STILL DOWN. The Western Union wire which has been down since Saturday is not up yet. Whose fault is it?

We present a short report which came over the railroad wire after one o'clock this morning. San Francisco, Oct. 20.—The Daily Stock Report, publishes a letter received from Hon. T. B. Meacham by a friend in this city, dated October 9th.

After relating the killing of Johnson and the demand of the Utes for the surrender of the prisoner, he says, "The Utes would not consent to allow the prisoner to be taken to Cantonment, but did agree he might be taken to Gunnison City provided three responsible white men would go with them and have tried by law and executed. This agreement was made a half past eight on Friday morning. It was the only alternative To take every white man while there were twenty-two Utes present, therefore would be a signal for the slaughter of every white man in the Ute country. There were many hundred miles of road with freighters every few miles exposed and unwarmed of danger. The only thing to do was done. Agent Berry and myself left for home and the Utes made a compact in good faith as also did the white men. After we started the citizens had a talk with the prisoner and wagon boss and agreed that the man who fired the fatal shot should go with the citizens to Gunnison City for trial. The Indians in the meantime going on a trail over the mountains met a large war party and turned back to Cline's overtaking the citizens and taking the prisoner forcibly from them and compelling the guard to leave the road. What became of the prisoner is not known but there is not much doubt. I know the compromise was bona fide and that the release was also bona fide and terribly in earnest. As might be expected there are rumors of "put up job," but I don't believe it.

Washington, October.—The Star this evening has the following: Congressman McClask's of California, is in the city and he says the democrats are thoroughly organized in that State and will carry it. That the republicans will not dare to introduce the traffic issue because the men of all parties are free traders; for free trade and free ships, and that the Chinese is the principal issue and on this the democrats are making their fight. He has been in Nevada and is very much pleased with the democratic prospects there; he says Mr. Fair is making a determined fight and will carry the State and legislation. The fact that Sharon has confidence in Nevada is hurting him badly. The Chinese question he says is being worked by the democrats in Nevada and Oregon.

Holland, Mich., Oct. 20.—Trains arriving here to-day brought a large number of persons in search of friends and relatives lost on the steamer Alpena. Every conveyance possible has been used to convey them to the beach. The beach from Grand Haven to Saugatuck has been slowly examined and the whole amount of wreckage can be found. No bodies except the two already reported have yet been found up to this time, 7:30 p. m. So many watchers are out and so much excitement prevails that rumors have been started in regard to bodies being found, but when traced they have failed to develop anything further.

Cincinnati, Oct. 20.—A shocking casualty in connection with a fire occurred shortly after eleven o'clock this forenoon. The fire broke out in the shoddy manufactory of Benj. Hey, 2d Broadway, and cut off escape from the third story where a number of women were at work. The foreman made ineffectual attempts to rescue the women. After extinguishing the fire they succeeded in extracting the dead bodies of five women; loss estimated at $250,000. There was no insurance.

Twenty girls and eight women were in the third story when the fire broke out. The girls passed down stairs but only two of the women followed their example. It is supposed that six of them delayed to exchange their clothing, until the fire cut off their escape. One of them broke her leg jumping from a window. The others burnt to death. The name of the one first identified is Miss Welch

Chicago, Ill., October 20.—A Journal's Madison, Wisconsin, special says A fire at Portage this morning destroyed the Pettibone block. Loss $50,000.

Chicago, Ill., October 20.—A Journal's special from Des Moines says that yesterday W. H. Middleham, the landlord of the Central House, New Sharon, Iowa, having abandoned his wife her son David interfered when Middleham, who was drunk, stabbed him several times finally severing the jugular vein and windpipe and causing death.

Celebrating the Taking of Rome, September 20, 1870. A very pretty custom of this day is the assembling of as many children as there are years elapsed from 1870, and having the same age as the lapse of years. They are dressed in white, with scarfs round their waists of the Italian colors (green, white and red), and go to the queen and present her with a bouquet of flowers. This year there were ten children, each being ten years of age. I am not sure but I think they must have been born on the very day that Rome was taken. It is not necessary that they should be Romans; they need only be Italians. This year the queen's health prevented her from being in Rome; but, no doubt, the ceremony was performed wherever she was. The queen is passionately fond of children, as all such gen. le, tender women usually are and she has a pretty word for every child who comes near; for these children, however, she has words on her lips which engrave the memory of the day on each child's heart. Each child may be a woman some day, and wife, mother of sons, whom she must rear in love of their country and King, and Margherita's words may influence the mother's words. She will repeat them to her children each year as the day comes around, and remind her boys of the struggles and sufferings of the men who helped to achieve Italy's unity; and she will bid them do the same and suffer the same should peril ever again threaten their country's liberty. The 20th of September is also observed in almost every other town and village in Italy, although with less pomp than in Rome, for there are very few Italians who do not rejoice at the fall of the Pope's temporal power.—Cor. Philadelphia Bulletin.

Adelle. Corageous was a woman of the Commune who, during that terrible rising had worked day and night in the hospital, assisting a certain surgeon, whose services had been rendered freely to men with whose cause he had no sympathy. When the insurrection was quelled; the doctor was arrested and marched off to be tried by drum head court-martial. As he approached the door of the tribunal, he met his late female assistance coming out between two soldiers.

"Why, Adelle!" he exclaimed, "how came you here?" Looking hard at him, with unrecognizing eyes, she exclaimed: "I don't know you sir."

The denial he set down to fear of acknowledging the acquaintance of a doomed man. Not a little to his surprise he got off, and was set at liberty to learn that Adelle had been shot, and was on her way to death when she had repudiated all knowledge of him, and forborne appealing for his aid, rather than compromise him and endanger his chance a desperate one.—Chambers Journal.

Views of General Gordon of Georgia. Chattanooga, Oct. 15.—Gen. John B. Gordon, ex-United States senator from Georgia, one of the most astute politicians and the greatest leader in the South, was interviewed in this city to-day by your correspondent on the defeat in Indiana. He ascribes it to the vile attacks on the South by the Northern Republican press; partly to the tariff issue, but chiefly to the fraud and corruption practiced in the state by the Republican managers and the undue influence brought to bear by bringing the leaders of the party to the state and using their influence. He thinks the state will be redeemed in November, when the Republicans will be obliged to divide their forces to contend against Democratic majorities in the so-called doubtful states. He thinks New York sure with 30,000 majority for the Democracy, and counts on New Jersey, Oregon and California in November. He regards Pennsylvania as a doubtful state.—Louisville Courier Journal.

While our confidence is unabating in the patriotism and intelligence of the great majority of our citizens, it is yet even to be kept in mind that we have not entered upon millennial days, and that the institutions which cost our fathers so dearly do not flourish of their mere inherent energy and suitability to the ends of government. They are no stronger than the purpose and efforts of the people to sustain them. This "unknown quantity," this reserve of strength, may be greater or less; but we know that it is a mighty factor when once fully evoked. It usually lies back of observation. Foreigners do not readily discover the "hiding of our power," nor those of our own people who walk only by sight. Judging the great streams by the backset of its bayous and eddies, these are frequently ready to despair of government by the people and for the people. They assure us that the primary meetings are managed in the interest of politicians; that the candidates for office are not selected with reference to fitness as regards character and capacity; that in large sections things have come to such a pass of wickedness and confusion that the ballot box is no longer a fair, or even an approximate, index of the real sentiment of the voters. There is we fear, much truth in all this. We confess it to our shame and confusion, for we hold that it is not beyond measurable correct; that it admits of a remedy which the intelligent and well meaning voters of the country might readily apply if once they set themselves to the task.

We set too light an estimate upon our privileges as citizens. We are full of our individual affairs. Our men of great enterprise "mind their own business," and smaller men imitate them. The men are not obscure nor their numbers few who are ready to avow openly their contempt for "politics" and all its belongings; not aware, apparently, that they thus utter a biting criticism upon their own course. For what or their published platform of principles, the great majority of our voters wish to be recognized good citizens of our Republic. They prefer to be regarded as intelligent and really solicitous of the public welfare; and it is in truth just in so far as they fall short of their fair and reputable ideal; that we are called in question among ourselves, and distrusted by foreigners, and our institutions after a hundred years yet ranked among experiments.

Much, if not all, that our more respectable papers complain of in the way of corruption in our politics might be corrected, if only our worthy citizens would conscientiously and persistently discharge their political duties. And the real question of the hour and of the remainder of the century rests here. Left to themselves, the manipulations of mere partisans, our institutions will not flourish; the freedom which they offer to all, foreign and home born, ignorant and learned alike, must prove their ultimate ruin. But let every one who loves his country and her best welfare simply do his duty, and he will be both surprised and cheered by the number of those who are ready to imitate his well-doing, and whose united action will thus dissipate every cloud in our sky.—New York Evangelist.

It is a curious fact that every prince of the royal house of Prussia, when young, is taught some useful trade or other, for the purpose of sobering the mind and bringing to face with the material world and the realities of life, and among the profusion of curiosities and artistic relics which crowd the emperor's private cabinet may be seen specimens of book binding, carving, carpentering, and other handiwork performed by his sons and grandsons. It is unnecessary to debate so obvious a question as to which side a man and woman should respectively take. It is always right for the gentleman to take the left, and it is then left for the woman to take the right.—Boston Transcript

When an Indian doctor has lost five patients, the survivors of the tribe send him after them to see what has become of them. After all, the Indians would lose some advantages by civilization.—Burlington Hawkeye.
