THE SAN PEDRO MINING DISTRICT

An Interesting and Authoritative Description Published by the Engineering and Mining Journal.

REGION RICH IN MINERALS

The Origin of the Gold, Galena, and Copper Deposits in Southern Santa Fe County and a Description of the Formation in Which They Are Found.

The Engineering and Mining Journal of last Saturday published an interesting six-column article on the ore deposits of the San Pedro district in Santa Fe county. The article is illustrated with photographs and drawings and is written by Richard S. McCaffery, manager of the copper mines of the Santa Fe Gold and Copper Company at San Pedro, in conjunction with Morrison B. Young. The following is a synopsis of the article:

In the southern part of Santa Fe county there are three groups of mountains, each of which penetrates the Carboniferous and Cretaceous sedimentary strata as a unit and presents in the main the same characteristics and appearance. They extend in a north and south line and in order from the north, are the Ortiz, the Tuertos and the South Mountains. The region has long been known for its mineral wealth.

The mountains present a striking feature, which first attract attention as one approaches the district over the plains from the east. They resemble each other so closely in appearance and height that the question naturally arises: Are not the three related in some way geologically? To the north is the Ortiz group, a cluster of sharp, cone-like peaks, formed by the breaking of the eruptive syenite-porphry through the flat beds of limestone and sandstone of the Carboniferous and Cretaceous age. These beds have been slightly lifted by the intrusion, and slope away from the mountains with a gentle and even dip. Four miles to the south is the Tuerto or San Pedro group, the geology of the western portion of which is the one exception to the rule of this trio. This western part consists of San Pedro mountain proper, the greater part of which is formed of tilted sedimentary beds; but the eastern part of the group, including Oroquival mountain, consists entirely of the eruptive syenite-porphry, with its sharp topography similar to the Ortiz group. Again, three miles farther south, is South Mountain, which really includes several peaks and numerous spurs. This is also formed by an intrusion of syenite-porphry, and shows the same topography as the first two groups.

A short distance north of the Ortiz mountains, but beyond the area of eruptives, is situated the colliery town of Madrid, where the Colorado Fuel and Iron Company is working beds of both bituminous and anthracite coal. In the foothills northeast of the Ortiz mountains is the ancient mining village of Dolores. On the west side of the Tuerto group is Golden, a small adobe town inhabited mostly by natives, who work in the neighboring mines or who dry wash the placers in the vicinity. About two miles south of Golden is San Pedro, built up chiefly by the development of the copper properties thereabout. Although the region has been known for a very long time, there are only a few mines which have reached any noteworthy development in their underground workings, so that in many cases the interpretation of the geological features of the ore deposits is difficult.

The ore deposits may be divided into four classes: (1) Contact-deposits of copper; (2) lead-silver chippings; (3) gold-veins; and (4) gold placers.

Under the first head come the deposits worked for copper in the immediate neighborhood of San Pedro. As mentioned before, the western portion of the Tuertos is formed of syenite-porphry with a crown of limestone and shales, which are intensely metamorphosed, and which contain the copper. The deposits are of the class recently described by Lindgren as contact deposits. The origin of the ore is certainly due to the pneumatolytic action resulting from a very forcible intrusion of a molten magma from the earth's interior among beds of limestone. Gases and vapor were liberated and caused to penetrate into the cracks and crevices of the superincumbent mass. The limestone has been replaced by massive garnet, which is in some cases 150 feet thick. In intimate association with the garnet the ore occurs as chalcopyrite; while its associated minerals are specular hematite, epidote, vesuvianite, wollastonite, quartz and calcite. The ore is always accompanied by garnet, although the garnet does not in all places carry ore. When the garnet carries the ore, the chalcopyrite is disseminated throughout its mass, and appears to be of synchronous origin. (To be continued.)

A MURDER AT CIMARRON.

A Quarrel Among Children Ended in a Deadly Feud on Sunday Evening.

At 9 o'clock Sunday night at Cimarron, Colfax county, B. S. Payne shot and mortally wounded E. Y. Shook, three of the shots taking effect in the abdomen and liver.

Sunday morning the Payne and Shook children quarreled and later the parents met during the day and exchanged words. At 8:30 Sunday evening they met again and it is said Shook assaulted Payne, and the latter stood him off with a revolver.

This enraged Shook, who left the Fanning and Daley saloon and went to his home, secured a pistol and returned and commenced shooting at Payne. The first shot hit a large metal button on his overcoat, just over the heart, and glanced off. Payne jumped behind a barber chair and, drawing his revolver, commenced shooting at Shook. The second shot by Shook tore across the back of Payne's head, making an ugly wound. Nine shots were exchanged by the two men. Shook was carried by his home and a physician was called from Springer. Shook died at 11 o'clock Monday morning.

From one dozen to twenty copies of the New Mexican are sent out daily to enquiries and applicants concerning Santa Fe. This is the very best kind of advertisement and is bearing good fruit, as the large number of tourists and health-seekers in the city abundantly prove.

PITCHED BATTLE WITH STRIKERS IN WEST VIRGINIA

One Hundred Deputy United States Marshals and Deputy Sheriffs Attacked by Two Hundred and Fifty Striking Miners—Nine Persons Killed and Fifteen Wounded.

Charleston, W. Va., Feb. 24.—A pitched battle took place at Wright's coal works in Raleigh county last evening, between 100 United States deputy marshals and deputy sheriffs under Chief Deputy Cunningham of Charleston, and Sheriff Cook of Raleigh county, and 250 striking miners who refused to permit federal officers to serve injunction papers. The posse met with a mob armed with Winchester who defied arrest and service of papers. They followed defiance with hostilities, opening fire on the deputies at once. The deputies responded and the battle raged furiously for several minutes. Eight strikers were killed, 12 were wounded, 2 mortally, one colored deputy marshal was killed, 2 wounded and Special Officer Howard Smith of the Chesapeake and Ohio railroad, was shot in the arm. After the posse had repulsed the miners they followed up this advantage and secured the arrest of over 100 who were brought to Beckley under guard. Deputy Cunningham and posse have gone back to the scene and will arrest every one implicated. An ugly strike being in progress is the cause of the trouble. Most of the posse are foreigners.

He held a revolver at the head of Frank Cohen, the bartender, and demanded money. Cohen had a revolver in each hip pocket. He pulled one and fired four times at the desperado, who fled. It is believed that the hold-up who shot Ritchie became desperate this morning and wanted to raise money to leave town. The condition of Officer Ritchie is precarious today.
