"STATEHOOD FOR NEW MEXICO"

Curry Meets the President

Governor Curry, who is due to arrive in St. Louis today, is going to meet President Roosevelt as he said "on business of importance to the people of New Mexico."

There is considerable speculation as to what the business is, that our governor will discuss with Theodore Roosevelt.

It is generally understood that the question of statehood will form one of the principal topics of conversation and upon the president's reply to Governor Curry, will depend to a great extent, what sort of a statehood campaign is waged during the coming year.

But there are many matters of interest to the people which Governor Curry will likely take up with the president.

Most vital is the matter of the Curry administration in New Mexico. It is probable that the new executive will be governed to a great extent by the policies inaugurated by Roosevelt. He has said that he was a firm advocate of those policies and his trip to meet the president would lead to the belief that he will return to New Mexico, thoroughly informed of what the president has set his hand to accomplish during the coming months of his national administration.

And again, the attention of the people is called to the Roosevelt way of doing things.

No president we have ever had has made the effort that Theodore Roosevelt has made to meet the people, their representatives and leaders to the end that he might better understand conditions all over the great United States.

Our first president, George Washington, in an humble way, set the precedent for presidential tours when he made an historic trip through New England and was received with acclamations of joy by the people of the then small colonies.

But the precedent set by Washington, did not make much headway. Some of our presidents appeared to think that Washington city was near enough to the great masses of the people to keep in touch with the course of things. But from his first year in office, Theodore Roosevelt has made it a practice—or rather more of a habit—to get out whenever possible and shake hands with John Jones and Bill Smith, etc.

The result has been that no president we have ever had has been in closer touch with the people.

Roosevelt is facing the battle of his life in trying to control the trust fed corporations and prevent them from securing such a hold upon the country that they can run rough shod over the people who pay the bills.

He has met the people and he knows what they need and want. But he has had the most gigantic task ever set for a human being. He has been threatened by Wall street with a panic which would bring misery and sufferings to thousands. He had ever pressure brought to bear upon him to stop his anti-trust crusade.

Often he has had to temporarily abandon the fight in order to recruit new strength. But when in search of success he has always gone to the people of the country and as a result, they are with him to a man.

The trip the president is making now, through the great middle west, is typical of the man. He is again meeting the people. Moreover he has called together with him upon this trip, practically all of the governors of the states and territories of the west. He wants to talk with them about conditions, locally and nationally.

Incidentally he is looking over every crook and turn in the greatest American waterway. He will talk meanwhile with the most skilled engineers and he will learn what has been done, what can be done and what should be done to encourage and make feasible, better navigation on the Mississippi river. When congress takes up the consideration of river and harbor improvements, Roosevelt will know what is right and what is wrong. Why? Because he has seen the people and talked with them about the river. He has seen the river and talked with competent engineers. Its Roosevelt way of doing things.

Consequently, when something comes up about statehood for New Mexico or other matters of the United States has seen. More persons have visited the executive mansion in Washington since 1901 than did in the preceding quarter of a century in the aggregate. Mr. Roosevelt has been and is the most democratic of presidents. He mixes with all sorts and conditions of people more than any of his predecessors. To a much larger degree than this was said of Jackson at his accession, the White House is the people's mansion, every day in Washington is the people's day, and Roosevelt is the people's president.

Commenting upon this phase of Rooseveltism the St. Louis Globe-Democrat says briefly:

"No other president has mingled with his fellow-citizens to anything like the extent that the present executive has done. During the six years in which he has been in the White House he has traveled through every state and territory of the union. He has also been in the canal zone at Panama, has visited the Panama republic, and has been in Porto Rico. On all of his many tours he has been on what may be called the public business, as he will be today when journeying toward the Mississippi, and as he will be for the next three weeks. More than any other president he is accessible to the people both at the White House and while on his tours. He has made more talks to the populace since his first inauguration than had been made by all his predecessors put together since 1860. His face is more familiar to his fellow-countrymen from actual contact than was that of any other public man whom the United States has seen. More persons have visited the executive mansion in Washington since 1901 than did in the preceding quarter of a century in the aggregate. Mr. Roosevelt has been and is the most democratic of presidents. He mixes with all sorts and conditions of people more than any of his predecessors. To a much larger degree than this was said of Jackson at his accession, the White House is the people's mansion, every day in Washington is the people's day, and Roosevelt is the people's president."

The plans of the Knights of Columbus to purchase the Montezuma hotel at the Hot Springs near Las Vegas, for indigent tubercular patients is a worthy one. That organization is in its infancy to a great extent in the southwest but in the eastern states it is one of the largest and most influential benevolent and fraternal orders in existence. The organization takes care of its sick and helpless members and there could be no better home for them than under the deep blue sky of New Mexico filled with purest ozone and health. While Albuquerque would wish to secure such an institution, if Las Vegas is successful in landing it, this city will be the first to extend congratulations. We have a large council of Knights of Columbus here and during fair week, probably five hundred knights will be the guests of our local council. A class of about seventy-five will be initiated and the local council will give a big banquet at the Alvarado hotel. The Knights of Columbus is a worthy order and should be encouraged to make New Mexico as much as in the eastern states. The location of a sanitarium, and hospital here, will be a step in the right direction and our Las Vegas friends should do all in their power to encourage the enterprise.

Bernalillo county farmer had the nerve to bring a bundle of wheat office in which the stalks were six feet in height and heavy with grain. There was some discussion here as to whether it was a sample of a crop or whether it was artificial. But before that question was disposed of, a wagon backed up to the door and another farmer got out of the front office. The Citizen force had another surprise. It would not do to tell just how big that beet was. No one would believe it unless they saw it. It was necessary to get a safe moving crew back in the wagon. Both of these exhibits will be at the big fair. The Citizen started out to say was that the great American farmer using too many crops like the above to keep his place in history. What is coming? The leading agricultural section of the southwest.

Taft according to the Las Vegas Optic, said "War is Hell." The secretary and the Las Vegas Optic ought to change the quotation. It is not copyrighted.

Record finds it necessary to label the Morning Journal as "The Citizen."

WHY DID YOU COME WEST?

To rest, recuperate, hunt, fish, breathe fresh pure air, see mountain scenery, get a change, live a new and fascinating life under new conditions and get food that needs no pure food law.

That's why you came west!
There is a beautiful little valley that nestles between the highest mountains of the Rockies on the upper Pecos river; ideal altitude, 7,000 feet, and temperature identical with Albuquerque. Its streams swarm with trout and the woods and ranges are filled with game large and small. The ranchers live the life of the west. There are mountain lion, bear, deer and wolves for the hunter. There are saddle ponies to be had for the asking, rooms in a big, rambling ranch house with wide verandas, tent rooms or a cabin if you want it. The days are never dull. You see a great ranch and the genuine western life. Fresh milk, butter and eggs—all you can drink and eat. Sleep in blankets at high—fish in your shirt sleeves during the day. You couldn't spend more than $9 a week if you tried. Its the place you are looking for. Accommodations for both men and women.

Inquire this office or address THE VALLEY RANCH, Pecos, N. M.

The SEA TASTE

If you want the full piquant flavor of the choicest oysters, fresh from the cool depths of the ocean, try the delicious

SEALSHIPT OYSTERS

They are taken from the shells, washed quickly and put in a case of pure white enamel, sealed and packed in ice. They are not opened till they reach the dealer. They come out fresh, firm, unbroken and full of the delicious salt-water tang. The secret of their superiority lies in the use of the patent Sealship Carrier.
