FRIDAY, JUNE 18, 1920.

Since when did the historians give Mecklenburg county credit for being the birthplace of Andrew Jackson? The Charlotte Observer, after Morrison is elected Governor of the State, is advised to refresh its historical knowledge. Jackson was born in the Waxhaws community, a part of Union county.

It might be of interest to Morrison's opponents to know that the Charlotte Observer has given Mr. Gardner's public utterances more space than any other paper in North Carolina, with the possible exception of the Shelby Star, published in Mr. Gardner's home county. Union county folks, who believe in sticking by the "home man" should not be too hasty in criticizing The Observer for doing that very same thing.

Though he remained quiet as a clam while his brother was in the race for Governor, Henry A. Page, the food administrator during the war, is now loudly singing the praises of Lt. Governor O. Max Gardner, and in a speech at Aberdeen last night, he attacked Cameron Morrison, charging him with being nothing but a machine politician. Zeb Green says that Henry was the millstone around Bob's campaign, so no other comment is necessary.

The charge that William G. McAdoo, the probable Democratic nominee for president, is a Catholic, is branded as false by the Concord Tribune. "We are not wise enough to know just what effect his religious beliefs would have on the election, even if Mr. McAdoo were a Catholic," the Concord paper says, "but since these reports are being spread we feel that in justice to the man we should state that he is an Episcopalian, and the Republicans will have to look somewhere else for their arguments."

JUDGE STACEY

Judge Stacey of Wilmington and Judge Long of Statesville will run in the next primary for the Supreme court judgeship. In the first primary Judge Adams was naturally the greatest favorite in this county, but now that Judge Hoke has been selected for one of the places, and the other favorites from the second race, the choice lies between Judges Long and Stacey. Judge Long is an old man and Judge Stacey is a young man. Both are at present on the Superior court bench. Judge Stacey is a son of Rev. Mr. Stacey of the Methodist conference who served several pastorates in this county, and is one of the most able young men of the State, remarkably well poised, sound in judgment and accomplished in learning, and one whose unselfish devotion to public service has won the admiration of the State. He comes of a family of great talent each one of whom has given evidence of marked intellectual accomplishment. One of his brothers was dean of the State University and would undoubtedly have been elected its president to succeed Dr. Graham, had he not been taken off as the former was, by the scourge of flu. It is likely that Judge Stacey will receive a very large vote in this county.

THE GOVERNOR'S GHOST.

In his state papers, Governor Bickett has always demonstrated literary attainments bordering excellence, but few of his proclamations can favorably compare with his recent one urging ex-service men to have their insurance re-instated before the expiration date on July 1. In expressive language, he asks:

"Soldiers, do you believe in ghosts? In the daytime we hear their whisperings, and at night their shivering figures drive slumber from our eyelids. There are ghosts of evil deeds; ghosts of sudden passion; ghosts of dead loves and neglected friendships, but the one that haunts us most is the ghost of a lost opportunity.

"Many North Carolina soldiers are in danger of hearing this ghost while around their bedsides in their reclining years. Soldiers, your government is holding out to you a wonderful opportunity. It is beseeching you to take advantage of the best and cheapest insurance this world has ever known.

"Think of the little woman who will some day walk by your side; think of the children who will someday lip your name; think of your own old age when your strength will waste away and the grasshopper shall become a burden, and thinking of these things, make haste to secure the blessings of this golden opportunity. This is a last chance. On July 1 the books will be closed, and unless you act between now and then your chance will be lost forever.

"Forget everything else. Quit everything else until you have made sure that your insurance policy is in full force. No matter how long you have allowed it to lapse, you can get reinstated if you will act at once. I call on all relatives of soldiers, on all friends of soldiers, on all public spirited women to see to it today that not a single soldier falls to take advantage of this great beneficence. Soldiers, a marvelous opportunity is knocking loudly at your door. In God's name rush out and seize it."

The high plane on which Mr. Morrison is conducting his campaign is commendable. Instead of indulging in abuse and personalities, he is making sound Democratic speeches, defending Democratic administrations, both state and national, and is winning friends for the party. His speech at Concord Wednesday night was a typical utterance of this kind. Not once, according to newspaper accounts, did he mention his opponent's name, but devoted himself to an outline of the ringing achievements of his party. No man should sacrifice party harmony for personal ambition, and it is a pleasure to the supporters of Cameron Morrison to know that he is too big to put self above party.

Alfred A. Thompson, president of the Raleigh Cotton Mills, died at his home in Raleigh Saturday morning of acute indigestion. He was widely known over the State.
