Prosperity Waits on Railroad Legislation.

In spite of a half-year's record, which in most lines of business and in the wholesale market has been one of the best in years, it is thought advisable to continue the current legislation. Indeed, such a measure is urged by the people of the country who wish to see business improve and their wealth increase.

The question of the railroad monopoly is one in which commercial activities will be curtailed and manufacturing enterprises will be forced to adhere to a depressed condition. There is no disposition to enter into large enterprises by any of the excursionists. Business men are inclined to exercise caution in extending accommodation to manufacturers, even though they are running their full campaigns with such reservedness.

The railroad question, as it is, and one in which commercial activities will be curtailed and manufacturing enterprises will be forced to adhere to a depressed condition. There is no disposition to enter into large enterprises by any of the excursionists. Business men are inclined to exercise caution in extending accommodation to manufacturers, even though they are running their full campaigns with such reservedness.

The question that deserves to be asked is why this is the case. The public is inclined to exercise caution in extending accommodation to manufacturers, even though they are running their full campaigns with such reservedness.
