friends came with me."

finally Nancy spoke:

Nancy, sotto voice:

to come at once?'

where he is.

it was raining.

else to do.

if you choose.'

quite satisfied if either of his best

"It's simply outrageous," I said.

Nancy said afterwards that I spoke in a villain-do-your-worst manner.

and that my whole attitude was melodramatic. As I had a desperate feeling that matters were approaching a crisis and that soon I should know my fate, I suppose I looked as tragic as I felt. So we stared at one another in eloquent silence, until

Two energetic girls and one disapproving man! What could be do? In an hour we were on the train for Boston, and while the girls laughed and chatted gaily I was filled with anxiety

as to ways and means. For while

Nancy might have a comfortable balance at the bank, our supply of ready cash was limited, and cash you must have when traveling. As we pulled out of New York I managed to say to

"How about Casey and his message

"Oh," she airily replied, "he can wait. He's quite safe and harmless

Now, I felt by no means so sure of this, for the wrath of Casey hung

over me like a cloud, and I amused myself working out different schemes

of revenge that I should practice were

I in his place, until the girls would have no more of it, and commanded a

CHAPTER X.

House that I thought I caught a fleeting glimpse of Randy. I was not steered my way toward him he was gone. I questioned the clerk at the desk. Yes, Mr. Ferguesson had been stopping there for a day or so, but was out just now. Would I leave a message? No, he didn't know when

Mr. Ferguesson would be back, nor where he went; he supposed, however, it was the theatre, since the Lady! Ye gods and little fishes!

I thought of Julie Schuyler, with her auburn hair and imperious temperament, and felt thankful she was safe

The clerk volunteered the informa tion that they would probably be home before midnight, and considered the incident closed. I wrote a note to Randy, requesting him to let me come at once to his room and talk things over. Then I waited with

there did not seem to be anything

And Julie Schuyler waited also,

with set face and a sparkle in her eyes that made me thankful I was not in Ferguesson's shoes. I had not meant to tell her about the lady, nor pered it to Nancy, however, and she

with a burst of virtuous indignation

"undeceive the poor dear," and sug-

She would wait, she said, and see moments passed leaden-footed perhaps to her, but with surprising

swiftness to me, for I was busy revolving plans for the assistance of

out of trouble, and though no

Ferguesson. We always helped each doubt he was much in fault I could not resist a feeling of sympathy for him and a desire to do what I could to smooth matters over, as I should have wished him to do for me had the cases been reversed. Moreover, I had a great curiosity to see the lady. So we all sat in the lobby, and I pretended to read the papers, while the girls talked in whispers, which I judged were in the main uncomplimentary to my sex in general and to mation. Julie Schuyler had risen and was staring at the door leading into the street as though she had

"Mr. Starr!" she exclaimed. "I

Nor would anything convince her

To be Continued.

A Last Appearance.

current issue of an illustrated magazine, and we came upon an illustrated joke. A guard opens the door of a railway carriage, in which a young couple are seated, and says, "Engaged." The man replies that they were married that morning. We will mediately had a conviction that we had seen that joke before; it was accompanied by the feeling that we

San Francisco Recovers.

Financially and commercially the city is now very close to the normal

basis, and it is evident that population and business are having a regular normal increase. Doubtless our population is less than it would have been at this time had we met with no disaster, but it is certainly larger

the whole metropolitan area which would be included in a "Greater San growth has been checked in the least.

Reflections of a Bachelor.

The way for a woman to like eat-

A man can always learn his enemies in a short while, but not his

Most men can preach themselves

The more contempt we think we

London was somewhat shocked and amused the other day to dis-

have for money the more respect we

out of breath without ever thinking

-San Francisco Chronicle.

the complexion.

-New York Press.

than ever before, and if we take in

not attempt to explain it, but we im-

We were turning the pages of the

All at once I heard a sharp excla-

Ferguesson in particular.

saw him quite distinctly."

seen a ghost.

to the contrary.

It was in the lobby of the Fremont

different topic of conversation.

"We'll all go to Boston."

'I won't go one step. Take Casey

Ram's Horn. When you abuse your opposition a good deal, people know your opposition, suggests the Atchison Globe, is making headway.

Of course, you know just what you would do in another man's place, but why don't you do the right thing in your own place? demands the Chicago News.

Says the Chicago Record-Herald: The omnipresence and comparative novelty of the automobile seem to have crowded into the background a once well recognized criterion of social display and financial prosperitythe diamond. That standard is still serviceable, and if brought back into use would make the national recklessness in regard to the motor car less marked than it appears.

The major "pork" bill, observes the Chicago Record-Herald, violates every sound principle bearing on river, channel and harbor development. It is chaotic, wasteful, iniquitous. It makes appropriations for questionable projects which may never be completed; it disregards adverse reports of engineers in some cases-notably in connection with the lakes-to-the-Gulf deep water way folly; it throws prudence and economy to the winds.

Poor old Pericles! shouts the New York Tribune. Now he's accused of grafting by Dean Shailer Mathews, of the Divinity School of the University | myself many anxious hours? of Chicago. In a recent address Dean Mathews, commenting on art and idealism in ancient Athens, said: "Pericles was a grafter. He spent building the Parthenon. How much better for the world of the future that he did thus misuse the funds! Had he done what he professedhill. He was an idealist, and helped to build the culture of his city."

G. A. Flagg, a British pensioner, State Board of Agriculture to certify get money to operate his farm. The warn me what to expect. British government advances pension money in this way if proof is shown note to Julia Schuyler and got Mrs. thtat it is to be properly used. A Stubbs to mail it, for I did feel a litshilling for each day is retained out of the nervous about staying here alone the pension. Wilfred Powell, British after the queer things that have hapthe pension. Wilfred Powell, British pened. Something told me you would consul at Philadelphia, wrote Flagg be sure to come to me, and so I Nancy had but one reply, and it was whether it was intended to use the It's your turn to give an account of They don't want me." money for other purposes. The Brit- yourself, sir.' ish government looks well after the ting there in my old arm-chair, with interests of its pensioners.

Be careful what you say about Mr. Blank, for "slander" is now an of- ly upon the incarceration of Casey fense punishable as a crime in Vir- and what we might expect when he ginia and where one time he could only sue you for slander, now he can jail you for the said offense, warns had to get out and come to me, didn't the Washington Star. If you really you, dear? maliciously slander your neighbor we are free to state that we believe you ought to go to jail. If he is as human as most of us and you hannen to be of the masculine persuasion, however, Schuyler that she need not send me law or no law, he is very much more likely to register on your front teeth or some other convenient portion of your anatomy, his displeasure at what you have to say about him than to is aimed at malicious gossips, we see how it may do some good in extreme cases. It is terribly hard, if not morrow, but to-night." wholly impossible, however, to regulate old human nature by statute, or to legislate the man or woman who is innately mean into a condition approaching decency. That is a work for a higher power than the Legislature of the State of Virginia.

Science runs to simple remedies these days, boasts the New York the fountain of perpetual youth in a bottle of buttermilk all who will may be centenarians. To rid a community of yellow fever it is only necessary to kill enough mosquitoes, and in nine cases out of ten probably tuberculosis can be cured by the cheap open-air treatment. The discovery of a London doctor that swearing is helpful to health is in line with up-to-date medical methods. According to the theory of this eminent British practitioner, when a man is moved in anger he produces a surplus of physical energy and subjects his brain to a severe strain. By way of relief he may run or kick or jump up and down or 3mash things in general. But for a cheap and convenient remedy proanity is recommended on the ground that when greatly irritated even birds and animals express their emotions volubly and violently. It may gratify many to learn that for years they have been unconsciously protecting their health by indulgence in what moral teachers regard as a reprehens- hands, requested a receipt, and de- would delay me a few hours, that's been placarded with a bill inscribed. ible habit.

A BRIDE FOR CASEY.

BY ELLA MIDDLETON TYBOUT,

Author of "The Smuggler," "Poketown People," Etc.

ALL RIGHTS RESERVED.

Copyright, 1909, by J. R. LIPPINCOTT COMPANY, Philadelphia, Pa.

CHAPTER VIII. Continued.

"Mrs. Stubbs was very kind. Even after all the excitement and the po her. She had seen and talked to Miss up the telegram and considered it, we got here, you know, and said her diamond earrings were so big she never see you again. Send the might easily be murdered for them. | money." Oh, Billy, you don't think-'

No, I don't," I assured her. "Go haven't got it." on, Nancy.'

"She-Mrs. Stubbs went up to your rooms several times during the the house from the outside, I believe), she suggested I should try and get some sleep on her little sofa first night, but I didn't sleep any, for it was too short for me. So last night she told me to go up into Mr Starr's room and try to get some rest as it was certain he would not dare come back there. I went; but in the middle of the night I go frightened and crept very softly down to Mrs. Stubbs for protection. It seemed to me that it was more than I could stand to be there alone.'

So it was the rustle of Nancy's skirt that had waked me the previous night, and Nancy's comb I found upon Starr's dresser. Why had I not had the courage to go in and thereby save

"I slipped up here when you came down this morning,' resumed Nancy "for I thought it was Mr. Casey with Mrs. Stubbs, and I did not want to meet him here of course. I've been the money which he had collected with here ever since in your room, sitting which to wage war against Sparta in in your dear old chair, Billy, and wishing for you."

"Did Mrs. Stubbs tell you I was here and not Casey?'

"No," said Nancy; "she came up here and seemed to be rather uneasy waged more war with Sparta-the about something. Finally she said 'Acropolis would now be only a bare that if I would take her advice I would go home to Aunt Josephine, and have nothing more to do with you. She believed you were one and all bad lots and was actually afraid of any of you. The first thing we who bought a farm of 130 acres at knew both she and I would be disap-Dry Run, near Portsmouth, narrates pearing like Miss Harriet Schuyler, the Columbus (O.) Dispatch, asks the and how would I like that? For her part she was going to put on her bonnet and go home to her mother's as to its suitability for farming so house: I was welcome to stay here if that he can commute his pension to I liked, but she felt it her duty to

> "And yet you stayed?" "Of course I stayed. I wrote a walted for you. But where were an undeniable fact. information regarding the farm and you, and why did you take so long?

So I told Nancy all I knew. Sitmy arms around her, it did not seem half so dreadful as when I considered matters alone. I touched very light-was released. "Of course," said Nancy, "it was too bad to leave him there, but you Smith-" I began.

After a while the twilight stole upon us, and with the gathering darkness I became very thoughtful. "Nancy," I said, at last, "I'm going down to telephone to Miss Julie your address. And then we must go to the Little Church Around the Corner-you and I."

"To-morrow," suggested Nancy. "I'm so tired to-night."

But I thought of Aunt Josephine hale you to court. If the new statute and of Mrs. Grundy as typified by Mrs. Schuyler-Smythe and other irreproachable matrons.

"No, dearest," I insisted; "not to-"Men are so foolish," said Nancy and held it tentatively.

CHAPTER IX.

I got a note from Casey the next morning. It said briefly:

"Come immediately and without delay upon receipt of this."

I read it twice and tore it up. 'Are you going?" asked Nancy.

wife and I, at the very restaurant we and no quarter." World. Since Metchnikoff discovered had patronized for chocolate on the eventful evening of our first meeting, ler turned suddenly to me. and Nancy had insisted upon my tipping the waiter with reckless prodi- nounced. gality, to make up for the gratuity lacking on the previous occasion, she explained. When we returned to my read it aloud: rooms she wrote to Aunt Josephine, requesting to be furnished with what she lucidly described to me as her "things." It was with the greatest pleasure I mailed the letter, since it would prove to that austere matron that I was not "out of the question after all. Then the postman had come, bringing Casey's note.

"Are you going?" repeated Nancy. Before I had time to answer, there was a knock at the door and a diminutive boy thrust a telegram into my hands. I tore off the yellow envelope impatiently, with a premonition of something important or unpleasant. It read simply:

Come immediately to Fremont House, Boston, or telegraph me five hundred dol-lars without delay.

R. FERGUESSON. I handed the telegram to Nancy and hastened to open the door in response to another knock. This time it was a messenger boy, and he thrust a white envelope into my unwilling get him out any time, you know. It the Royal Academy exhibition had parted. Its contents were merely:

Come to me immediately and without delay upon receipt of this. I must see you at once. Important.

JULIE SCHUYLER. I passed this also over to Nancy, lice coming here, she let me stay with and waited for comment. She picked Schuyler about losing her bag before her white brow wrinkled anxiously. "If you go," she said, "I shall

"Dearest," I said apologetically, "I

"Oh," said Nancy, "but that doesn't matter. I have."

I took her hand in mine and looked evening, and said Mr. Casey was the at the new plain gold ring that only one of you who came home. glistened on her finger. I felt that After the police left (they watched right now I must explain to my wife that Mrs. William Leigh must look with more respect at five hundred dollars than Nancy Welles had done. in her parlor. I stayed there the It was evident she did not realize that her base of supplies was cut off. and I hated to tell her.

> "Don't you understand, Nancy." began, "that you father may not forgive you for running away with me? At any rate, he won't for a long time. And so, dear, you must be con- sure, however, and by the time I tent with what I can give you. I'm sorry it is so little-but we have each other.'

'You mean," said Nancy, "that Daddy would disinherit me because 1 married you?'

"He might. Your Aunt Josephine, you know.' "Bosh!" interrupted Nancy. "Aunt Josephine, indeed! Why Daddy lady had insisted upon a carriage, as couldn't stay angry with me-he just couldn't. I give him two weeks, and not a minute more." I was silent. Try as I might, I could not bring myself to disillusion her. Nancy, too, became suddenly in her room.

serious. "Billy," she said, "you don't understand about Daddy and me. I'm all he has and he loves me.' Very simply she spoke, and at that minute I felt a sympathy for my father-in-law, for I, too, loved Nancy.

'And don't you know, you dear what patience I could muster, since old silly," she continued, "that I have my own income from my mother? It is-oh, quite a lot-I don't know how much: but I'm twenty-one now, and it is mine to do with as I will. So there is nothing to worry about after all.'

"Nancy," I said, and spoke truly, indeed had I done so. I had whiswhile for your sake I am glad-for myself, I am sorry. It was you I wanted, not your money. And I ex-pect to work for my wife."

And I ex-had though it best to, as she said, "undeseive the poor deer," and such

"Don't talk any more about it," "Don't talk any more about it," gest immediate return to New York, she returned. "We have other and But Miss Schuyler declined to return. more important things to discuss. First, there's Mr. Casey. Shall you Randolph. So we all waited, and the go to him?"

"Liberty is sweet," I said, with meaning.

"If you go, they might keep you. I picked up the telegram and pon dered over it. "I wonder what Randy is doing in Boston," I speculated, "and why he wants five hundred dollars. I don't like the look of it." "Five hundred dollars, by all I turned to the third summons.

means," said Nancy, "but not you." 'Miss Julie Schuyler, alias Julia

I got no further, for there were hurried footsteps in the hall, a hasty tap at the door, quickly followed by another, louder and more imperative. Before I could cross the room in re sponse, the door opened, and the girl whose name was on my lips entered and closed it with purposeful manner. "You did not come to me," she said, "and so I came to you." "I had not time," I tried to justify myself; "I only just received your note.' Then Nancy came forward, and introduced the two girls, adding: "As you were such near neighbors, it is strange that you have not met before." Miss Schuyler took Nancy's hand

"Shall we be friends," she queried, 'in spite of our aunts?"

"By all means," agreed Nancy 'What was the trouble anyhow?"

should not grieve if we never saw it "My Aunt Caroline's fox terrier." again .- Black and White. said Julie Schuyler solemnly, "many years ago killed your Aunt Jose phine's blue-eyed Persian cat, which had trespassed into our back yard. We had breakfasted together, my Hence the feud-was to the knife

We all laughed, then Miss Schuy "I'm going to Boston," she at

"Randy?" I hazarded. She produced a telegram, and Circumstances over which I have no ontrol detain me in Boston. Write Fremont House.

"I'm not going to waste any time writing," she remarked. "I'm just going. I want you to go with me.' Having stated her wishes, she glanced at her watch.

"We have plenty of time to catch the through express," she said. Nancy and I looked at each other in horrified silence. Then I mustered friends in a lifetime. courage to protest.

"I really don't think it necessary -" I began, but she interrupted about practicing any of it. ruthlessly. "I've got to go. Can't you under stand how I feel about it? But I've seem to have for those who own it.

never been to Boston, and I've never traveled alone. Either you or Mr. Casey must go with me-I don't care "Casey!" I ejaculated. "If you won't go, he will. I can trait of Prime Minister Asquith at cover that the glass front of the porall. I'm sure Randolph would be "Votes For Women."

Smart Frills of Fashion

New York City.—One-piece dresses are much in demand just now. They are exceedingly charming for the tiny making that the busiest mother does

White lawn makes the one illustrated however, and the trimming is narrow frills. If something more elaborate either with a hem or an under-facing were wanted, the yoke could be em- and the tuck is laid on indicated lines. broidered by hand or cut from allover material, or the edges of the yoke and the edges of the sleeves could be scalloped. Indeed, there are various ways in which the dress can be treated, but the simple one illustrated is admirable for everyday wear, and is pretty and attractive.

The dress is cut in one piece and is seamed under the arms only. The yoke, however, is made in three pieces and with shoulder seams. The opening is cut under the box pleat at the centre-back and the dress is closed invisibly, while the yoke is buttoned over into place.

The quantity of material required for the medium size (four years) is three and one-half yards twenty-four, two and three-fourth yards twentyseven, one and seven-eighth yards thirty-two or one and three-fourth yards forty-four inches wide, with three yards of ruffling.

Styles of Early Thirties. Old-fashioned sashes in bright colored ribbons will be worn again on younger set.

Hints on Color. Blue suits the golden-haired girl, and makes her hair look more beaufolk; they mean so little labor for the tiful, but it seems to destroy all the Subject: A Lesson on Forgiveness, beauty of some gray-eyed maids, and not hesitate to undertake them; they it is most unbecoming to those of at are simple and childish and are alto- all sallow complexion. Now, gold in gether to be desired. This one is some form will conceal any little yelmade with a prettily shaped yoke and lowness of the skin, and white comis adapted to all seasonable materials. ing in contact with the face subdues the ill effects of blue and preserves its good ones. Only to the youngest and fairest do pink and white seem suitable, and yet white is much used by the old, and soft white laces are becoming even to grandmothers.

Straight Pleated Skirt. The simple skirt that is so devised as to give the effect of a tunic is one greatly liked this season, and this model obtains the result with the least possible labor. In reality the skirt is a straight one, and consequently it suits washable materials particularly well, yet the wide tuck at knee depth gives a suggestion of the favorite tunic and is essentially smart. Embroidered muslin is the material illustrated, but the skirt will be found available for the foulards and pongees and for all the thin materials of the season. It would be lovely made from marquisette or from cotton voile; it makes an excellent model for foulard and all the muslins are just as well adapted to it as the one illustrated. The skirt is made in one piece. It can be finished at the lower edge The quantity of material required

the simpler lingerie dresses. Tied in for the medium size is eight and onea large butterfly bow at the centre half yards twenty-four or twentyback, they recall the styles of the seven, seven yards thirty-two, or five early thirties, when bob curls and and five-eighth yards forty-four shoulder tippets were worn, too. This inches wide. Width of skirt at lower is another indication that the present | edge is four and one-eighth yards, or fashions cater primarily to the two yards when pleats are pressed flat.

Work Apron-The work apron that includes generous pockets is the prac- with three-quarter or long sleeves. tical one, and this model, in addition Semi-princesse gowns are much in to that advantage, is shapely and be- demand and are always pretty and coming at the same time that it is attractive. This one includes a novel eminently useful. In the illustration, flat bertha and sleeves that are among it is made from an inexpensive the newest and prettiest. Flowered printed wash fabric and the edges organdie is the material ilustrated, are piped, but linen and gingham, and it is trimmed with lace banding chambray, and, indeed, almost any and made with yoke of net, but every simple washable material is quite ap- seasonable material that can be made propriate. The straps are crossed at full is appropriate, and the list inthe back and buttoned into place at cludes silks and light weight wools the shoulders. as well as cottons.

The Popular Sash.

Sashes are seen on almost every Francisco," it is improbable that ing anything is to hear it is good for hem of the skirt.

> New Model Sleeves. Sleeves of the new models of coat suit.

Marquise Parasols. We are to use the little Chantilly tresses used to screen their faces.

Tricot Cloth Corsets.

The desire of women for comfortatostume, whether to add the universal ble corsets, even though they are touch of black or to complete the long, has brought about the use of color scheme. On the cuirass frocks tricot cloth in their making. This is they are worn between hips and a little stronger than the elastic web- 2. He requires inward and real knees, where the pleated skirt is bing, which was not firm enough to observance of the day, rather than they are worn between hips and a little stronger than the elastic webjoined to the fitted bodice. Again maintain the figure in its proper lines. on frocks with a slightly high waist This new cloth is easy over the body, at the back the sash is knotted quite not pressing it down as coutil does. a few inches above the normal waist If one's hips cannot stand the presline, and the long ends hang to the sure of bones, gusset of the webbing is inserted.

> Frock Adornment. Ornaments, tassels, balls and blouses and dresses show fulness at fringe, echoing crystal and bead efthe elbow. Ruffles of pleated net, fects, play a part in evening frock batiste, plain or lace edges and at- adornment, and draperies on the wing tached to a heading of insertion, may sleeve order, the points often finished be bought by the yard and made up with tassels, often mitigate the seinto side frills for the shirtwaist or verity of the line in close-fitting sleeves.

Coarse Net Cloth. Heavy linen is used with coarse lace marquise parasols, the doll-like net, cloth and silk, while linen crash affairs with which our pretty ances- often serves as a foundation for embroidered yokes, guimpes and vests.

The Sunday = School

INTERNATIONAL LESSON COM-MENTS FOR JULY 31.

Matt. 18:21-35-Commit Verses 21, 22.

GOLDEN TEXT.—"If you forgive men their trespasses, your heavenly, Father will also forgive you." Math.

TIME .- Autumn, A. D. 29

Place.—Autumn, A. D. 29
Place.—Capernaum.
EXPOSITION.—I. Seeking Forgiveness for Self, 21-27. Peter's question is exceedingly important and practical. It is a question with which we are all confronted experimentally.
We all have those whom we forgive, and severally have forgiven them beand scarcely have forgiven them be fore they offend again. How long shall they be permitted to keep this up? Peter suggested seven times as a possible outside limit. That is far higher than most of us go, but Jesus multiplied Peter's high figures by, seventy, and said there is where you ought to go, "seventy times seven." Here we have the perfect number, multiplied by the number of completeness, multiplied again by the perfect number. In other words. perfect number. In other words, never cease forgiving. Let your pa-tience be inexhaustible and your forgiving love infinite. At the first glance it seems a hard saying, but as we continue to look at it, we see it as a most sweet and gentle saying; for if He bids us to do this to others, He certainly will Himself do it to us. The parable that follows emphasizes this gracious truth. I need, then, never fear again to go to Him, saying, "Forgive me," no matter how often or how seriously I have sinned. If my heart hesitates, I hear Him whispering, "Until seventy times whispering, "Until seventy seven" (Col. 3:13; Eph. 4:32; Reckoning a talent roughly at $1200, the king's debtor was twelve million dollars in debt. And this is a picture of each of us. We are hopeles ly in debt to God and we have nought to pay (Lu. 7:42; Ps. 130:3; Ez. 9:6; Ps. 40:12). It is not before an ab stract law, but before a person, that we are guilty (Ps. 51:4). If we could only be brought to fully realize how great our unpaid debt is that is freely forgiven us, we would surely not find it hard to forgive others. The debtor was "brought" to the king. We as sinners do not come into God's presence of our own accord, the Spirit brings us there (Jno. 16:7-9). Verse 25 pictures God's dealings with us on the ground of law (Gal. 3:10). But it is only to bring us to sue for mercy and grace (Rom. 3:19-24; Gal. 3:22-24). The demand of just payment brought this debtor down upon his knees, and that is where the full demand of law brings each of us if we are wise. And yet this debtor fancied he could ultimately pay his debts if he only had This is true to human experi-When first awakened to a ence. sense of our sins, we still fancy we can pay some time. We think we can atone for past sins by future good works. It is only after awhile that it fully dawns upon us that we can do nothing at all, that salvation must be not only partly but wholly of grace (Eph. 2:8, 9). In verse 27 we have God dealing in grace. Now it is all grace, just as it was before all law. "The Lord" does not extend the time of paying the debt, but fully remits it. God never mixes law and grace (Gal. 5:2-4; Gal. 3:10; Rom. 3:28; The basis of grace is nothing in us, but something in God, His own which God deals in grace is in us, viz., that we acknowledge our hopeindebtedness and sue for mercy (cf. Lu. 18:13, 14; Rom. 10:12, 13). II. Refusing Forgiveness to Another, 28-35. The one who had just been forgiven a twelve-million dollar debt went right out and tried to violently exact a debt of seventeen dol-lars from another. That seems in-credible, but it is a scene enacted every day, and by some of the readers of these lines. God has forgiven you debts whose greatness defies compu tation, and you go out and exact the paltry debts your fellow-men owe How many are harboring grudges over some petty slight or of-fence! We should all meditate long and deeply over this parable. His debtor acted precisely toward him as he had acted towards his own creditor, but he remembered nothing and has no mercy. This is true to life. Others sue us for mercy as we have made our suit to God, but we have no mercy for them. "Pay the debt" is our demand. The outcome is startling, "His Lord called him." If we will not listen to the cry of our debtors, then we shall hear the voice of our creditor. God freely offers for giveness for all our $12,000,000 in-debtedness, but if we truly accept it we will prove it by freely forgiving others. If we do not forgive others it proves that we have despised the proffered mercy of God. We are now back on the law basis, and we shall be delivered to the tormentors till we pay "all that is due." That we can never do, so our torment will be ever-There is no mercy for the lasting. man who shows by refusing mercy to others, he has despised it for himself (Jas. 2:73). The only way to learn to be merciful is by believing in the mercy of God revealed in Christ toward us (1 Jno. 4:19, R. V.). Jesus points P's own parable, there can be no mistaking its meaning (see verse 35). There is then no hope for many a professed Christian, unless they repent of their attitude towards some w'.o have wronged them. The gate to hell here pointed out is a wide one,

and many go in thereat. Jesus and the Day of Rest.

1. He has authority concerning it. The Son of Man is Lord of the Sab-Since 12 is man's day, it is controlled by Him who is the head and representative of humanity.

mere outward and seeming obedience He gives man's need as the great reason for the day's observance. The Sabbath was made for man.

4. It is not merely a day of secular rest, but a day of spiritual activity.

Dead Man Runs an Automobile A dead man was the only occupant of a moving automobile for a short time in Portland, Me. While riding alone D. Winslow Hawkes, a member of the Portland School Committee and one of the best known educators in Maine, died of heart trouble. His automobile ran along the curbing and stopped without being overturned.

- Waldeck-Roussean Statue A colossal monument to Waldeck-Rousseau, former Premier of France, was dedicated in Tuilieries Gardens, Paris, by public subscription.