Ice dealer Blohm has stored an extra large quantity of ice.

Washington's Birthday. The Father of his country was born February 11th.

A channel was broken in Christiansa Creek with dynamite and by doing so thousands of fish were killed.

The warm sunshine destroyed the sleighing last Sunday, cleared the fields and reduced the snow banks.

Any person not a subscriber who wishes a copy of the township statement can get it free at the Record office.

George W. Hewitt planted a potato last spring given him by Josiah Summerill of the Rural Blush variety from which he raised a truck basket full.

Best coal in town at the yard and $4.50 delivered. Cash down.—C. C. Turner.

The expense of clearing the roads of the snow blockade has made an extra expense not expected and makes an unfavorable balance report in public statements.

The Borough Council held their regular meeting Tuesday evening, all being present but the Mayor. Current bills were ordered paid including $29 for shoveling snow.

The Philadelphia Ledger has been giving our citizens a free copy to show our citizens what an admirable paper they are now putting out. It gives more Jersey news than any other paper.

Half of the double house on Pitman street, the estate of Tillie Pierce, dec., was sold last Saturday by Walter S. Springer, executor, to Maggie P. Bilderback for $830. The other half was sold at private sale last fall for $1,100.

John T. White's big vendue on Finn's Point will take place Thursday, February 28th. See adv.

Some of our citizens have received income tax blanks and have made out their reports. The tax is 2 per cent. on the net income over $4,000. of the past year, which was not assessed by the local assessor, but will be this year.

The Bethel Church supper last Saturday was well patronized and the free entertainment had a crowded house. The pantomime marching was new and well rendered. They deservingly cleared $38.50, because much was given for nothing.

Capt. William P. Wright and Joseph H. Dalbow left Penn's Grove about four weeks ago to buy a steamer down Maryland to run truck from Courses Landing to Wilmington. They had proceeded 100 miles towards home to Hoga river, 25 miles from Wiscata, the nearest post office in Dorchester county, Md., where they were frozen up February 2nd. A letter since received by a friend states they are well and living on chicken and oysters, which are gotten by cutting holes in the ice. The steamer is a shallow one like those which ply in Southern rivers with a cabin on the upper deck for passengers.

About 9 o'clock on Thursday the vast area of ice in the river broke loose and the rising tide pushed the ice with such great force as to carry entirely away the middle of Penn's Grove steamboat wharf and wrecked the shed on the end of the wharf. Ice was piled fifteen feet upon the end of the wharf and higher alongside of it. The pilings at the end of the railway slip and where the ferry wharf was, were also carried away. Messrs. Dupont were on the field of ice when it broke and men from the powder works rescued them with a small boat. One of our citizens 91 years old said he never saw so much ice and so much destruction by it.

NEARLY SUNK.

The friends of Capt. David Johnson are sorry to hear his schooner Red Wing has met with another mishap. While on his way with a load of coal from Perth Amboy to Boston, five days out, she sprung a serious leak 5.30 o'clock Wednesday morning. She was started landward into Cape Cod Bay with the men at the pumps and would have sunk but for the tug Peter B. Bradley sighting her with two flags in the rigging "Union down." The tug reached her at 6.30 just as some of the men were getting in the small boats to leave the sinking schooner. When the tug got the Red Wing to a pier at Provincetown, Mass., the water stood across the quarter deck. Capt. Johnson thinks the leak is in the centre-board box and she will have to be unloaded before it can be stopped.

NEARLY A FATAL JUMP.

While the workmen's train was carrying cinders up the railroad on Monday morning and when near Cooper station a plug in the boiler came out and let the steam out so it filled the cab. Conductor Thomas Hunt, engineer Jere Cream, fireman Low Tomlin and workmen Edward Tomlin, Jere Vincent and Lawrence Dreybold were in the cab. All fearing they might be scalded jumped out. All landed in a big snow bank except Mr. Hunt. Mr. Dreybold had his head out, and Edward Tomlin his nose cut slightly, while the others, excepting Mr. Hunt, escaped with no injury.

Mr. Hunt jumped out of the cab window. He landed where there was little snow on the ground, sprained his ankle and tumbled on his head, making him insensible. He was brought home and did not recover consciousness until Tuesday. He is better as we go to press but has not fully recovered his senses.
