

ONE WEEK AFTER THE FIRE.

What the People are Doing—Their Intentions. Places of Business etc.

Yesterday afternoon, just one week after the fire swept over the fated block seven, a GAZETTE reporter visited the scene and talked with most of the owners of property and those who had been doing business on that block.

Ward & Tamme have commenced business in a temporary building just in the rear of their former place of business. They are also crowding work on the adobe walls which had been commenced previous to the fire, and have also finished the cellar for the main building, which will be hurried forward as fast as possible.

Mr. Marble will open his restaurant again to-morrow in the building formerly occupied by R. G. McDonald's wholesale liquor store, on Railroad Avenue, opposite Browne & Manzanares commission house. They were busy getting things in readiness yesterday.

Marcellino & Boffa have built a new house between Houghton's hardware store and Hilty Bros., and are doing a lively trade.

The Model Store is in business in the rooms formerly occupied by Howison & Fabian's wholesale establishment on Railroad Avenue.

Malboeuf has commenced business again in the building formerly known as the "Lone Star Saloon." This will be his permanent place of business. He gets $400 insurance money.

Rosenthal has not yet commenced business, but is preparing to build at the old stand. He will get the full amount of his insurance, which is $6,500.

Philip Holzman has secured the building formerly occupied by Fraley's meat market, on Center street, and will be ready for business to-morrow.

Herbert & Co. have moved to the "Old Reliable" drug store to Col. Steel's building near Jaffa Bros. store. R. C. Richard has opened his jewelry store in a small frame, just in the rear of where his former house was.

The Mackley House, under the efficient management of Hilty and Mackley, has been opened in the building formerly known as the Hamilton house.

Hopper Bros. are doing a flourishing business in the adobe building in the rear of their former place of business.

Rupe & Castle have taken up their position in a frame building just south of their planing mill.

The Boston Clothing house will go into business near the New York store soon. This firm will rebuild on the lot formerly occupied by Malboeuf's harness shop.

Marcus & Clemm have opened up on Douglas street, opposite Llewelling's livery stable.

The branch postoffice, under the charge of Mr. Sewald, is kept in the store room of Marcus & Clemm's the same as before. They will occupy rooms in Ward & Tamme's when finished.

Seward has opened his jewelry store in a room near his residence on Zion Hill, where he can always be found until a more suitable place can be had in a more central position. He has also secured a room in Ward & Tamme's block when finished.

Flynn is now working in the barber shop in the Hilty block, opposite his old stand.

Goodlett & Roberts have not yet decided what they will do.

Curriss' shoe shop has been moved to the tailor shop near Brownings real estate office.

The New York restaurant is doing a good business in the blacksmith shop formerly occupied by Andy North, near Rupe & Castle's planing mill.

The Santa Fe bakery and lunch counter are feeding the public in a tent near the old stand. The owners Messrs Huberty & Angell have purchased the lot occupied by the Chicago shoe store stand, and will build a substantial adobe forthwith.

Mr. Geisler, the owner of the Central hotel is erecting a temporary building on the old stand and will continue business the same as ever.

Dr. Bayly has secured rooms in Brownings real estate office building where he can always be found.

The lot formerly occupied by the meat market of Hayward & Overhuls has been purchased by C. A. Rathbun who will at once build a solid adobe business house.

Mr. Rathbun, yesterday, moved his stock of goods into a tent near where his new store is soon to be.

Overhuls' grain and hay warehouse is near where it formerly was and is well stocked with storage of all kinds. Prichard, Browning et. al. will get $500 insurance money on the building owned by them.

The losses of C. E. Wesche have been adjusted at $1,000 which will be forthcoming in a few days.

Milligan Bros. get $30 damage and Jaffa Bros. $40.

Quite a number of others in the Hilty block will receive recompense for damages, but to what extent we were unable to learn.

Mr. Marble, who was so severely burned during the fire is getting along nicely and will be able for business again in a few days.

Of the two Saturday nights what a contrast! One full of excitement, turmoil and destruction; the other, full of calm forethought and labor and reconstruction. Saturday one week ago, night settled down over a sorrowing people and the hot and smouldering ruins of their homes and business houses. Yesterday evening night settled down on the same people, but all were filled with brighter prospects and firmer resolves. A long and eventful week intervened and done much in assuaging the sorrows, disappointments and heart-aches caused by the ruin of one short hour. Sorrow and sunshine alternate, but the darker the cloud, the brighter will be its silver lining after it has swept over.

Down the Rio Grande.

The first of the week, we made a trip along the great railroad, as far as constructed, down the Rio Bravo del Norte. The road enters the valley above Bernalillo and follows the valley down in a straight line as the bird flies until it reaches the Jornada del Muerto, crossing the northern part of this famous "journey" and goes out through Grant county and Sonora to Guaymas and the Pacific Ocean. From La Junta, Colorado, where the road leaves the Arkansas valley it crosses the broken and mountainous portions of northern New Mexico to the Rio Grande, with many crooks and turns and doubling back upon itself to find the easy grades over mountains and through cañons. But once in the valley, it stretches out straight as an arrow, for miles and miles, avoiding the short bends and taking the general course of the river. In a few days, the road will be turned over by the construction company from Albuquerque south, and regular passenger trains run straight through to San Marcial on the northern borders of the Jornada. The Rio Grande is an ugly, turbid looking stream flowing shallow, at this season of the year, over deep and treacherous quick sands. But its murky waters are charged with agents which in irrigation fertilize and enrich the lands. One thing is prominently noticeable to the traveler for this valley; there is but a very small proportion of the tillable lands under cultivation. Another fact is equally as patent, that wherever a spot of ground is cultivated and watered it produces abundantly. This is true of the most sandy portions of the valley. What it needs is men, farmers, cultivators of the soil who make that their sole business and source of livelihood. Many persons who visit this section and look at the sandy and barren aspect of the uncultivated lands without considering the fruitfulness of the cultivated portions are apt to be disappointed and form adverse opinion of their great value. But this is a great mistake, for experiments, the only true test of anything, prove their unbounded and remarkable fertility.

Thus far, really, only partial experiments in farming, gardening, grape and fruit growing have been made in the valley. The orchards, corn and grain fields, vineyards and gardens answer satisfactorily as to what these sandy barrens will do when watered and tilled. The land is rich and every inch of it can be cultivated from foot-hill to foot-hill on either hand and through its entire length. The water can be brought in canals from the river, or raised by windmills from a few feet beneath the surface. Let but a population of wine makers and fruit growers from the farming districts of France and Germany go into this valley and possess it, segregate the lands into ten twenty and forty acre tracts and plant it to vineyards and orchards and every foot of the valley will blossom as the vine clad fields of France. A perfectly pure climate, free from the moisture which in other countries mildews the grape, this valley will be in the near future one of the greatest wealth producing regions in the United States. Its possibilities cannot be well estimated or even conjectured.

The boys at the depot, yesterday, while waiting for the trains to come in, amused themselves with a series of dog fights.
