used an account of some of the incidents of the fighting in France, in which it appears certain letters taken from German prisoners. This record bears no date.

"In the presentation of striking contrasts this war is an exception to the rule. Within sight of the spot where those words are being written the chauffeur of a motor car attached to the general staff is making his toilet in the open. After washing his face and hands in a soappan mirror he handles, he carefully brushes his hair with an oval comb, using the window of the car, in which he has draped, as a look-in glass. From the back seat he gives his somewhat young looks it is clear that he had once been a dandy."

A letter from a German prisoner tells how the enemy interrogated their needed rest and how, when the Germans attempted to advance on September 14 the enemy, being from "ashes and from houses, swept their trenches. This letter continues:

"On my right and left wounded comrades were complaining bitterly that the enemy was shooting from below. They seemed too weak to march in us. If we assumed an upright position we were immediately fired upon. After about one hour, during which our company lost about 25 men, we were forced to retire. This brought our total strength down to 58. We started with 251 men. We had no officers left.

"On the 15th, at 4:30 in the morning, we reached a village where we thought we would be able to rest. There half an hour had passed, however, the shrapnel had again found us. We spent the afternoon in the village which was continuously under shell fire in spite of the fact that our guns were shelling the enemy's artillery. We heard our column was our guns, could not get at those of the enemy so 'factory because the latter were so well concealed.

"Our condition is now awful, for we have to sleep out in all kinds of weather. We were all looking forward to a speedy end. We are very badly off as regards food. Some of our treatments cost money only from three to four cents."

Another letter written during the retreat in front of the French from Mohl Minard says:

"After a thirty-six hour march we had a rest and arrived just in time for the night. For three days we had not had a hot meal because our food kitchens were lost. We got a hot meal yesterday evening. Although we are all just ready to drop we must march on.

they would occupy strong defensive positions behind the Vitruvian and other streams and await the attack of the Germans and Austrians. Instead, however, they pushed into East Prussia in great numbers of a very early stage of the war and they are still nuclear forward to date.

From this fact it is inferred that Russia's mobilization was very far advanced and other preparations for war began long before the St. Petersburg government admitted that even one soldier had been called to the colors.

The next surprise was that the Russian actually no longer send their troops into battle in close formation, as in previous wars, but have modernized their tactics and by so doing all the advantages of the ground. The absence of the infantry, however, was found to be still very ineffective. With the field artillery the case is quite different. The firing is remarkably effective. The separate Russian gunners were considerably neutralized by the large proportion of shells which failed to explode, a fact which seems to be a legitimate explanation in the light of reports that a more probable explanation in the military nature of the terrain in many places along the Russian frontier, the shells bursting themselves in the soft earth without exploding.

This origin and development of rumors of the enemy's defects has been an interesting study of war. A report, for instance, that the entire French army was marching into bay, the shrapnel had again found us. We spent the afternoon in the village which was continuously under shell fire in spite of the fact that our guns were shelling the enemy's artillery. We heard our column was our guns, could not get at those of the enemy so 'factory because the latter were so well concealed.

"We found great quantities of food, but fearing poison we did not take possession of it until we had got hold of the proprietor of the house and compelled him to taste it first. We are now living very well, having passed through hard, bloody and most horrible days. Of our regiment of 2,000 men there are now only 1,000 left. Let us hope that this battle, which ought to be one of the greatest in history, will leave me safe and well and give us peace. I am unshakably done, but we must not despair."

RUSSIANS PROVIDE SURPRISE FOR GERMAN GENERALS
(Berlin, Sept. 14.—Now that the Germans have succeeded in clearing East Prussia of the Russians, German army officers are finding their views as to the fighting qualities of the Russian emperor's soldiers and officers. This East Prussian campaign is the most remarkable on record for the number of prisoners taken in so short a time and in field fighting. In less than three weeks, according to official statements, General Von Hindenburg made prisoners of nearly 120,000 Russians.

AMERICAN SEEKING FOOD SUPPLY FOR BRUSSELS
London, Oct. 2 (1:20 p. m.)—Mildred Stoler, an American residing in Brussels, is in London endeavoring to arrange for a food supply for Brussels. England has placed an embargo on the exportation of food to any country during the war, but it would probably furnish food for Belgium if satisfactory guarantees were given that the supplies would reach Brussels.

The food must go by way of Holland and through German territory to a point near Looz, whence motor trucks could carry it to Brussels. Salt, meat and flour are the three staples especially required immediately.

AMERICAN SHIPS WARMED UP OF NEW MINE FIELDS
Washington, Oct. 2.—The British admiralty today warned American shipping interests through the state department that it is dangerous to forward for ships to cross the area between latitude 40 degrees 45 minutes north and 50 degrees 45 minutes north and longitude one degree 35 minutes east and three degrees east. Instructions have also been issued to British ships to wear all out gear vessels of the presence of these new mine fields in the North sea.

DEAFNESS CANNOT BE CURED by local applications as they cannot reach the diseased portion of the ear. There is only one way to cure deafness, and that is by constitutional treatment. Deafness is caused by an inflamed condition of the mucous lining of the Eustachian Tube. When this tube is inflamed, it has a tendency to close, and when it is entirely closed, deafness is the result, and unless the inflammation can be taken out and the tube restored to its normal condition, hearing will be destroyed forever; some cases out of ten are cured by Catarrh, which is nothing but an improved condition of the mucous surface.
