GREAT CHANCE TO STOCK UP THE "TOWN ZOO" Mr. Ersin Offers Wild Cats a Fox, a Badger and Other Attractions, But What Does He Mean? City Clerk Thomas Humber found the following communication in his mail this morning: El Paso, Texas, July 18, 1914. City of Albuquerque, New Mexico. Gentlemen: Thinking that you might be in the market for some wild animals for your park or zoo, I am offering you the following animals for $350. I am, El Paso: One panther, one lion, two wild cats, two coon, one badger, one red squirrel, one silver fox, one civet cat, one American eagle, one condor, one coyote, five baby lobo wolves, five alligators, three to five feet long. This is a complete menagerie, delivery now. Can you use them? Yours very truly, H. A. ERSIN, 118 Stanton St. It is plain enough what Mr. Ersin means when he refers to "your park," but it is not quite so plain as to what he means by zoo. The park is, of course, the 540 acres which the clubs and fraternal organizations bought for the city while the councilmen were suffering from paralysis of their financial acumen. But zoo? Is it possible, one wonders, that Mr. Ersin, reading accounts of municipal doings from time to time, has gotten an idea that Albuquerque needs a zoo. It is suggested that Mr. Ersin has been talking with some of the boys in the second ward Highlands. Maybe he feels that a fox, and a couple of wild cats, and a civet cat would feel right at home in the city administration. One, reviewing past council sessions, gathers an impression that there is a badger already in service—carefully tended by Mayor Boatright. In pace of his goat, which was taken from him early in the administration. But there doesn't seem to be much chance of a sale for Mr. Ersin. Albuquerque has no money, and besides, the town has all it can do to take care of its present civic menagerie.

ECONOMIST ICE CREAM PARTY DRAWS BIG CROWD OF SHOPPERS Seymour Lewinson of the Economist pulled off a brand new stunt in Albuquerque today when he gave an all-day ice cream party to the ladies of Albuquerque. It was free ice cream and it was good ice cream and the ladies enjoyed it. Sixteen hundred full measure dishes were provided and it looked this afternoon as if a fresh supply would be necessary before closing time. Tables were laid in the second floor front of the Economist building, with the Central avenue windows open and big electric fans working, and with fast service the party was a most attractive one. E. J. Lucey, recently of Oakland, California, who has come to Albuquerque to take charge of the ice cream department of the Grimshaw confectionery establishment, had charge of the refreshments and serving, being in personal attendance during the day.

SANTA FE ELKS FAILED TO COME; FEARED RAIN It was too rainy-looking for the trip, the Santa Fe Elks told Manager George Graham of the local Elks' team, when the latter called up the Capital City yesterday to see why the Ancient City Elks hadn't appeared. All preparations had been made for the reception and game to mark the coming of the Santa Fe Elks, but it was learned that they weren't coming in time to get word about and prevent the gathering of a disappointed crowd at Hopewell park. No arrangements have been made for another date for Santa Fe's visit.

ENGINEEMEN WILL STATE CASE TO BUSINESS MEN A committee of the local chapter of the railway engineers' organization, beginning today, will call on the business men of Albuquerque for the purpose of explaining to them fully the position of the employees in the pending wage controversy with the western railroads. The general officers of the engineers' organizations have prepared a careful statement of the demands of the employees, and the reasons for them, of which 200 copies were received here this morning. These will be distributed among the business men by the local committee.
