NEWS OF THE STATE

Trolley Lines Taxable.
The State Supreme Court has decided the case of the Mayor and Aldermen of Newark against the North Jersey Street Railway Company, holding that street car lines are taxable in New Jersey as inalienable real estate, thus adding to the State revenues several millions annually. This is considered an important opinion, as it will affect every city, township and borough throughout the State. The court holds that the franchise of the trolley lines is a permanent right in the soil, and that the franchise is a real estate, and that the franchise is a real estate, and that the franchise is a real estate.

Election of G. A. R. Officers.
At the thirty-fourth annual encampment of the New Jersey Grand Army of the Republic, held at Asbury Park, the following officers were elected: Department commander, John Lawrence, of New Brunswick; senior vice-commander, Elias W. Cole, of Jersey City; junior vice-commander, David D. Keefe, of Newark; medical director, Henry Chavanne, of Salem; department chaplain, the Rev. Charles E. Hill, of Red Bank; Council of Administration, J. M. Atwood, of Plainfield; John A. Borden, of Asbury Park; J. W. Chandler, of Newark; J. H. Long, of Orange, and G. B. Stinson, of Paterson. Delegates to the National Encampment, R. D. Brower, of Millburn; J. W. Chandler, of Newark; J. H. Long, of Orange, and G. B. Stinson, of Paterson.

Alarmed Over Carp.
The residents of Pine Brook are wrestling with the carp question. Some fishermen say that the carp can be used to catch the carp without any danger of taking the game fish, as it can be used in shallow low waters on the meadows. The Passaic River in the Pine Brook section is particularly suitable for the catching of carp, as the water is shallow and the carp are numerous. The carp are found in the meadows, and the carp are found in the meadows.

Woman Bitten by Savage Dog.
Mrs. George Woodman was attacked in the yard of her dwelling at Burlington by two vicious bulldogs, and she was severely bitten. The dogs were owned by a man named Woodman, and the dogs were owned by a man named Woodman. The dogs were owned by a man named Woodman, and the dogs were owned by a man named Woodman.

Killed After Daughter's Funeral.
By accidentally turning on the illuminating gas, Mr. James Kierman, aged sixty-nine years, of Springfield, Mass., was found dead at his home at Mrs. E. Kierman's in Haverhill, where he intended to spend a few days visiting. Mr. Kierman was at Haverhill attending the funeral of his daughter, Mrs. George Kierman, of Haverhill. He stopped in Haverhill to spend a week, and on returning turned on the gas, and must have turned it on again accidentally.

Thousands of Shad Let Loose.
Fish and Game Wardens E. C. Shamer, of Atlantic County, has liberated 25,000 shad fry at the head of tide-water in the Great Egg Harbor River. The fish were nearly two inches in length and were very healthy. The shad were liberated from the United States steamer Fish Hawk hatchery, at Gloucester. The river has been entirely depopulated of shad in recent years.

State Has 4000 Corporations.
The State Board of Assessors report that there are in the State 4000 corporations. The great Trust Trust alone will pay a tax of $10,000. The total franchise tax of the State is about $2,000,000—the highest it has ever been.

In All Parts of the State.
Potato bugs are getting in their nine work on the new cemetery at Mantua has commenced. The Gloucester gill fishermen have nearly all moved for the season. The postal name of Deckertown, Sussex County, has been changed to Sussex.

There are nine men over eighty-five years of age in the Cape May County Almshouse.
Millville people are being greatly bothered by thefts of flowers from their yards. The recent copious rains have caused the ground to be very soft, and Gloucester County is promised the largest hay crop on record.

This seems to be an out season all over South Jersey.
Not for four years has the crop looked as promising as it does to-day. Crow blackbirds are playing havoc with cornfields of Salem County. Melon patches, too, are being raided by the birds and farmers are terrorized.

There is a big demand for servant girls in Woodbury, and the city is likely to have several good families because of the shortage.
Daniel Halstead claims to be the only surviving Indian in South Jersey. He is a full-blooded Indian, and he is a full-blooded Indian.

In South Jersey strawberries are plentiful everywhere.

Store clerks in the Philippines get twenty cents a day. In Chicago the metal polishers have established a co-operative shop. The Boston brewers have granted their cooperatives the eight-hour day. The Steel Trust has voluntarily raised the wages of 750 of its Ohio workmen.

Trolley employees at Dayton, Ohio, have struck to force recognition of their union.
There are now fifty-eight factories with 250,000 horse-power, in the French Alps.

If automobiles do the work of horses they are certainly entitled to indulge in the same pranks that horses do.

The reckless youth on the bicycle is now taking his turn at being terrorized by the danger of being run down by an automobile.

Muzzling cats to keep them from killing song birds is the latest idea of the Natural History Society of Chicago. It is less funny than it sounds for the cats.

George McDermott, a comedian, who died in England the other day, is credited with introducing the word "jingo" to the language by means of a song which he sang in 1877, when the British fleet went through the Dardanelles.

A movement has been started in Georgia to perpetuate the memory of Ell Whitney by converting into a country club the scene of his labors near Augusta, where he perfected his cotton gin. An organization has been perfected, and a charter for the club secured.

Domestic servants in Switzerland are becoming scarce, as many of them emigrate to the United States. The labor bureau has applications for 1021 servants, but only 492 could be found.
Servants object to the continuous labor of housework and to being deprived of their free Sunday.

Sir Robert Griffin, comforting the gloomy Britons, bids them consider that their annual war bill of $300,- 000,000 comes out of an aggregate income of $7,500,000,000, while Germany, France and Russia are together spending $540,000,000 for war purposes out of the much smaller annual income of about $5,000,000,000.

Connecticut is wisely resolved to protect woodcock, quail and grouse within her borders, and will not allow them to be shot or sold in the State for two years. Many other States in the republic ought to follow Connecticut's example. The protection of game birds and of all birds that are not predatory should be stricter than it is now in almost every State.

A German governor reports that in her country history is taught on a broader basis than in the United States. Instead of studying each nation separately, the pupils learn what is happening in all parts of the civilized world during a given period. They thus comprehend more easily the close relationship of one nation to another.

The captain of the Mississippi River steamboat which was sunk recently, declares that the women passengers acted with great steadiness of nerve and courage. Doubtless that is true, and it is not in the least novel or surprising. On innumerable occasions in recent years it has been observed that in emergencies of great peril women have been less subject to panic and blind fear than men.

Andrew Carnegie's latest gift of $10,- 000,000 to establish free education in the four Scottish universities of Edinburgh, Glasgow, Aberdeen and St.
Andrew's will be greatly appreciated by the youth of Scotland, for whose exclusive benefit it is made. There is no characteristic of the Scottish people more marked than their passion for education. Especially is this true of the poorer class of them.

No social philosopher can consider the increasing love of country life by all classes of people without a thrill at the sociological results—simpler living, more robust physical characteristics, a growing love of nature, more wholesome sports, the beautification of the earth, better agriculture—all the things that are the antitheses of upholstery, consumption, obesity, bad temper, nervous prostration, and a despondent theory, reflects a writer in The World's Work. The quantity of land that is every year brought into use as gardens or parks is a wide-stretching evidence of the artistic development of the people; for the art of the American people is the landscape gardener's art, however crude its general development may yet be. The time is coming when we shall have the most beautiful continent that man ever lived on.

The report which Senator Mitchell makes of his observations of public feeling in Europe during a two years' residence there, from which he has just returned, is not pleasant. In substance it is that while the English respect Americans and are much more friendly toward them than they used to be, the Continental peoples, and especially the Germans and the French, manifest a positive and rather bitter dislike toward us. The Senator is familiar with the languages of these nations, and he says abroad did he see in the press of either a kindly allusion to his own. The feeling approaching antimony he attributes mostly to commercial rivalry and a sense that the Americans are gradually encroaching the trade that formerly belonged to the Continent, and are bound to do so more and more, and to encroach on the Continental markets.

FARM AND GARDEN.
Soil For Rapidly Growing Crops.
The more rapid the growth of a crop the better should be the soil. It is true that some crops will grow and mature without manure or fertilizer, but their growth will be quicker if they are assisted. The quality of some plants is improved by quick growth such as radishes and early beets. It will also pay to shorten the period of growth as much as possible in order to take the crop off the ground and follow with another, thus utilizing the land to its fullest capacity, but to grow two crops the land should be very rich. All early crops that come up very thick in rows should have the surplus plants thinned out as soon as possible, and a day's delay may do considerable harm, as any plant not wanted becomes a weed. As soon as beets, carrots, radishes, lettuce, parsnips and early turnips are large enough to be thinned with the finger and thumb, it should be done, as those remaining will get a better start.

To Get Outdoor Air.
The best place in the cut was recently shown to the south side of a poultry house, and was admirably fulfilling its mission of a place for a window.

AN ADDITION TO POULTRY HOUSE. ter aiding and a summer shed. It is easily and cheaply made, there being no glass in the top to add expense or get broken. The cover is turned back against the house on sunny days, when the fowls are practically out of doors. Build of matched boards such an addition will last for years. It can be used in spring as a run for a hen and chickens—American Agriculturist.

Best Methods of Cultivation.
I am very much interested in the idea that deep cultivation of trees is very injurious to them. All stirring of the soil is in itself a benefit to a crop, but it is easy to disturb the roots of a plant or tree if the plow or hoe goes down deep and so do it harm. I am sure that cultivators do not watch such things at all carefully as a rule, and so they are destroying a great many small roots without knowing it.
There is a great misapprehension among farmers as to the real thing accomplished by cultivation, so that in many cases there would be very little if it were not necessary to kill the weeds.

Practically all of our commonest weeds are tap rooted and if allowed to get a good start must be torn out deep down to kill them. On the other hand, all of our garden vegetables and field crops are very shallow rooted, with the exception of root crops so that deep cultivation is injurious to them. The obvious way to solve this dilemma is to cultivate very shallow and often. Any weed from seed is killed by merely breaking it in two.
If done before it gets past its first stage of growth, so that shallow cultivation answers every purpose. Let us plow upland soils deep, but cultivate the surface only—John Chamberlain, in New England Homestead.

Handling Bees.
We have all known people who could handle bees with seemingly as little danger of getting stung as if they were so many flies; while the first appearance of others seems to incite attack. That they can distinguish a stranger, can scarcely be doubted.
Even a strange horse is at once noticed. As evidence of the latter, our own team stops two or three times a day at the watering trough not far from the bee hives, and the bees are little insects often repair in warm weather for drink. (And just here is a point; that bees require water.) The matter how warm and sweaty the horses are, they are never molested by the winged plagues; but more than once have a strange horse been forced by them to a rapid retreat from the trough.

Nervous and excitable people will do well to keep away from bees unless they are willing to master us, which will power to restrain their emotions.
As a rule bees do not sting except in self defense, either real or fancied.
The bee-keeper who can quietly let them crawl over his hands and clothing, never striking at one even though it assume an offensive air, is the one who escapes with the fewest stings.
Be careful not to pinch them in moving the frames. A little smoke will drive them out of danger, yet excessive smoking should not be indulged in.
The object is to get them out of harm's way, not to smother them. One successful apiarist sneaks his hands with honey before commencing work.
Though bees may light on them for no good purpose, they get a taste of honey, and for the time being forget their anger in their joy at finding unexpected sweets. Of course, the more times when it is not practicable to adopt this device, sticky fingers impeding the work to a great extent.

When stung, brush the sting off with the end of a stick. By the latter method of picking it out, the tube is pressed into the wound, thereby increasing the pain. A slice of onion placed upon the wound, renewed as it becomes impregnated with the poison. Ammonia applied freely to the affected parts is also a standard remedy. But do not use either when working around the hives. The bees have a natural antipathy for both and fall with ten-fold fury upon one who has traces of either upon his person. It is safer to open the hives during the middle of the day, when the bees are hard at work than in the morning or evening, or worse still, some rainy day. They are then more vigilant and more inclined to be cross.
—Bessie L. Putnam, in The Epitome.

CHOKE IT DOWN.
When the gall gets in your neck,
Choke it down;
When your heart gets out o' check
Choke it down;
When you feel you're gittin' blue,
An' your mind's all in a stew, Tis the best thing you can do,
Choke it down.

When the world gives you a slap
Choke it down;
Don't appear you care a rap,
Choke it down;
When some one gets in your way Don't start out to kill 'em 'fay, An' be careful what you say—
Choke it down.

Don't let sorrow spoil your face,
Choke it down;
Take another firer brace,
Choke it down;
Take a whiff at it again, Don't let darkness shut you in—Keep fighting; you will win;
Choke it down.

Don't let this old world's ways—
Choke it down;
Kill the sweetness of your days;
Choke it down;
Jes' keep peppin' long your way;
Don't care what all others say, You'll find out all you some day,
Choke it down.

Always "Johnny" at Home.
A little story, capable of indefinite expression by the foreign observer of American manners, comes from the
New York Tribune.

Last summer, when our admirable
Secretary of the Navy was visiting his native village of Buckfield, in Maine, he sent some clothes to the village washerwoman, and driving by the next week in company with a representative to Congress, he stopped to thank her for them. The woman turned him away, and he was inclined to disavow the assertion then. But when General Grosvenor, an intimate friend of the President, and some times referred to as his "mouthpiece," only declared that the President was a rude fellow, and that the train of thought in which the President had indulged, and he was inclined to disavow the assertion then. But when General Grosvenor, an intimate

dent had indulged, and he was inclined

A Venetian Love Tragedy.
There has been a rather remarkable love tragedy in Venice. A young officer of the artillery recently fell in love with the daughter of a lawyer.
He made an appointment to meet her in one of the churches, but it so happened that the girl's brother was attending mass at the time and saw the young couple together. He waited for them to leave the building and then demanded an explanation, which the officer refused to give. This so infuriated the man that he struck the officer, who wore spectacles, a violent blow in the face, smashing his glasses and nearly destroying one of his eyes.
The officer so provoked upon the young officer's mind that he took a boat to Mestre and there shot himself through the heart. He was a well-known figure in Venetian society and the only son of one of the oldest Italian families.

Relics of the Bronze Age.
A French farmer at St. Brice has just made an interesting find on one of his fields. In a cavity in the clay he discovered 150 bronze axes. They are all of the same size, and are believed by local antiquarians to have been the stock of a Celtic merchant in the bronze age.

"NO THIRD TERM," MCKINLEY
President Would Refuse the Nomination if Tendered.

EVEN REGRETS THE SUGGESTION
In an Unequivocal Statement He Puts an Effectual Stop to All Talk About His Being a Candidate Again For the Presidential Nomination—Tactless Indiscreet Talk of Friends.

Washington, D. C.—President McKinley has put an effectual stop to the third-term talk which has gained some currency in the newspapers through interviews with certain well-known Republicans favoring the re-nomination of the President for a third term. Shortly before Tuesday's Cabinet meeting adjourned, Secretary Cortelyou gave to the press a signed statement by the President intended for the American people, announcing that he was not a candidate for a third term, and would not accept a renomination if one were tendered. In the statement President McKinley said:

"I regret that the suggestion of a third term has been made, and I regret whether I am called upon to give it notice. But there are now questions of the gravest importance before the country, and it is my duty to give my entire attention to them. My third consideration should not be prejudicial in the public mind by even a suggestion of a third term."

"I am a man who makes other people cheerful, isn't he?" "Oh, no; a humorist is a man who keeps his own spirits up."—Chicago News.

"Is he a man of ability?" "Is he?" Why, he not only knows that he doesn't know much, but he has the ability to keep others from knowing it!"—Philadelphia Times.

to resign. What is the trouble?" Star agent says I get."—Baltimore American.

Mother—"Johnnie, what are you doing in that preserve closet?" Johnnie (with his mouth full)—"Nothin', maw." Mother—"Very well, leave it

Judge.

Doctor—"You are mentally exhausted. I advise you to go to the country." Patient—"But I can't leave my business." Doctor—"Certainly not—you stay in the city and get a rest."—Judge.

Schoolmaster—"Now tell me, what were the thoughts that passed through Sir Isaac Newton's mind when the apple fell on his head?" Hopeful Pupil.
"I expect he was awfully glad it wasn't a brick."—Tit-Bits.

"Why am I not a famous common company?" demanded the woman, warmly.

the latter.—Detroit Journal.

"Little Nina went to church with her grandmother, and for the first time put pennies in the contribution plate.
Leaving over, she whispered very audibly: 'That's all right, grandma. I paid for two'."—Junior Herald.

Always "Johnny" at Home.
expression by the foreign observer of American manners, comes from the
New York Tribune.

Last summer, when our admirable
village washerwoman, and driving by
him away, and he was inclined to disavow the assertion then. But
only declared that the President
dent had indulged, and he was inclined to disavow the assertion then.

Aside from the aversion with which President McKinley regards the suggestion of a third term, he has a strong inclination to devote his time after his present term of office to personal affairs that have secured only his divided attention while he has been President, and he contemplates with great hopefulness the prospect of making comfortable free from the excitement inseparable from life at the White House, the days to be vouchsafed to Mr. McKinley at her home in Canton.

Suicides Spread by "Psychic Suggestion."
An epidemic of suicides at Emporia, Kan., caused the Mayor and Board of Health to forbid publication of details of suicides or attempts at suicide in local papers. The board is acting on the theory that publication spreads the contagion of suicide by psychic suggestion.

American Agent a Suicide.
Louis Stern, who recently resigned the post of United States commercial agent at Bamberg, Germany, has committed suicide at that place.
