WHEELS TURNING MERRILY

Strike Threats Grow Remote With 65 Per Cent Back At Work

There are about 2,000 employees back to work in local cotton mills at the end of the first full week of operation since the strike.

This is some 65 per cent of the total number that was employed when the strike was called by the United Textile Workers. At the time there were about 3,000 on the payrolls of local cotton mills.

Those back at work in round numbers are:

Roanoke Mills Company 1,000
Rosemary Manufacturing Co. 600
Patterson Mills Company 400

The mills are running on one full shift, cutting down from two shifts due to lack of orders and cancellations of orders which came during the strike period.

Special crews are working on sample goods in order to make up for time lost by salesmen who have not been able to get the new line of samples, while competing mills were running during the strike.

Rosemary Mfg., Co. opened with about three hundred working and during ten days operation have increased the number to double that amount. Roanoke and Patterson opened a week ago with about 1,000, had 1,200 working Monday of this week and 1,400 today.

All charges of discrimination against union members of the UTW for last week were dropped and the mills opened Monday with a clean slate.

The complaints were made before the Labor Relations Board. How many of these alleged discriminations were from Roanoke, Patterson and Rosemary were not divulged.

UTW delegations which called on the mill officials this week were told that workers were being put back to work as quickly as
