EVIDENCE MAY NOT DISCLOSE WHO FIRED SHOT

Trial of John E. Copeland, Charged With Killing Anti-Catholic Lecturer, Presents Many Difficulties.

BY MORNING JOURNAL SPECIAL LEADER WIRE.
Galveston, Tex., Oct. 24.—Taking of evidence began today in the trial of John E. Copeland, bank cashier charged with killing William Black, an anti-Catholic lecturer, in Marshall, Tex., February 2, 1915. Clarence E. Hall, first witness for the state, declared in his direct testimony that Copeland fired the fatal shot. Hall was Black's assistant and business agent.

On cross-examination, James R. Stubbs, chief counsel for the defense, read from the records of the examination trial at Marshall, a statement by Hall to the effect that he could not swear who fired the shot that killed Black, as the lecturer, Copeland, and John Rogers, "were tangled up together."

"Is this record correct?" asked Mr. Stubbs.

Could Not See Gun.
Hall explained that while he could not see the gun in Copeland's hand, he saw the shot come from Copeland's direction.

Testimony given by Hall indicated that possibly he will be the only eyewitness of the shooting to be summoned by the state. He said he had been informed that Eddie Black, whom the lecturer adopted as his daughter, is now in Illinois. No returns on subpoenas issued for the girl have been made.

For a time today it appeared that testimony advanced during the trial might not be available for publication. Judge Clark, after an order was issued on order soon after the jury was filed, that publication of the court proceedings would not be permitted as it would render impossible the selection of jurors in the cases of George Ryan and George Fox, which will follow that of Copeland. He based his order on the libel law of Texas, making the testimony privileged matter.

Judge Reminds Order.
Later, however, the judge ruled that this order would apply only to papers in Galveston county, or to editions of papers in Galveston county.

Hall told his story of the killing without questioning. He said three men, called to see lack in Marshall, and, meeting him in the hotel corridor, were asked into his room.

"A fourth man came up, who addressed me and said, with his hand on his right hip pocket, 'You stay out here,'" testified the witness.

Hall said that later he learned that this man was George Ryan, and that another man who went in was George Fox.

"Next, a fifth man reached the door of the room," Hall continued. "I learned afterward that this man was named Winn.

Ordered to Leave Town.
At the same time, Copeland and Rogers engaged Black in conversation. I picked up the conversation when one of the men said: 'I understand you lectured here last night. You're going to leave town tonight. You're going to leave town tonight.' I asked him if he would like to see me. Then Rogers said, 'I'll be damned if you do, and seized Black. Black tried to get up and get his gun, but was pinned and felled. A scuffle followed.

A shot was fired from behind Black, he testified. He sprang back to the bathroom for safety, pulling his gun as he jumped. He fired at Rogers' head above Black's shoulder, he said. Then Black, Rogers and Copeland, who were together separately, Rogers fell and Black started.

Stands by Story.
The girl, Eddie Black, caught the lecturer, who called and ran toward Hall. Hall said Black pulled his gun, turned and fell across Rogers' body. "Then Copeland drew his gun and snatched it twice at me," continued Hall. "It missed fire. The girl ran in front of me. I pointed up to miss her, and my gun jammed. When I got it fixed the room was cleared."

Hall said he went out into the corridor, but did not fire any more shots. He stuck to his statement throughout the cross-examination.

Under questioning, Hall admitted he had not heard the first part of the conversation.

"You did not hear Copeland say then, 'We have come up here to protest against your delivering your lecture again,'" asked Mr. Stubbs.

"No," replied the witness.

Lecturer's Topics.
"Mr. Stubbs produced a circular, distributed in Marshall, headed 'The Rottenness of Bolshevism in American Politics.' It advertised Black as an expert who would lecture on successive nights, beginning February 2, 1915, on these subjects: 'Effects of the Confession Box,' 'Convict Life,' and 'Is the Oath of the Knights of Columbus True?'

On the back of the circular was printed a list of names of the Knights of Columbus. It declared the intention of the person taking the oath to wage religious warfare against all heretics, especially Protestants and Jews, and to extirpate these "hanging, strangling and hanging them alive," as directed.

Hall admitted he did not know the real object of the Knights of Columbus.

St. Joseph, Mo., Oct. 24.—At the annual meeting of the directors of the St. Joseph & Grand Island railway here today, E. E. Calvin, of Omaha, Neb., president of the Union Pacific, was made president.

The object in making Mr. Calvin president is said to have been on account of a dispute with the Union Pacific, with which system it is allied.

SECRETARY LANE PRAISES WILSON FOR WORK DONE

Strongest Republicans Unable to Find Flaw in Armor of President; People Cannot Be Deceived.

BY MORNING JOURNAL SPECIAL LEADER WIRE.
Syracuse, N. Y., Oct. 24.—With the approach of the campaign and the republicans have rallied to "find a flaw in Woodrow Wilson's armor," declared Franklin K. Lane, secretary of the interior in an address here tonight. When Charles E. Hughes was nominated, he said, he "felt a bit nervous as to the outcome" of the election, because he felt that if there had been any great mistakes by the administration, Mr. Hughes would reveal them.

Hughes Has Failed.
"He was the republicans' strongest man and he has failed," the secretary said. "The greatest men that the republican party has drawn to it, not only Mr. Hughes but Mr. Taft and Mr. Roosevelt, and your own state leader, Mr. Reed, have been challenged by circumstances to prove their right to the title of statesman, and each has done his best. But I ask you what plan, what program, what policy, have they presented to the American people more worthy, more practical, more American, than that which has been pursued by Mr. Wilson?"

Could Find No Flaw.
"They have done their best and they failed, not because they were without ability or statesmanship or without their intense desire to serve their country, they have failed because, with all their genius, they could do no better than that plain, unassuming gentleman who four years ago was in derision called a school master, but who has now risen to be recognized as one of the master minds of the world."

Might Commandeer Justice.
Mr. Lane said he did not question the right of the republican party to "commandeer a justice from the supreme bench," and put him at the public service, "making him president of the United States, if in a time of national crisis it was necessary, if he alone could save the country." The republicans talk much of Americanism, he went on, but "this campaign has shown that republican leaders do not understand America."

Might Have Had War.
Speaking of President Wilson's patience in his foreign policy, he said: "We are at peace when, if we had been impetuous we would have had every covard," and that "we have made no friends among the belligerents because people at war don't want judges; they want partitioners." He added, "perhaps you think it did not take courage to speak the direct word when spies filled the country and every mail brought threats of death and every coward of a politician prophesied political death, if Woodrow Wilson lives to write his autobiography or commits to other hands the documentary history of his administration, the world will know that he had nerve as well as patriotism and good sense."

Praises American Idealism.
The secretary went on to say that "the misunderstanding the spirit of this country who believes that by appeals, no matter how artificial or covert, to sectional prejudices, to religious prejudice, to class prejudice, or to race prejudice, he can overthrow the genius and the ideal of the people of this land."

GERARD CONFERS WITH PRESIDENT ON BERLIN WORK

American Ambassador to Germany Discusses With Mr. Wilson Every Phase of Situation in the Empire.

BY MORNING JOURNAL SPECIAL LEADER WIRE.
Long Branch, N. J., Oct. 24.—James G. Gerard, American ambassador to Germany, called at Shadow Lawn today to discuss with President Wilson what the ambassador characterized later as "every phase of the situation involved in my work at Berlin." He lunched with the president and remained with him afterward for more than two hours.

No Part in Politics.
The ambassador said he planned to remain in this country until after election, but would take no part in the presidential campaign. He talked freely with the president about various phases of the German situation, but refused absolutely to be quoted or to allow the publication of what he said.

"I am representing the whole nation and cannot mix in politics," he said. Mr. Gerard would not say anything that he had discussed the submarine issue or peace with the president, but in reply to each direct question, replied: "We discussed the entire situation."

No Submarine Danger Now.
He did say, however, that it could be taken for granted that he would not be away from his post if he believed any immediate emergency was threatening.

The ambassador said he aimed to see the president again before leaving for Berlin. He declared he would begin to make definite plans for sailing and would not do so for two or three weeks. He mentioned one boat sailing the middle of November and another the first of December, as one he might take if conditions were favorable.

Kaiser Solom in Berlin.
Ambassador Gerard said the German emperor was seldom in Berlin but spent most of his time on either the western or the eastern front. The ambassador is understood to have gone over details of conditions in Germany many with the president. He said that Gen. Carl Brasch, former naval attaché to the United States, was in the admiralty office when the ambassador left for the United States.

HEALTH OFFICER VERY IMPORTANT TO HIS LOCALITY

Constantly Increasing Numbers of Population Makes Question One of Continually Growing Importance.

BY MORNING JOURNAL SPECIAL LEADER WIRE.
Chicago, Ill., Oct. 24.—The most important thing in public health administration is the employment of the full-time local health officer, according to Dr. John F. Anderson, president of the American Public Health Association, who addressed the forty-sixth annual meeting of the association here tonight. The meetings will continue until Friday with some 200 public health workers present from all parts of this country, Canada, Mexico and Cuba.

Anderson aroused considerable discussion among the public health physicians present when he declared in the course of his address that it is not necessary that a local health officer should be a physician. "It is, of course, desirable that he be a doctor, if he possesses the other necessary qualifications," said Dr. Anderson, but he believed many men without medical degree could be entirely successful as local health officers.

Danger of Hate Unrealized.
He declared that few cities had yet awakened to one very common danger in the presence of diseased rats. "New Orleans in all probability would have avoided the loss of life and the great financial loss to the city and its citizens," he said, "if it had applied previous to 1914 those measures known to be effective in plague prevention. What has happened in New Orleans may happen to other cities."

Bad Milk an Important Factor in the spread of disease than any other element of food supply, was also discussed, and the present system of inspection was criticized as being not too safe and much too costly.

"We need a better state supplying milk to its own cities, and also to cities located in other states, inspectors not only from a number of cities within the state, but inspectors from other states all traveling back and forth and crossing the tracks of each other in their travels. This inspection could be done more efficiently by a corps of inspectors under a single head and working on uniform instructions. The federal government has not up to this time taken a decided part in safeguarding the milk sold in interstate commerce, though there are at least two bureaus with jurisdiction.

The bureau of chemistry has authority under the pure food and drug act and the public health service under the interstate quarantine act has the power to prevent the shipment of interstate commerce of milk which may convey contagious diseases from one state to another. Under this broad power, the public health service can prevent the shipment of milk from non-tuberculin tested cows and the shipment of milk from localities in which contagious diseases, the infection of which may be transmitted by their travels. This inspection could be done more efficiently by a corps of inspectors under a single head and working on uniform instructions. The federal government has not up to this time taken a decided part in safeguarding the milk sold in interstate commerce, though there are at least two bureaus with jurisdiction.

Community Health.
"In view of the constantly increasing numbers of the population who are entering into this country, the question of their health and the risks to which it is exposed is becoming a question of continuously great national importance."

This group of the population numbers some 20,000,000 in this country. The average yearly loss for such individual on account of sickness has been approximately nine days. This amounts to an annual loss of 746,000 years. In terms of dollars and cents, assuming wages at average $3 per week, this loss is about $740,000,000. At least half of this can be prevented.

Investigations into the working and living conditions of the 30,000,000 wage earners have revealed many things which are deplorable especially among the unskilled low-paid workers. In spite of recent improvement in many industrial establishments the fight against unsanitary conditions is still an uphill and arduous task. The elimination of health hazards from industry is not a thing to be expected in the near future.

Of greater importance is the inability of a considerable proportion of the wage earners of the country to maintain a healthful standard of living on the wages received. In all investigations the vicious circle of poverty as cause and effect of disease is found.

OFFICIALS TO DISCUSS FREIGHT CAR SHORTAGE

BY MORNING JOURNAL SPECIAL LEADER WIRE.
Denver, Oct. 24.—The shortage of freight cars which is causing uneasiness among shippers of fruit on the west slope, livestock men and coal producers, is to be discussed at a meeting of railway officers and civic business men here today. The public utilities commission yesterday telegraphed the Interstate Commerce commission asking that relief measures be instituted.

Officials of the Grand Junction fruit association estimated that more than 1,000 cars of fruit await shipment in Grand Junction alone.

It was said today that the railroad men favor a system of checking, whereby the location of empty cars and of loaded cars of long standing could more easily be distributed.

SWAMP-ROOT STOPS SERIOUS BACKACHE

This prescription was used by Dr. Kilmer in his private practice and was so very effective that it has been placed on sale everywhere. Get a bottle, 50c and $1.00, at your nearest drugist.

However, if you wish first to test this great preparation send ten cents to Dr. Kilmer & Co., Binghamton, N. Y., for a sample bottle. When writing be sure and mention the Albuquerque Morning Journal.

CAN'T GET OVER IDEA THAT STATE IS BEING JOBBED

According to St. Joseph Judge Developments May Result in the Dismissal of Jury in Murder Trial.

BY MORNING JOURNAL SPECIAL LEADER WIRE.
St. Joseph, Mo., Oct. 24.—Developments that may result, according to Judge Thomas E. Ryan, the trial judge, in a dismissal of the veniremen selected for the trial of Oscar D. McDaniel, prosecuting attorney of Buchanan county, who is charged with the murder of his wife, followed the publication of a news story here late today purporting to quote John T. Barker, attorney general of Missouri, heading the prosecution, as having said: "I can't get over the idea that the state has been 'jobbed' in this jury."

Portions of the article were read in court by Judge C. E. Stiten, senior counsel for the accused prosecutor, who demanded an investigation of that Attorney General Barker deny the alleged interview. Judge Ryan answered that he had drawn the jury of himself and was certain that neither side "had been jobbed," but that he feared the effect of the article on the jury's decision. He will decide tomorrow upon his action in that regard.

Wouldn't Draw Another Till November.
In the event that the present panel is dismissed, Judge Ryan said he would not attempt to draw a new one until the November term, two weeks from today. If that is done, a verdict cannot be reached before the November election, when McDaniel is a candidate for reelection. Much of the state's activities have been directed toward completing the trial before that time. Attorney General Barker denied intention to criticize the court.

Father and Son Guilty of Murder.
Portland, Ore., Oct. 24.—John D. and George Russell, father and son, pleaded guilty and were sentenced to life imprisonment in district court here yesterday, as a result of the murder of L. H. Hampton, a cattle man. Hampton was shot and killed while attending a dance on a ranch near here.

PRaises TOLTEK EXHIBITS AT THE EL PASO SHOW

Residents of Albuquerque who have returned from the 24th Products exposition and auto show at El Paso have much to say about the exhibit of the Toltalk Motor Company at the show. The Automobile and Page models were the center of interest at all times.

Visitors were also made welcome at the show rooms of the Toltalk company, where Manager M. A. Compton had a big display of cut flowers, giving the large showrooms a very pretty appearance. This company has come to the front wonderfully since Mr. Compton took charge and the demand for both automobiles and Pages now exceeds the supply available.

Smash the Hubbell-Gillenwater Machine

The republican state central committee has now given up all hope of the election of any of its national ticket. Privately its members admit that Wilson will sweep New Mexico and that Jones and Walton will be sent to congress to uphold his policies and carry forward his program of progress and reform.

The sole hope that the old guard now has is in slipping over some of the candidates on the state ticket. In reality they regard this as of more importance than the election of their candidates for congress or carrying the state for Hughes. If they can only elect Bursum governor and get their grip on the state government once more they will feel that a victory has been won, regardless of how the other candidates fare.

That is why, during the last few days, all effort at a concerted movement for the republican ticket as a whole has been abandoned and the minor candidates have been told to take care of themselves—that is why the supreme, desperate effort is being put forth to elect Bursum governor.

This effort will fail because the people of New Mexico have been fully informed as to Holm O. Bursum's record—because they know what to expect if the old republican crowd is returned to power. They have not forgotten the infamous Hawkins law, admittedly the most pernicious piece of legislation ever attempted in New Mexico, for which Holm O. Bursum stood sponsor and which was promptly annulled by a republican congress. They have not forgotten Bursum's record as a taxpayer, in spite of his attempt to gain credit from the so-called Bursum tax law. They have a lively appreciation of what they may expect from a governor in whose home town, of which he is mayor and supreme boss, the advertisements of his political opponents are covered over at the mandates of small bosses who are his political creatures—a town whose city council, completely under his domination, will not allow political advertisements shown on slides in a motion picture theater for fear the people will have presented to them the reasons why Bursum should be defeated for governor.

The entire republican ticket is riding to a fall. The old ring is in its death throes, and the desperation of its struggles will avail it nothing. The larger the vote on election day, the larger will be the majority for Wilson, Jones, Walton, de Baca and the entire democratic ticket.
