROS., ARCHITECTS, ASHEVILLE, N. C.

Office Barnard Building. P. O. Box 554.

Plans, Specifications, Details, &c., for every class of building at short notice.

ARTISTIC INTERIOR DECIGNS A SPECIALTY. Call and see us. apr16d3m

Asheville, N. C., April 11, 1890. The copartnership heretofore existing between the undersigned, under the firm name of PULLIAM & CO., is this day dissolved by mutual consent.

To our patrons of the past: I have this day sold my interest and good will in the insurance business in Asheville to Lawrence Pulliam, who will continue the business.

Men's Rubber Boots only $1.60 at MITCHELL'S.

Men's Rubber Coats at rock bottom prices at MITCHELL'S.

Men's, Women's and Children's Rubbers at the lowest prices at MITCHELL'S.

Umbrellas in great variety at MITCHELL'S.

NO. 26 PATTON AVENUE. apr21m

MISCELLANEOUS. ASHEVILLE LIBRARY ASSOCIATION.

ROOMS, 26 PATTON AVE., (Y. M. C. A. ROOMS.)

Open daily, except Sundays, from 10 a. m. until 1 p. m., and 4 until 6 p. m.

The terms of subscription are: One year $2; 6 mos., $1.50; 3 mos., $1; 1 mo., 50 cents; daily 2 cts.

Officers for 1890—President, Charles W. Woolsey; Vice-President, Thos. A. Jones; Sec. and Treasurer, D. S. Watson; Librarian, Miss H. J. Hatch.

Citizens and visitors are cordially invited to inspect the catalogue and inscribe their names as members. Jan30dtf

English and French BOARDING AND DAY SCHOOL, FOR YOUNG LADIES AND LITTLE GIRLS.

MRS. BURGYN WATLAND, PRINCIPAL. (For many years Associate Principal of Mt. Vernon Institute, Baltimore.)

W. O. WOLFE. Over 300 sets of the most beautiful Monuments and Tombstones

Just received, from the cheapest Tombsmen to handsome Monuments. I have made a great reduction in prices, and it will pay you to come and look at my stock, whether you buy or not. Warehouse—Wolfe Building, Court Square.

JAMES FRANK, DEALER IN FAMILY GROCERIES AND PROVISIONS

Agent for Reems Creek Woolen Mills. North Main Asheville, N. C. feb10dy

REAL ESTATE. WALTER B. GWYN, W. W. WEST.

GWYN & WEST, (Successors to Walter B. Gwyn) ESTABLISHED 1881

REFER TO BANK OF ASHEVILLE. REAL ESTATE. Loans Securely Placed at 8 Per Cent.

Notary Public. Commissioners of Deeds. FIRE INSURANCE. OFFICE—Southeast Court Square.

CORTLAND BROS., Real Estate Brokers, and Investment Agents.

Loans securely placed at 8 per cent. Office: 24 & 26 Patton Ave. Second floor. 604dy1

JOHN CHILD, (Formerly of Lyman & Child), REAL ESTATE

—AND— LOAN BROKER. Strictly a Brokerage Business

Loans securely placed at 8 per cent. THOS. P. HAMILTON & CO.,

GROGERS, *****

 BIG 22, Patton Avenue.

6618 46m. SALE OF REAL ESTATE.

I will offer for sale at the court house door in the city of Asheville, N. C., on Saturday, the 30 day of May, 1890, at 12 m., the following described property:

A lot of land, with the improvements thereon, lying near the old depot of W. N. C. R. R. Drummond and Flora L. Drummond, his wife, to secure the payment of the sum of Eight Hundred and Seventy-seven Dollars and Thirty-three Cents, bearing interest at 5 per cent. from said date, I will offer for sale to the highest bidder for cash, at the court house door in the city of Asheville, on the 10th day of May, 1890, a certain piece or parcel of land, situated on Valley street in the city of Asheville, particularly described in said deed of trust, registered in the Register's Office in Book 8 and on p. 415.

EDMUND B. NORVELL, Trustee. apr5 d3od

NOTICE. By virtue of a deed of trust executed to me on the 21st day of August, 1880, by J. A. Drummond and Flora L. Drummond, his wife, to secure the payment of the sum of Eight Hundred and Seventy-seven Dollars and Thirty-three Cents, bearing interest at 5 per cent. from said date, I will offer for sale to the highest bidder for cash, at the court house door in the city of Asheville, on the 10th day of May, 1890, a certain piece or parcel of land, situated on Valley street in the city of Asheville, particularly described in said deed of trust, registered in the Register's Office in Book 8 and on p. 415.

EDMUND B. NORVELL, Trustee. apr5 d3od

ROOM WITH BOARD. Nicely furnished rooms suitable for two ladies or gentlemen. Table boarders desired. apr14 d1w

MISCELLANEOUS. ESTABLISHED 1874. W. C. CARMICHAEL, APOTHECARY,

20 SOUTH MAIN STREET, ASHEVILLE, N. C.

For sixteen years I have carried on a Drug and Prescription business in Asheville, striving at all times to buy pure Drugs and sell no goods that are not strictly first-class in every respect. Everything warranted as represented or money refunded. My goods are pure and fresh and my prices as low as the lowest. Prescriptions filled at all hours, day and night, and delivered free of charge to any part of the city.

Mr. J. Taylor Amis is with me, and will be pleased to meet his friends and customers.

1879. 1889. S. R. KEPLER, DEALER IN FINE GROCERIES.

Purveyor to intelligent and appreciative Asheville and American families. Palates and tastes of people who believe in good living cannot be humbugged by "Cheap John" goods. Cheap goods and first quality are not synonymous. I have in stock and to arrive, all reasonable specialties, comprising in part Fruits, Oranges, Lemons, Cranberries, Raisins, Figs, Nuts, etc.

Miscellaneous—Choice O. K. New Orleans Molasses, for table use, Prime New Orleans Molasses, for cooking. Extra fine Assortment of Crackers. Fine Teas and Coffees a specialty. Mince Meats—Gordon & Dilworth's, and other brands. Plum Pudding, Calf's Foot Jelly, etc. Pressed and Crystallized Ginger. Shad Roe in kits. Roe Herrings and all other goods in demand for the Holidays. S. R. KEPLER.

Redwood & Co. We beg to return thanks for the substantial recognitions of our great pains in the collection of an unusually attractive stock, and to direct special attention to our medium and fine Dress Goods, Silks, Velvets, Satines, Gingham, Clothing, Underwear, Neckwear and Kid Gloves.

Correct styles at reasonable prices all along the line, with a number of desirable things, at a fourth below prevailing prices.

H. REDWOOD & CO. Clothing, Dry Goods, Shoes, Hats, Small Wares, and Carpets. 7 and 9 Patton Avenue.

THE SHOE STORE. Herring & Weaver,

IN SHOES OF ALL GRADES, —AND— FINE HATS. 39-Patton Avenue-39 Asheville, N. C.

FOR MORE than a quarter of a century Samuel J. Randall has occupied a seat in congress as a representative from the State of Pennsylvania. And not only in length of service, but in distinguished ability, his career has been unblemished. During the greater part of this time he has held without dispute the position of leader of his party in the house, in which his force of character and his exceptional parliamentary knowledge and skill rendered him peculiarly successful. When occupying the Speaker's chair, his fairness, as well as his firmness, made him respected by all parties. Mr. Randall held a peculiar position in congress, unlike that of any other member. He was the unanimous choice of the voters of his district—at the last election there was no opposing candidate and only 112 scattering votes were cast against him—and although a life-long and earnest democrat he was retained in office by republican support. This peculiarity, of course, has been due to the devotion with which Mr. Randall sustained the Pennsylvania idea in economic legislation; and for the same reason he has been more or less in disrepute with his party, and lately has come into direct opposition. But although sent to congress as the representative of "protected" monopolies, and holding his seat by the grace of those interests, no shadow of discredit ever rested upon his character. He was one whose integrity was above suspicion and whose opinions were always respected as honestly conscientious. His death is a distinct loss to the country.

THE SHOE STORE. Herring & Weaver,

IN SHOES OF ALL GRADES, —AND— FINE HATS. 39-Patton Avenue-39 Asheville, N. C.

FOR MORE than a quarter of a century Samuel J. Randall has occupied a seat in congress as a representative from the State of Pennsylvania. And not only in length of service, but in distinguished ability, his career has been unblemished. During the greater part of this time he has held without dispute the position of leader of his party in the house, in which his force of character and his exceptional parliamentary knowledge and skill rendered him peculiarly successful. When occupying the Speaker's chair, his fairness, as well as his firmness, made him respected by all parties. Mr. Randall held a peculiar position in congress, unlike that of any other member. He was the unanimous choice of the voters of his district—at the last election there was no opposing candidate and only 112 scattering votes were cast against him—and although a life-long and earnest democrat he was retained in office by republican support. This peculiarity, of course, has been due to the devotion with which Mr. Randall sustained the Pennsylvania idea in economic legislation; and for the same reason he has been more or less in disrepute with his party, and lately has come into direct opposition. But although sent to congress as the representative of "protected" monopolies, and holding his seat by the grace of those interests, no shadow of discredit ever rested upon his character. He was one whose integrity was above suspicion and whose opinions were always respected as honestly conscientious. His death is a distinct loss to the country.

FOR MORE than a quarter of a century Samuel J. Randall has occupied a seat in congress as a representative from the State of Pennsylvania. And not only in length of service, but in distinguished ability, his career has been unblemished. During the greater part of this time he has held without dispute the position of leader of his party in the house, in which his force of character and his exceptional parliamentary knowledge and skill rendered him peculiarly successful. When occupying the Speaker's chair, his fairness, as well as his firmness, made him respected by all parties. Mr. Randall held a peculiar position in congress, unlike that of any other member. He was the unanimous choice of the voters of his district—at the last election there was no opposing candidate and only 112 scattering votes were cast against him—and although a life-long and earnest democrat he was retained in office by republican support. This peculiarity, of course, has been due to the devotion with which Mr. Randall sustained the Pennsylvania idea in economic legislation; and for the same reason he has been more or less in disrepute with his party, and lately has come into direct opposition. But although sent to congress as the representative of "protected" monopolies, and holding his seat by the grace of those interests, no shadow of discredit ever rested upon his character. He was one whose integrity was above suspicion and whose opinions were always respected as honestly conscientious. His death is a distinct loss to the country.

FOR MORE than a quarter of a century Samuel J. Randall has occupied a seat in congress as a representative from the State of Pennsylvania. And not only in length of service, but in distinguished ability, his career has been unblemished. During the greater part of this time he has held without dispute the position of leader of his party in the house, in which his force of character and his exceptional parliamentary knowledge and skill rendered him peculiarly successful. When occupying the Speaker's chair, his fairness, as well as his firmness, made him respected by all parties. Mr. Randall held a peculiar position in congress, unlike that of any other member. He was the unanimous choice of the voters of his district—at the last election there was no opposing candidate and only 112 scattering votes were cast against him—and although a life-long and earnest democrat he was retained in office by republican support. This peculiarity, of course, has been due to the devotion with which Mr. Randall sustained the Pennsylvania idea in economic legislation; and for the same reason he has been more or less in disrepute with his party, and lately has come into direct opposition. But although sent to congress as the representative of "protected" monopolies, and holding his seat by the grace of those interests, no shadow of discredit ever rested upon his character. He was one whose integrity was above suspicion and whose opinions were always respected as honestly conscientious. His death is a distinct loss to the country.

FOR MORE than a quarter of a century Samuel J. Randall has occupied a seat in congress as a representative from the State of Pennsylvania. And not only in length of service, but in distinguished ability, his career has been unblemished. During the greater part of this time he has held without dispute the position of leader of his party in the house, in which his force of character and his exceptional parliamentary knowledge and skill rendered him peculiarly successful. When occupying the Speaker's chair, his fairness, as well as his firmness, made him respected by all parties. Mr. Randall held a peculiar position in congress, unlike that of any other member. He was the unanimous choice of the voters of his district—at the last election there was no opposing candidate and only 112 scattering votes were cast against him—and although a life-long and earnest democrat he was retained in office by republican support. This peculiarity, of course, has been due to the devotion with which Mr. Randall sustained the Pennsylvania idea in economic legislation; and for the same reason he has been more or less in disrepute with his party, and lately has come into direct opposition. But although sent to congress as the representative of "protected" monopolies, and holding his seat by the grace of those interests, no shadow of discredit ever rested upon his character. He was one whose integrity was above suspicion and whose opinions were always respected as honestly conscientious. His death is a distinct loss to the country.

FOR MORE than a quarter of a century Samuel J. Randall has occupied a seat in congress as a representative from the State of Pennsylvania. And not only in length of service, but in distinguished ability, his career has been unblemished. During the greater part of this time he has held without dispute the position of leader of his party in the house, in which his force of character and his exceptional parliamentary knowledge and skill rendered him peculiarly successful. When occupying the Speaker's chair, his fairness, as well as his firmness, made him respected by all parties. Mr. Randall held a peculiar position in congress, unlike that of any other member. He was the unanimous choice of the voters of his district—at the last election there was no opposing candidate and only 112 scattering votes were cast against him—and although a life-long and earnest democrat he was retained in office by republican support. This peculiarity, of course, has been due to the devotion with which Mr. Randall sustained the Pennsylvania idea in economic legislation; and for the same reason he has been more or less in disrepute with his party, and lately has come into direct opposition. But although sent to congress as the representative of "protected" monopolies, and holding his seat by the grace of those interests, no shadow of discredit ever rested upon his character. He was one whose integrity was above suspicion and whose opinions were always respected as honestly conscientious. His death is a distinct loss to the country.

THE DAILY CITIZEN.

THIS SPRING, for the first time in the history of the country, probably, women acted as clerks and judges of elections. They served in this capacity at the municipal elections in several Kansas towns.

So FAR as the sheriff's office went in New York city, the corruption before the recent explosion was as bad as in the worst days of Tweedism. But there is one thing that public thieves can rely on as surely as death. Stealing, like every other evil, carries the seed of its own ruin. When the thieves feel secure, just then, dead sure, comes the earthquake.

AT THE same time that English syndicates are buying the great breweries and the Kentucky distilleries, temperance work in this country, certainly, was never more active. In Ireland, too, it is proceeding aggressively. A new temperance crusade there has begun under the auspices of the Catholic clergy. A circular letter intended to promote the cause, and signed by Archbishop Walsh and others, has been read in all the churches of Ireland.

INDICATIONS ARE that the young emperor of Germany will be as despotic as Frederick the Great. Already no one dares speak an opinion adverse to his for fear of his displeasure. No one of the political parties in Germany is strong enough to hold the balance of power alone, and so the young emperor has things mostly his own way. But sooner or later accumulated trust bursts like a storm all at once upon the heads of autocrats who refuse to hear it in the natural course.

THE MOST sensitive conscience in America has just been brought to light. The United States treasurer at Washington has received $1.18, which the sender wrote was principal and interest of a sum of money taken from the mint in Philadelphia in 1886. After all, the sender has not discharged his obligation to the government. Evidently he took one dollar, on which he calculates interest at 6 per cent. He has not compounded the unpaid interest, and he has not counted in the quarter year of 1890. He is short in his accounts with the government one cent, seven mills and a half.

IT is the misfortune of some people that they conceive it to be a newspaper's duty to be always criticising and picking flaws. If a newspaper should follow this mistaken idea it would come to be regarded as little better than a public scold. Persistent running down and belittling of a town and its people is harmful, in that it gives outsiders a poor impression of the place and tends to foster a lack of self-respect among its citizens. How long would a business concern prosper if each member of the firm went about declaring that his partners were ignorant and unreliable and were driving away trade? The town or city that enjoys a healthy growth, prosperity, contentment and happiness attains it by everybody taking hold with a "vill and talking for the place they live in as well as working for it.

THE most remarkable and distinctly primitive white men to be found within the borders of the United States to-day are the mountaineers of the great Appalachian range extending from the southern boundary of Pennsylvania, through West Virginia, eastern Kentucky, western North Carolina, east Tennessee and into northwestern Georgia and northern Alabama.

The politics of many of these mountain men so far as they can decide it themselves, is quite as vague and uncertain as the tenets of their religious belief; but as a class they did not remain in doubt when the war broke out. Andrew Jackson, a splendid type of their own race, was and is their political saint, and like him they came to look with an idolatrous love on the flag of the Union. To them the war did not involve the right of secession, of which they knew nothing, nor the freedom of the slave, for which they cared less; it was simply a struggle between the old flag and a new one, and their allegiance at that trying time was as unwavering as was their blind faith in ultimate success.

FOR MORE than a quarter of a century Samuel J. Randall has occupied a seat in congress as a representative from the State of Pennsylvania. And not only in length of service, but in distinguished ability, his career has been unblemished. During the greater part of this time he has held without dispute the position of leader of his party in the house, in which his force of character and his exceptional parliamentary knowledge and skill rendered him peculiarly successful. When occupying the Speaker's chair, his fairness, as well as his firmness, made him respected by all parties. Mr. Randall held a peculiar position in congress, unlike that of any other member. He was the unanimous choice of the voters of his district—at the last election there was no opposing candidate and only 112 scattering votes were cast against him—and although a life-long and earnest democrat he was retained in office by republican support. This peculiarity, of course, has been due to the devotion with which Mr. Randall sustained the Pennsylvania idea in economic legislation; and for the same reason he has been more or less in disrepute with his party, and lately has come into direct opposition. But although sent to congress as the representative of "protected" monopolies, and holding his seat by the grace of those interests, no shadow of discredit ever rested upon his character. He was one whose integrity was above suspicion and whose opinions were always respected as honestly conscientious. His death is a distinct loss to the country.

FOR MORE than a quarter of a century Samuel J. Randall has occupied a seat in congress as a representative from the State of Pennsylvania. And not only in length of service, but in distinguished ability, his career has been unblemished. During the greater part of this time he has held without dispute the position of leader of his party in the house, in which his force of character and his exceptional parliamentary knowledge and skill rendered him peculiarly successful. When occupying the Speaker's chair, his fairness, as well as his firmness, made him respected by all parties. Mr. Randall held a peculiar position in congress, unlike that of any other member. He was the unanimous choice of the voters of his district—at the last election there was no opposing candidate and only 112 scattering votes were cast against him—and although a life-long and earnest democrat he was retained in office by republican support. This peculiarity, of course, has been due to the devotion with which Mr. Randall sustained the Pennsylvania idea in economic legislation; and for the same reason he has been more or less in disrepute with his party, and lately has come into direct opposition. But although sent to congress as the representative of "protected" monopolies, and holding his seat by the grace of those interests, no shadow of discredit ever rested upon his character. He was one whose integrity was above suspicion and whose opinions were always respected as honestly conscientious. His death is a distinct loss to the country.

FOR MORE than a quarter of a century Samuel J. Randall has occupied a seat in congress as a representative from the State of Pennsylvania. And not only in length of service, but in distinguished ability, his career has been unblemished. During the greater part of this time he has held without dispute the position of leader of his party in the house, in which his force of character and his exceptional parliamentary knowledge and skill rendered him peculiarly successful. When occupying the Speaker's chair, his fairness, as well as his firmness, made him respected by all parties. Mr. Randall held a peculiar position in congress, unlike that of any other member. He was the unanimous choice of the voters of his district—at the last election there was no opposing candidate and only 112 scattering votes were cast against him—and although a life-long and earnest democrat he was retained in office by republican support. This peculiarity, of course, has been due to the devotion with which Mr. Randall sustained the Pennsylvania idea in economic legislation; and for the same reason he has been more or less in disrepute with his party, and lately has come into direct opposition. But although sent to congress as the representative of "protected" monopolies, and holding his seat by the grace of those interests, no shadow of discredit ever rested upon his character. He was one whose integrity was above suspicion and whose opinions were always respected as honestly conscientious. His death is a distinct loss to the country.

FOR MORE than a quarter of a century Samuel J. Randall has occupied a seat in congress as a representative from the State of Pennsylvania. And not only in length of service, but in distinguished ability, his career has been unblemished. During the greater part of this time he has held without dispute the position of leader of his party in the house, in which his force of character and his exceptional parliamentary knowledge and skill rendered him peculiarly successful. When occupying the Speaker's chair, his fairness, as well as his firmness, made him respected by all parties. Mr. Randall held a peculiar position in congress, unlike that of any other member. He was the unanimous choice of the voters of his district—at the last election there was no opposing candidate and only 112 scattering votes were cast against him—and although a life-long and earnest democrat he was retained in office by republican support. This peculiarity, of course, has been due to the devotion with which Mr. Randall sustained the Pennsylvania idea in economic legislation; and for the same reason he has been more or less in disrepute with his party, and lately has come into direct opposition. But although sent to congress as the representative of "protected" monopolies, and holding his seat by the grace of those interests, no shadow of discredit ever rested upon his character. He was one whose integrity was above suspicion and whose opinions were always respected as honestly conscientious. His death is a distinct loss to the country.

FOR MORE than a quarter of a century Samuel J. Randall has occupied a seat in congress as a representative from the State of Pennsylvania. And not only in length of service, but in distinguished ability, his career has been unblemished. During the greater part of this time he has held without dispute the position of leader of his party in the house, in which his force of character and his exceptional parliamentary knowledge and skill rendered him peculiarly successful. When occupying the Speaker's chair, his fairness, as well as his firmness, made him respected by all parties. Mr. Randall held a peculiar position in congress, unlike that of any other member. He was the unanimous choice of the voters of his district—at the last election there was no opposing candidate and only 112 scattering votes were cast against him—and although a life-long and earnest democrat he was retained in office by republican support. This peculiarity, of course, has been due to the devotion with which Mr. Randall sustained the Pennsylvania idea in economic legislation; and for the same reason he has been more or less in disrepute with his party, and lately has come into direct opposition. But although sent to congress as the representative of "protected" monopolies, and holding his seat by the grace of those interests, no shadow of discredit ever rested upon his character. He was one whose integrity was above suspicion and whose opinions were always respected as honestly conscientious. His death is a distinct loss to the country.

ONLY A RABBIT'S FOOT

WAS ALL THAT WAS LEFT IN THE MONEY BAG.

DR. HILLIARD'S THEORY ABOUT THE MURDER.

The Little Property Entailed—The Woman Had Money About Her—Deputy Jones Promises Rich Developments.

"It was the money supposed to be on her person, and not the property that would fall to those interested that caused the murder."

That was the remark of Coroner Hilliard yesterday, upon being asked his theory of the murder of Harriet Williams which occurred Saturday night.

"The property," he continued, "was entailed, and did not belong wholly to Harriet. In case of her death, there would be six heirs, as near as I can find out, who would claim a share of the property. Then the land is not very valuable, and I suppose is worth no more than $100 an acre, or $300 for the entire tract. Taking this into consideration it would not seem to be of any great benefit to anyone of the heirs as far as the property is concerned.

"I think this is the whole secret of the murder," said the coroner, as he produced a bag or pocket made of bed ticking. "I found this tied around her body beneath her underclothes, and it was torn and bloody as you see it now. See those bloody finger prints."

The bag was about nine inches long and six broad. There was a rent running from one end to the other, and bloody marks could be seen, showing how the bag was grasped to tear it open. While Dr. Hilliard had the bag in his hand he felt something in one corner, and upon reaching in found a rabbit's foot wrapped up in a piece of cloth.

"The murdered woman had given out to her neighbors," he continued, "that she possessed a bank account, but as no account can be found in town I think she must have done this in order to keep any one from suspecting her of having any money about the house. She was known to be a hard working, thrifty woman, and I have no doubt but that she had saved $100 or $125 from her wages, which she carefully concealed on her person. She tried to keep this secret, but evidently some one had found where she kept this money and committed the crime to obtain possession of it.

"Another thing was that this was probably the last Saturday night she would spend at her home for several months. She was coming to town the following Monday to go to work for a family here for the summer. As to the guilt of the man now under arrest, I think he could not have been the one who did the work."

Deputy Sheriff Jones, who has the case in charge, refused to talk when seen but promised some startling developments when the coroner's jury met on Saturday. As he has been instrumental in both of the arrests it is only natural to suppose that his promised startling developments relate to the suspected parties.

For the Criminal Court. The following is a list of the jurors appointed for the next term of the criminal court, which convenes Monday, April 28: E. R. Glenn, J. M. Lorick, Jno. M. Davidson, J. A. Brookshire, A. Garrett, A. Rankin, Asheville; S. S. Norman, T. C. Reeves, Lower Hoinny; P. P. Morgan, J. H. Morgan, L. Y. Israel, Upper Hoinny; J. H. Miller, W. L. Robertson, W. E. Ponder, G. F. Gillespie, Wilson Brown, Jr., L. P. Shook, R. H. Hayes, L. D. Felmore, Sol. Hampton, Leicester; D. M. Wells, R. C. Wells, N. Parham, Sandy Mush; C. W. Beale, Limestone; R. C. Clayton, Fairview; J. N. Hughey, Swannanoa; J. G. Chambers, A. G. Moss, S. M. Mondav, Reems Creek; C. F. Anderson, W. K. Chambers, R. H. Cole, Flat Creek; R. F. Buckner, Ivy; J. M. Watkins, Black Mountain; W. H. Hunter, French Broad.

In Honor of John S. Rice. The spring on Captain W. E. Brees' land at Biltmore has been undergoing a number of improvements during the past few weeks and on Saturday, April 26, it will be formally dedicated to the use of the public. It will be known as Rice's Spring, in honor of John S. Rice, one of the oldest residents of Western North Carolina.

The spring is one of the historical spots around Asheville and the water is pure, clear and sparkling. With the tasty appearance it will present, it will be a place of more than ordinary interest to visitors.

The Mayor's Court. Fannie Harden was before the Mayor's court this morning. The charge entered up against her was hitting Rufus Carpenter in the head with a brick. The evidence showed that Fannie was on her own premises and that she was only partially to blame. She was dismissed upon the payment of costs.

Geo. Whitehead was to have been tried but asked for an adjournment. He got it and will be in jail until to-morrow morning.

An entertainment will be given by the children at North Asheville Methodist church to-morrow night. The program will consist of music and recitations. Everybody is invited. Admission free.

NORTH CAROLINA NOTES.

The stand pipe of the Goldsboro water works is 110 feet high.

The supreme court will soon finish all the regular call of cases.

Mr. William Shaw, a respected resident of Washington, passed away at the age of sixty-four.

H. S. Harrison, of Modac, has recently purchased some valuable horses and will begin stock farming.

The hail stone as large as a hen egg has been heard from again. This time Pilot Mountain claims it.

William Henry Harrison, a nephew of the figure head at Washington, has charge of the C. C. C. railroad in this State.

General Russell A. Alger, the Michigan millionaire, is said to be desirous of placing some of his money in North Carolina dirt.

Cotton planting has begun at Scotland Neck, and it is believed that there will be a decrease of acreage of from 10 to 15 per cent.

The work of enlarging the museum at Raleigh has begun. Incidentally it might be mentioned that 8,000 people visit the place annually.

William Barnhardt died at his home near Charlotte at 5 o'clock on Saturday night and at 7 on Sunday morning his father passed away.

George A. P. Johnson, a native of the Congo Free State, Africa, has been lecturing to the colored people in the eastern part of the State.

The good prices realized from last year's tobacco crop has left the farmers of Surry in a better condition than they have ever known before.

Two colored women had a glorious fight on a farm about four miles from Scotland Neck, and one of them was dangerously cut with a razor.

Charlotte claims that the fireworks that will be used in that city during the celebration on May 20 will be the finest ever seen in the Old North State.

The Farmers' Alliance of Washington county will have a picnic on July 3, and the best speakers from different parts of the State will be invited to attend.

The statement that Collector Eaves has been indicted in the district court of Statesville is denied, although it is said an indictment has been officially spoken of.

The department of agriculture is receiving applications from parties calling attention to violations of the State law where parties erect dams without supplying fishways.

Three military companies are already entered for the competitive drill at Charlotte on May 20. They are: Monroe Light Infantry, Cabarrus Black Boys and the Hornet's Nest Riflemen.

The appointment of Thomas P. Derieux to be assistant district attorney for the Raleigh district is said to be purely honorary. The office was abolished during Cleveland's term.

The Rev. H. W. Battle, of New Bern, is very prominently mentioned in connection with the presidency of the Baptist State Female University. The president will be chosen on the 21st inst.

Charles Maynor, a 53 year old boy, and gay and glib, Eliza J. Bowers, aged 48, eloped from a town near Raleigh, went to the capital and were married. Both are well known and respected people.

The greatest revival of religion ever held in Hyde county is now in progress. Rev. Mr. Lee is conducting it. Many of the oldest and most prominent men in the county have made a profession of religion.