CLEARING HOUSE SCRIP FORGED IN EL PASO

Timely Work of Detective Billy Smith Saves Town From Flood of Cleverly Gotten Up Worthless Paper.

The order for the printing had been given to a local printing establishment, and about $2,000 worth of paper had just come from the press which the detectives arrested Wimberly. In the rooms of the men were found slips where forged clearing house certificates of a number of bank cashiers had been made, and they found the order given for rubber stamps of other bankers' signatures.

Other signatures were cleverly doctored and have deceived even the men whose names were imitated. Mayes claims to come from Fort Worth, Texas, and Wimberly, who confessed, says he is a miner from Canaan, Mexico.

The money was in $20 gold certificates, which had not been quite finished.
