Chimney—Wot's der matter wid Reddy Smith? He's so stuck up he hardly speaks to anybody.
Tommy—Why, didn't you hear? His Uncle Bill broke out of the penitentiary last night!
He (in leaving)—I think I have said good bye to you before, Miss.
She—Well, I'm always glad to say good bye to you.

The Goose That Laid Golden Eggs
Ought not to have been slain. Her fate was wholly unmerited. She was a most useful fowl. There are lots of bipeds of our race who don't know as much as she did. Conspicuous for their folly among this class are the people who persistently dose themselves with violent drugs, which either have a tendency to aggravate the complaints they are claimed to cure, or else to cause a most pernicious disturbance of the system. Among intelligent physicians the use of "drastic" or violent medicines has passed away with other fallacies like blistering and bleeding. The Doctor Sagrafors are an extinct race, happily for mankind. Hostetter's Stomach Bitters is the best possible substitute for drugs in malaria, dyspeptic or bilious cases, and when the kidneys or bladder are inactive, or where there is a tendency to rheumatism. It is also an unequalled tonic and medicinal stimulant.

Mrs. Nuriel—You can't think, brother Caleb, what an expense it's been to us, learning Amelia to play the piano.
Brother Caleb (dolefully)—I can't compare with what I had to pay out when George was learning to play the races. And he didn't learn much, either.

Mrs. E. E. Davis, of San Miguel, Cal., says: "I am trying in a measure to repay the manufacturers of Chamberlain's Cough Remedy for the great good their remedy has done me. For years I was a constant sufferer from weak lungs and bronchial asthma. My rest at night was disturbed by a hacking cough, so that I felt miserable the greater part of the time. Many remedies recommended by friends were tried, none of which proved suitable to my case. I did not experience any beneficial results until I began taking Chamberlain's Cough Remedy. After two bottles of the large size have been used I am pleased to state, my health is better than it has been for years. The soreness has left my lungs and chest and I can breathe easily. It has done me so much good that I want all who are suffering from lung troubles, as I was, to give it a trial. For sale by A. C. Ireland, Jr."

Mary Klein, a servant of Eugene Schwab saw two burglars leave the house yesterday by the front door. She yelled and they dropped their bundles and ran. The bundles were found to contain $700 worth of clothing. There is $300 worth of jewelry and silverware missing from the house. The police have made no arrests yet.

The World's Fair Tests showed no baking powder so pure or so great in leaving power as the Royal.

Do you remember, Julian, why they shot poor Saint Sebastian full of arrows? Cause they hadn't any gun.

I think I will have a special bicycle sermon next Sunday.
Why, only a few Sundays ago you preached a sermon denouncing the wheel. Yes, but since then nearly every one in the parish has bought one.

Last August while working in the harvest field I became overheated, was suddenly attacked with cramps and was nearly dead. Mr. Cummings, the druggist, gave me a dose of Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhoea Remedy which completely relieved me. I now keep a bottle of the remedy handy. A. M. Yes! sighed the opera manager; we had a pretty rough season every way. But what took the sand out of me was the row between Dr. Recker, the leading tenor, and Squachi, the prima donna. You know what an awkward stage presence Dr. Recker has? Well, he stepped on Squachi's train thirteen times during one performance, and the next night she came on as Marguerite, in bloomers. That came mighty near breaking us.

Mrs. S. A. Kell, of Pamona, Cal., had the bad luck to sprain her ankle. "I tried several liniments," she says, "but was not cured until I used Chamberlain's Pain Balm. That remedy cured me and I take pleasure in recommending it and testifying to its efficacy." This medicine is also of great value for rheumatism, lame back, pains in the chest, pleurisy and all deep-seated and muscular pains. For sale by A. C. Ireland, Jr.

A LYRIC OF JOY.

Over the shoulders and slopes of the dune I saw the white daisies go down to the sea, A host in the sunshine, a snowdrift in June, The people God sends us to set our hearts free.

The bobolinks rattled them up from the dell, The orioles whistled them out of the wood, And all of their singing was, "Earth, it is well!"

And all of their dancing was, "Life, thou art good!"

MADE FOR TWO.

Jack Hinkston was her slave, bound hand and foot to her chariot wheel, or perhaps it would be modern to say, now that she has taken to cycling, that he was bound to her bicycle wheel. She had flouted him and scorned him for upward of two years, and in despair Jack set himself against her bonds. It was a slow and painful process, and the bonds had a habit of slipping again into hard knots when he caught a glimpse of Cissie, and Jack had almost made up his mind to emigrate to some outlandish country, for he feared he would never see his own man again unless a very broad and extensive ocean rolled between them. No matter how stern his resolutions were, they faded away to nothingness when he met Cissie in a new, pretty and stylish dress, for every costume she adopted seemed to be even more fetching than the last. Clothes have so much to do with the appearance of a pretty girl. The trouble with Jack was that he had too much respect for women in general, and they all knew that and consequently despised him, Cissie being the leader in scoffing contempt on poor Hinkston, who, after all, was only a fellow who did not realize that girls as a rule are somewhat silly and more apt to take up with a shadow brained, conceited rascal than with a fellow of genuine worth like Jack Hinkston.

Jack had heard that Cissie had taken to the bicycle, but he had never seen the young lady on a machine. For the past week or two Jack had avoided Cissie, and his resolutions of abandonment had so strengthened themselves that he felt he would never see her again. He was quite sure that she was in tears, and Jack, waiting for a reply, smoked on in silence.

"At last he said in a gentler voice: "Look here, Cissie, if you ask me very nicely, I will take off that pneumatic tire and mend it in five minutes by the watch."

Cissie looked up again with something like her former indignation in her eyes. "I'll throw the machine into the stream," she said, "before I will ask you to mend it."
"Just as you please, Cissie," replied Jack, clasping his hands behind his head and leaning back in luxurious enjoyment of his pipe. "Just as you please. The day is my own, and I suppose you will wait here till night before you venture back home again. Out of the kindness of my heart I will stay here, not to look out for you, for I shall gaze at the tops of the trees as much as possible, and not to talk to you, for if there is anything in this world I abhor it is an impudent, cheeky boy. But this lane is a great place for traps and gophers, and I suppose very dark at night, because of the overhanging trees. It is a gruesome thoroughfare and a nasty place in which to meet a villain after the sun has gone down."

"I have already met a villain and a brute," sobbed Cissie, who had now let the bicycle go and had buried her face in her hands.
"If you refer to me, Cissie," said Jack, "this is simply like most of the things you have said—not true. I am only too pleased to be of any assistance to anybody; but, at the same time, although you might not have thought it by my former conduct, I am too proud to offer any assistance unasked."

Jack smoked on, gazing up, as he had promised, at the tree tops. The silence was broken only by the sweet singing of the birds and now and then by a quick catch of the breath on the part of Cissie. Five minutes elapsed and then ten.
"Jack!" said Cissie, without raising her head.
"Did you speak?" inquired the young man.
"Jack," she said, "I am perfectly helpless, and I think you have been very kind to me."
"All right," said the young man, rising to his feet. "I will go away. But do try to get out of this lane before darkness comes on."
"Don't go away," cried Cissie. "Please forgive what I said, and won't you be so kind as to mend my tire?"
Jack picked up the bicycle, took off the dripping lamp, turned the machine quickly wrong side up, took the materials out of his own eye pouch, had the tire off and on again and pumped full in an incredibly short space of time. Righting the machine and putting the lamp on once more, he held out his hand.

Cissie reluctantly got on her feet.
"There," he said, "you see how quickly a thing is fixed when the time is not wasted in foolish conversation. Least said, soonest mended. Are you going any farther, Cissie? If you are, I would advise you to walk your machine over these stones."
"No," said Cissie, with a deep, quivering sigh, "I am going home as quickly as I can, and then I will cure this awful costume. I did not really want to put it on, but all the girls in our club have one."
"Cissie," said the young man, slipping his arm around the natty, tailor made coat, the costume is all right, and don't you be bluffed. It looks as pretty as a picture and suits you down to the ground. When a girl talks kindly, it's simply one of the naggiest costumes that ever was constructed by a tailor, but I say, Cissie, don't you think we have misunderstood each other for a long time now, and don't you think that a bicycle man for two would require less exertion than a couple of single machines?"
"I don't know but it would," said Cissie, looking up with a smile that was all the sweeter because there was just the slightest suspicion of a quiver at the corners of her pretty lips.
And then Jack, with a villainy that surprised himself, taking advantage of the lonely situation, stooped down and kissed her, and Cissie, realizing the futility of resistance, did not resist.—Robert Barr in Detroit Free Press.

The chronic convalescent still lives, but there are less cases of chronic indigestion and dyspepsia than formerly. knives she looked for a moment as if she was going to burst out crying, for it had taken some brains to get out for the first time in knickerbockers. However, instead of crying she blazed out at him in anger:
"What business is it of yours," she cried, "how I am dressed? You are nothing to me, and I am sure I don't care a penny for your opinion one way or another."
"I don't suppose you do," said Jack, striking a match and lighting his pipe. "I used to be under the impression that you knew how to dress. I am not any longer. I used to think that you could not put on anything that would be unbecoming. Now I hold a such opinion. I once had an idea that nothing you put on would make a guy of you, but now, Cissie, that idea has fled. Still I must say that I admire your bravery in coming out in the daylight where people can see you in such a flimsy, flimsy attire. You are to be congratulated on the skirts of that coat. The hard things you have said to me when you had on a pretty lawn tennis costume, for instance, do not affect me a bit when they are said by one who merely looks like a saucy, impudent boy. You see, Cissie, I look down upon you as you once looked down upon me."
"How dare you say you look down upon me?" said Cissie.
"Because it's true," answered the young man calmly. "This bank is ever so much higher than the one you are sitting on, or rather were sitting on, for now you are trying to crouch out of sight, and I don't wonder at it. I take back all those numerous offers of marriage I made to you."
"You wretch!" she cried, springing to her feet. "You take them back, do you, when you know very well they were all rejected and scorned?"
"Oh, Cissie!" cried the young man, turning away his head. "Sit down again. Do sit down. The costume doesn't look so bad on a bicycle, but it is simply awful when a girl stands up."
When he looked around again, Cissie had sat down and had drawn her bicycle up to its wheels, crouching in a measure behind it, as if with its spindly tires it could hide the awfulness of the costume.
"Well, Cissie," cried Jack, "when are you going to get at mending that tire?"
"—I—I—I don't know anything about tires," sobbed Cissie.
"Ah," said the young man, with a long breath. "I thought that was the case. A woman never knows how to do anything well except sleep. Most things in this world a man can do better than a woman, and that fact never becomes so apparent as when a woman tricks herself out as a man. Then her general fatuity becomes apparent, even to an infatuated fool like myself."
Cissie had bent her head upon her hands, which rested on the saddle of her seat. It was quite evident that she was in tears, and Jack, waiting for a reply, smoked on in silence.

"At last he said in a gentler voice: "Look here, Cissie, if you ask me very nicely, I will take off that pneumatic tire and mend it in five minutes by the watch."

women often feel the effect of too much gaiety—balls, theatres, and teas in rapid succession find them worn out, or "run down" by the end of the season. They suffer from nervousness, sleeplessness and irregularities. The smile and good spirits take flight. It is time to accept the help offered in Doctor Pierce's Favorite Prescription. It's a medicine which was discovered and used by a prominent physician for many years in all cases of "female complaint" and the nervous disorders which arise from it. The "Prescription" is a powerful uterine tonic and nerve, especially adapted to woman's delicate wants for it regulates and promotes all the natural functions, builds up, invigorates and cures.
Many women suffer from nervous prostration, or exhaustion, owing to congestion or to disorder of the cerebral functions. The waste products should be quickly got rid of, the local source of irritation relieved and the system invigorated with the "Prescription." Do not take the so-called celery compounds, and nerves which only put the nerves to sleep, but get a lasting cure with Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription.

"FEMALE WEAKNESS."
Mrs. WILLIAM HOOPER, of Bellefonte, Pa., writes: "I had been a great sufferer from 'female weakness.' I tried three doctors; they did me no good. I thought I was an invalid forever. But I heard of Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription, and then I wrote to him and he told me just how to take it. I took eight bottles, and now I feel entirely well. I could stand on my feet only a short time, and now I do all my work for my family of five."
