FIRE COMES AGAIN!

The Home of Colonel Harry Bass Catches It.

Or Rather the Fire Catches the Home in Big Shape.

THE LOSS IS NOT YET ESTIMATED
People Who Come and Go—Brief Brevities of Interest to All Readers of The Globe.

Last night about 8:15 the alarm went in to central station to announce that the home of Colonel Harry Bass, by reason of a defective flue was on fire.

The fire ladders came and the neighbors came and water was squirted and the house, after being pretty thoroughly drenched and the insides—stairways and all—being torn out, the fire was subdued. All the goods were carried out—but in such confusion, as is always the case—much damage was done.

The fact that Mr. Bass has three sick children, and that they had to be removed, caused much alarm among his friends. But THE GLOBE is very happy to state that the sick ones are doing well and seem to have suffered but little inconvenience.

Mr. and Mrs. Bass are domiciled at the home of Col. Dr. Michaels, where they will remain until a thaw comes.

It was all a lucky business, in that they all were rescued and are still happy.

The house and furniture was insured and the loss will be somewhere between $1,250 and $1,500.

IT ALMOST BURSTED!

The Stove at Bailey's Home Escapes Bursting,

But Kerosene Oil Just About Does the Business.

THE GAY AND FESTIVE KID DID IT
Luckily Some One Was There and Saved a Fire Which Would Have Been Bad.

While the hungry flames were doing their wild and wicked work in the home of Mr. H. J. Bass, an exciting scene, which came near ending in a big blow up, was being enacted at the home of Mr. R. W. Bailey, on East Main street.

Mr. and Mrs. Bailey had gone out to visit a sick neighbor, leaving their 3-year-old son to spend the evening at home with his grandfather.

Bailey junior, who had watched with interest and admiration the process of kindling wood fires by the kerosene expedient, seized this opportunity to try his skill and have some fun. Accordingly, he made his way to the kitchen where the can of oil was kept, locked the door securely and put the key in his pocket to guard interruption, then poured from the can a quart or so of oil in a tin basin and turned it on the blazing fire.

The flames, thus encouraged, leaped to the ceiling, the room in an instant was filled with the red blaze, and in another moment the building would have been on fire.

The child, affrighted, made for the door, but in his excitement could not unlock it and found himself a prisoner.

His screams brought his grandfather to the rescue, who after much trouble succeeded in breaking the door and liberating the youthful adventurer whose enterprise had ended so disastrously.

The moral is plain. Kids should not monkey with the kerosene can while the fire is in motion.
