CHURCHLESS CHILDREN

There are twenty-five million boys and girls outside of the Sunday School in this country. Every child in America should be in some Sunday School every Sunday morning. Every child should be accompanied to Sunday School by his parents.

The mother who doesn't bring her child into the world dedicated to God has committed a crime against the child. The father who doesn't lead his child to the altar of worship, reverence, and devotion has committed a crime against his child and against society: for he has left out of the child's training the greatest factor.

Parents who refuse to bring their children to church, and who refuse to allow their children to unite with the church and become devout Christian workers are stumbling blocks; they are curses to their children.

There is but one remedy for the condition in this country, and that is salvation by Jesus Christ. There is but one place in which that salvation can be found, and that is in God's infallible Word. There is but one institution authorized to teach that Word, namely the orthodox Christian church.

Every child should be in Sunday School and in the church pew on Sunday morning sitting beside his parents.

Children are never too young to be saved, but if they are neglected and grow to be old men and women hardened in sin they may become too old to be saved. It is extremely expensive to the government for a child to grow to be old in sin and crime. It costs millions to save an old man from the error of his way. A child can be saved at the threshold of childhood and thus save his soul and society untold expense.

The father who uses his automobile on Sunday to take his child away from the church not only breaks the Ten Commandment, but he is a curse to the child and a menace to this government.

The father who spends his Sunday on the golf links is a fraud so far as a religious influence is concerned, and he is a menace to the spiritual development of his child.

It is the business of the father to be in the Sunday School with his child, and it is the business of the child to be in the church pew by the side of his father.

Why do people neglect to bring their children to Christ and into the church? Such parents and such neglect are bringing untold sorrow and expense and reflection upon this country. The juvenile courts and the penal institutions are full of the children who come from such homes.

Parents, you are either a curse or a blessing to your children. If you neglect your Sunday duty you are a curse to them. Children ought to be in the Sunday School and church if the nation is to be saved.

DISEASES IN UDDER OF COWS NEED CAREFUL ATTENTION

There are a number of diseases that effect the udders of dairy cows which should be familiar to every dairyman. If these diseases are recognized in time and the proper treatment given, complications and serious loss of milk production can often be prevented.

Simple or acute inflammation or congestion, very commonly found among producing animals is a condition that responds very readily to treatment, if given in time. This condition is usually accompanied with a falling off in milk production, high temperature, loss of appetite, staggering gait, jugular pulse and acute restlessness. It is not considered contagious. As soon as noticed, a purgative, either Glauger or Epsom salts, or linseed oil should be given, says Dr. Johnson of the Agricultural College. This will usually give results within a short time, but the dairyman must be familiar with the use of the thermometer and watch the temperature of the cow carefully. If she should register a temperature of over 103 for several days after a purgative has been given a graduate veterinarian should be called. Garget is probably the most common disease of the udder and may be confined to one or more quarters. It can be caused by injury or a germ. When pus is found in the milk, with a hardening on one or more of the quarters, and there is a tenderness with suppression of the milk flow, it is very probable that it is a case of the garget. An excellent agent for treatment will be found in the form of Chlorozone tablets, obtained at the drug store, dissolved in warm water and injected into the infected quarters. After this is accomplished and all the pus drained out, an injection of ether can be made, in the following manner: Fill up a small cylinder with ether and attach a rubber tube to it, using the ordinary milk tube for insertion. The ether will evaporate into the most minute recesses of the udder without any injury to the tissues, and will destroy any pus producing bacteria that it encounters. No force should be used to drive the ether into the udder; the rubber tubing and milk tube will be sufficient.

CONVICT KILLED IN ATTEMPTED JAIL BREAK

Santa Fe, July 20.—Martin Baldonado, a convict in the state penitentiary here was killed and five other convicts were wounded today when eight guards stationed at the towers along the walls opened fire on a mob of convicts after they had refused to enter the cell house.

Baldonado was shot through the back and died a few minutes later. Over twenty-five shots were fired by the guards before the prisoners stampeded for the guard house.

The prisoners had protested to the officials about their rations and insisted that unless they were promised more to eat they would not go to work this morning. They also demanded that the usual amount of beans included in their days rations be cut off of the menu.

Warden Jaramillo warned the prisoners to obey the orders given them and after numerous repetitions called on the guards to open fire.

Thresh from the Shock Direct into a Columbian!

Save Stacking Expense and Shrinkage

Grain threshed direct from the shock into a Columbian Metal Grain Bin comes out in better condition than if "sweat in the stack." When improperly stored, the scientific ventilating system does it. None is wasted, destroyed by rats or damaged by weather or fire. No stacking expense and labor. Shrinkage is less than 1% as compared to 10% when stored in the open. The difference between 10% and 1% shrinkage on 1,000 bushels of grain will pay for a Columbian of this size in a single season.

Rats Destroy Millions Yearly
A Department of Agriculture letter states that more grain is eaten by mice and rats or otherwise wasted than is shipped out of the country where grown. Two Hundred Million Dollars is the yearly toll of crops and property destroyed by these pests. Baiting is the only effective way to herd them. They cannot get to grain stored in a Columbian Metal Grain Bin nor can they send your crop up in smoke.

Properly Stored Grain is Banked Cash
It is more valuable than cash received from the sale of grain at a loss on the prevailing low market of harvest and threshing time. Someone else will store your grain or a higher market if you don't. The Columbian Metal Grain Bin provides perfect farm storage—a safe of less than 1¢ per bushel distributed over the many years it will give service.

Improved, Reinforced, Triple Joint and Vertical Corrugated Construction
Sections in the body of a Columbian Metal Grain Bin are joined by a triple flanged joint which forms a four-ply band of steel around the bin every 33 inches of its height. This and the vertically corrugated side sections combine to make the strongest grain bin available. The roofs of square bin construction with ventilator in center. Metal bottoms are securely bolted into bottom U-flange of side walls. Designed throughout to withstand any load possible to put on it and severe windstorms when empty if anchored to platform or earth. More than 50,000 Columbian Metal Bins have entered farm storage service. Factory capacity of a bin every four minutes. Buy early and thresh direct from the shock. Prompt delivery now, but don't delay.
