A Conspiracy of Plunder

IT MIGHT be apparent that in the sale or marketing of large amounts of securities, such great buyers as these big insurance companies would be the most sought of all buyers—the most hunted of all the markets—and would thus be able to command the best terms, says the Springfield Republican. And this would be the case if the insurance companies stood upon their advantage and compelled the sellers of bonds to come to them. But not. The spirit of graft has rested too heavily upon them. They have been forced by officers and directors into needless underwriting alliances to help all concerned to a profit. Their vast funds have been made use of to assist bankers and brokers in these commission operations, and officers and directors of the companies in many cases have not hesitated to join individually with the bankers and brokers to share the gain which the companies themselves have been employed to promote.

Here is a situation of the gravest import—revealing the existence of a plundering "money power" in a more tangible form than most people had regarded as possible, and demanding instant and severe correction. So far from being "necessary," it is merely a conspiracy of plunder. One of the first things, evidently, to be done is the exclusion from the directorate of the life insurance companies men who are connected with brokerage institutions which are engaged in promotion of enterprises and the floating of securities.

IT IS now said in Washington that President Roosevelt will not accept a renomination in 1908, but will not object to being taken up after a four years' retirement, which will doubtless be devoted to travel abroad and to literary work. And that's all right. The unwritten law against a third term doesn't prevent a man from taking as many terms as he can get, provided he doesn't try to get more than two in succession. In the case of Mr. Cleveland, for instance, he might be elected in 1898, and re-elected in 1902, and while it would be a remarkable freak of judgment on the part of the people, it would be no violation of the third term principle, though it would give him four terms.

THE Memphis Commercial-Appeal says that 30,000 Iowans have moved into Tennessee. And surely as many more have come to California. What's the matter with Iowa that people should be deserting it in such large numbers.—Los Angeles Times.

"THERE is no such thing as joking in the United States senate," says a Washington syndicate writer. What does he call the preparation of a railroad rate bill by Senator Elkins.—Houston (Tex.) Post.

THE Chicago Tribune heads a leading editorial, "M. de Witte on Mosquitoes," but a reading of the article shows that the trouble grew out of mosquitoes on M. de Witte.

Not a Trimmer

IN SPEAKING of the part taken by Secretary Bonaparte in building the Maryland platform the Charleston News and Courier says: For our own part we believe Mr. Bonaparte is conscientiously and profoundly opposed to negro domination and social equality between the races, and we give him credit for manhood enough to say so in a party platform or anywhere else. When the Maryland platform was being written he refused to agree, as so many other republicans have done, to feel one thing on this subject while he pretended to feel another. Mr. Bonaparte did not compromise with the popular prejudice; he was simply honest enough and courageous enough to tell the truth on the subject concerning which republican statements have been accustomed to trim, falsify, and remain silent when making platforms for their party.

THE protocol of the treaty between Norway and Sweden recognizes the principle of arbitration in the settlement of international affairs and provides for the reference to The Hague tribunal of all differences that cannot be settled between the two countries. This is a great and splendid endorsement of The Hague as a high court of justice between nations and will do much to establish that institution upon a permanent basis.

PANAMA is to be paved with vitrified brick. It had already been paved with dead man's bones, but it is evidently the impression of those now in charge of things down there that brick is more practicable.—Los Angeles Times. From its similarity to another country we read of it would be more in accord with the fitness of things to have it paved with good intentions.

EVERYBODY may not know what a "zeish" is, and it may therefore be explained that a perfect thing of the kind is to be found in the possession of those brokers who got into "joint-account" with the New York Life Insurance company—the company putting up all the money and they talking half or more of the profits.—Springfield Republican.

The Other Fellow's View

IT IS gratifying to observe the alacrity with which the press is responding to the demands of patriotism in casting aside political differences for the furtherance of staidhood. It is not a time for party wrangling, but for concerted action. The voice of the people is powerful and sure of accomplishing results when it is harmonious; but so long as we engage in altercations as to the form in which it shall be given, so long will congress have an excuse for procrastinating. Single or double staidhood, says the Raton Gazette, may be distasteful to us, but the other fellow's view always has some advantage and a little effort will make us see it his way. Furthermore, in the present instance, it seems assured that congress has determined upon joint staidhood, so it behooves us to exercise intelligence and in the name of patriotism champion staidhood, unqualified and unlimited.

MISS ELIZABETH THEILMAN, a New York girl, has just completed two years' work as a street contractor, and she has made a profit of $50,000. The New York papers print Miss Elizabeth's picture, and there isn't a girl in Albuquerque who would have such a homely face for twice $50,000. But Lizzie got there, all the same, and that's what counts.

JOHN T. TROWBRIDGE, the author and poet, last week celebrated his 77th birthday at Arlington. His wife is still with him, and they have a son, Arthur T. Trowbridge, who is a senior in the Massachusetts Institute of technology, besides two married daughters.

SIX new battleships within the next six months, four more in the six months following, and still three more in the six months after that—let no one imagine that the United States will not be a great naval power by 1907.

Solos

Books of the Day.
"The Streets of Life," by How to Run a Territorial Fair," by Col. D. K. B. Sellers. With ten full page illustrations in eighteen colors, by Col. W. H. Greer, embellished with a frontispiece of the Bucking Bull and a cover design representing the famous Trotting ostrich. Price, $1.00. All news stands.

"Reveries of a Recluse, or the Southwest From a Cell Window," by Thomas S. Hubbell, author of "Jails I Have Visited," and "Who's Who in the Court House." La Bandera Publishing company. Price, bound in Hubbell sheep, only 15c.

"Reminiscences of My Blood Spattered and Bullet Struck Career in the Wild and Woolly Southwest," by Miguel A. Otero. Almanac Publishing company, Santa Fe, N. M. This splendid book is a most absorbing and blood curdling account of the administration of Mr. Otero while governor of New Mexico. It contains thrilling accounts of the governor's experiences with savage outlaws, desperadoes, cut-throats and political criminals in the territory. Following are some of the chapters: "How I Felled the Bold, Bad Kidnappers," "My Hair-Breadth Escape From Gory George and His Gang in My Automobile," "How I Drove Grafters Out of the Southwest," "My Desperate Fight With Don Francisco's Bandits," "How I Terrorized the Bad Men," and "How I Purified Politics." There are many others equally as absorbing. Should be in every home.

As a magnificent special offer, the Almanac Publishing company will publish this momentous work with "Bills That Became Law," eighty-two elegant volumes, for the low price of $3.00; or, the book and Bound Volume of the Almanac for the last fifty years, only $1.200. A rare bargain.

"The Curious Fable of the Buzz-Saw," "As to the 'Gov.' and 'Burse' and the New Mexican," the Albuquerque Corporation show that they are well assured that they can take pretty good care of themselves and that the fellow who runs amuck against them is up against a powerful and strong buzz-saw with very sharp teeth.

There was once a Buzz-Saw which was composed mostly of Buzz. Once upon a time this Buzz-Saw got entangled in the Matter Power in a distant city, it began to Saw Wood. After sawing for a Short Time the Buzz-Saw had to be loaded on a train and taken to a Quiet and Refined Where it could have its Teeth Sharpened and be otherwise Patched Up. But it is feared that this Buzz-Saw has seen Better Days and that it will be necessary to get a New Instrument if any more wood is to be cut.

The Buzzing of this Saw is done by a second hand Keyhole Saw called Max. The Buzzing, however, resembles the sound produced by a large variety of this fact, the Buzz imagines that it makes the Saw go, whereas when the Saw ceases to Revolve Max will be out of a Buzz.

To Roswell. (Revised Record.)
"Roll on, roll on, you southbound train,
Over southern Texas plain;
Let the breeze gently blow,
Ever forward, onward go,
Southward on to Texas.

Move, you wheeled, varnished cars,
Swiftly pass the panting hots;
Time is fleeting as we go,
But the gentle reader hasn't done anything to merit more of this. It's cruelty to animals.

A Texas editor who has a habit of getting drunk just at press time, has hit on a novel scheme to fill up the editorial column at the last moment. He cuts on a foot or so of the New York Times and writes the following introduction: "We cannot agree with the New York Times when it says—"

The hobo fraternity are reading with hot breath the accounts of the work on the Panama canal, where you labor or get clubbed to death. There will probably be a general exodus of Weary Willies to the Far North, if this thing keeps up.

Tom Lawson has announced formally, through some three hundred pages of advertising supplement that he is going to call President McCall of the New York Life a liar. This means the starting of another magazine by Tom.

According to the Nogales Oasis, "Julius Casar" has turned up at Benson. The purpose of the old Roman in that locality is regarded with suspicion. He had been regarded as a staidly dead for many years.

"President Has a Broken Axle," says a big black headline in the Trinidad Chronicle News. But he seems to be making just as many revolutions to the minute as ever—in government departments.

A "Track Tour" is the way President Winchell of the Rock Island describes an inspection trip which he is making. Heretofore the festive hobo has had a copyright on that kind of travel.

A New York paper has a long editorial dealing with the "New York 1905." As if New York hadn't trouble enough, without looking fifty years into the future.

It can safely be wagered that a certain eminent resident of the city of Omaha, Nebraska, is carefully perusing the accounts of the Hubbell situation in the public prints.

A new postoffice has been established in Texas called "Dammit." It is thought President Roosevelt was instrumental in the choice of the name.

Douglas has a thoroughfare called "H" avenue. One would think that in Douglas they would use the whole word.

Raton is in holiday attire to receive the Grand Fall Excursion today.

An Indication.
"Biggins must like money. He bought an automobile two months ago."
"That," answered the man who exhales sadness and gasoline, "merely means that he used to have money."—Washington Star.

Managing a Husband.
At an entertainment given at Birmingham, Ala., by unanimous consent of the guests the prize offered for a recipe on "How to Manage a Husband" was awarded for the following:
"To a cup of honey add a spoon of love."
"Pour in carefully a quantity of 'sauce.'"
"Season with reason."
"Stir constantly."
"Be careful not to let cool."
"Strain for the best."
"Serve with the right 'hand.'"

Full of Comfort and Pleasure
The California Limited Log Book:
I have traveled over many railroads and have failed to find one equal to the "Santa Fe." Without doubt the California Limited is the most luxurious train in the world. The service is excellent in every respect, and the attentions and courtesy shown by the employes is most gentlemanly. A trip to California via the Santa Fe is one that should be long remembered; and it is full of both comfort and pleasure.—ED. L. LYCALTE, 25 South Twenty-first street, Philadelphia, Pa.
