Mrs. Alfred M. Berger entertained at a handsome luncheon last Monday in honor of Mrs. J. W. Reynolds. Covers were laid for twelve. The decorations were in red, and the costly sets of cut glass, china and silverware with which the table was covered, together with the decorations of beautiful liberty roses, and the graceful twining of smilax combined with the numerous candles in color to match the other decorations, gave a very pretty effect. The room was darkened, giving a subdued but rich tone to the colorings and heightening the effect of the decorations. A more beautiful or more artistically arranged dinner table could not be imagined. Seven courses were served, and Professor Perez' orchestra was in attendance, rendering sweet Spanish strains during the luncheon. Menu cards were hand-painted roses, the name of each guest appearing thereon. They were exquisite souvenirs. Besides Mrs. J. W.
