BRANDRETH'S PILLS.

Anacurim, or Enlargement of the Heart, Arteries, Piles, &c. &c.

USE the pills two or three times a week in doses sufficient to purge freely; and when a purgation comes on, a fearless use of the pills must be made; down with six or eight, and in a little while repeat the dose; do this until the bowels are strongly purged. This effected, the danger is over for that attack. Angina pectoris and stone in the gall-bladder are treated in the same manner, and although considered incurable by the medical profession, are cured by the use of Brandreth's Pills. In severe attacks the doses must be full; six or eight for a few nights together will cure the worst cases. Whenever this disease comes on in the treatment of other diseases, it is a good sign; use nothing but the pills, and as an outward application, cold cream or lard, and make frequent use of cold water locally. Where there have been pectoral affections, as asthma, consumption, &c., perseverance will be required with the pills to effect a permanent cure. But any other course will assuredly bring on the pectoral affection.

In cases of Debility, Weakness, Wastings, Declines, or Consumption approaching, it will be necessary to commence with small doses. Begin with one pill going to bed; next night two pills; do this alternately for three or four days, or longer; if no alteration takes place, then increase a pill each night until five or six pills are used, then decrease by one pill, down to one pill. Should any feverish symptoms arise, then take strong doses until the fever is reduced. When this is done, the patient may drop down to such doses as their own judgment shall determine; being careful to keep the drain upon the impure humors; as these are removed, so will be their advancement to sound health.
