VALUABLE ROOSEVELT SILENCE

It was noted when Colonel Roosevelt spoke in Albuquerque that he was less kind to the republican local candidates than he was with the republican candidates of Arizona.

"He concluded with an appeal to the voters to elect Judge Joseph H. Kibbey, republican candidate for United States senator."

The fact that the colonel, when he made his speech in Albuquerque, refrained from appealing to the voters to support the New Mexico republican candidates for United States senator could hardly have been from accident.

"Chief interest centers in whether Colonel Roosevelt will advocate the election of the republican candidates on the state ticket. The colonel prides himself on being a preacher of righteousness, and there is justifiable curiosity to know whether he can square his fight against Barnes, Penrose, Larimer and their kind with advocacy of the election of Hubbell and Burns."

"But it must be remembered that the colonel is a 'practical' man, as he stated in a famous letter to 'My dear Hartman'."

Mr. Roosevelt religiously reads all that is said about him, when he has the opportunity. Thus challenged, he failed to respond. He said nothing excepting on national issues, aside from a few compliments to former Governor Curry.

There could have been no personal feeling on the part of the colonel toward any one of the candidates. Mr. Burns has been his friend through thick and thin. He was the last to leave the sinking Roosevelt ship at the Chicago convention, in 1912.

Why, then, did the colonel plead for votes for the republican nominee for senator in Phoenix and remain silent on that point while speaking at Albuquerque?

THE COUNTRY ON NOTICE

The league headed by O'Leary has for its announced objects in the United States three things:

- 1. An embargo on the shipments of munitions to the allies.
2. The breaking of the British blockade against Germany.
3. To fight in the United States Anglo-Saxon policies and sentiment.

For the accomplishment of these objects the first move is to be the defeat of Woodrow Wilson for president and to elect a majority of senators and members of the lower house of congress in harmony with the Teutonic propaganda.

Wild as this scheme may appear at first thought, it has back of it allegedly more than three million voters, and certainly unlimited money. Not only are the men who held the conference nearly all rich, but for the accomplishment of both ends the German empire would tap its war chest to the limit.

If the government of the United States should place an embargo upon the shipment of munitions, it would inevitably lead to war between this country and the allied nations. That war might not come until after the present European war is over, and it might come at once.

Furthermore, we would be in the wrong. Should we undertake to break the British blockade, we would be engaged in war with Great Britain, France, Italy and Japan within a week, and tribute enough would be laid upon our coast cities to finance the allies for another year of war, or those cities would be laid in ruins.

As to the threat to enter American politics for the purpose of Teutonizing this country, let them start it as soon as they wish. If they should elect Hughes, which is quite possible, they, in view of the exposures which have occurred, will find him about twenty-five degrees colder than any iceberg that floats in the polar seas.

And the French retook in a day what the Germans took in months of savage fighting and the loss of more than a quarter of a million men.

ROOSEVELT'S BAD "BREAK."

In his speech at Albuquerque Monday, Colonel Roosevelt said, referring to the recent "break" by Secretary of War Baker:

"This statement of Mr. Baker's, unquestioned in by the silence of Mr. Wilson shows that Mr. Wilson in his heart believes that Washington is no better than Villa or Carranza; that the men of the revolution stood on a level with the mercenary crew who during the last three and a half years in Mexico have murdered Americans by the hundreds and Mexicans by the tens of thousands."

Let us concede that Secretary Baker said all that he is quoted as saying. He has denied saying it, and President Wilson is hardly the man to demand the resignation of a cabinet officer without first knowing the facts.

If Secretary Baker said the things alleged, he should resign. His political future is ruined. It shall finally be established that he and the men of Valley Forge were no better characters than the men who now are robbing and murdering and outraging women in Mexico. But whatever Baker said, we know that Woodrow Wilson not only never has said anything of the sort, but he does not think less highly of the "men of '76" than Colonel Roosevelt.

That Baker, who is a young man with a great liking for speaking "off hand," may have said something of the sort quoted, we have no doubt. But that he was in any way reflecting the sentiments of President Wilson, Colonel Roosevelt knows in truth.

Furthermore, no man entitled to the confidence of the American people, would say that "Mr. Wilson in his heart believes that Washington was no better than Villa or Carranza; that the men of the revolution stood on a level with the mercenary crew who during the last three and a half years in Mexico have murdered Americans by the hundreds and Mexicans by the tens of thousands."

AMERICA FIRST.

Let every citizen, whether native or foreign born, exalt his country into the first place in his thoughts and affections. Let not the interests of any other country whatsoever be considered, where the United States is concerned.

If America is to be first in very truth, she must serve notice on all other nations that America is first in the hearts of all her citizens. That these citizens are proud of her honor and ready to defend it, but ever seeking honorable peace.

This great republic must be just to others, and demand justice for herself. She must protect her citizens in their full rights on every sea and in every land. She must stand full panopied in the midst of her hundred million citizens, ready for whatever emergency may befall in this war-torn world.

Theoretically, no doubt, all human beings, yellow, brown, black and red, as well as white, Moslem and Buddhist as well as Christian. But for practical purposes, about all the brotherhood we can know, politically, is confined within our borders. Vague, world-wide brotherhood, is a noble doctrine, and perfectly useless.

The retention of a brotherhood feeling for the people of some nation other than the one in which we live, is pernicious, especially since we are part of the government of this nation and must assist in shaping its policies, even when those policies conflict with the interests of the country of our racial attachment.

With Scissors and Paste

(New Republic.)

What amusing inversions of the 18th century romance the Arthurian legends present? No helpless maiden, struggling through three volumes of untrifling efforts of untriflingly dissolute nobles, to a band of innocent men in the clutches of as determined rakes of loaves as history has ever recorded. No wonder that the name of Galahad, the maiden knight, has gone down to fame, when one reflects on the desperate nature of the women who surrounded him.

They dashed into Arthur's most private councils or most illustrious assemblies with the demand that some knight leave immediately to do a piece of work for them—usually the killing of some other poor fool, and Lancelot at death, Sir Tristan or Bors, or Percival had to leap to horse and follow, regardless of the fact that Arthur might need him more than did the lady. These women roved the country at will from the most tender years to old age, seeking whom they might devour, and once they had marked a man for their quarry, heaven have pity upon him, for they had none.

"DEMON RUM" IN ENGLAND.

(Nebraska State Journal.)

Americans will be interested in some of the reasons urged in the memorial asking the British government to establish national prohibition during the war and for six months afterwards. Here are some of them: H. C. Wells, John Mansfield, Austin Dabson, Miss Corbell, Arnold Bennett, Thomas Hardy, G. B. Shaw, Sir Wilfrid Lawson, Sir Horace Plunkett. They include scientists, novelists, poets, philanthropists, socialists, liberals, conservatives. Thoughtful Englishmen are deeply concerned over what may happen when, the war over, millions of discharged soldiers are returned to the country to be pined with liquor while looking for jobs and readjusting themselves to the new post-war conditions.

TREES FELLED BY DYNAMITE.

(Engineering Record.)

Instead of an ax and saw to remove the tops of trees that are to be used as logs in logging operations, dynamite is used to shoot off the tops. After the branches have been removed, a rigger climbs the tree, with a set of irons to the point where it is necessary to cut off the top. Here the rigger is usually about 12 inches in diameter. The rigger ties a string of dynamite cartridges, fastened end to end like sausages, around the trunk of the tree at this point, inserts a blasting cap with about 20 feet of fuse in one of these strings, lights the end of the fuse, and descends before the explosion takes place. The treetop jumps into the air with the explosion and the trunk is left ready for attaching the rigging for dragging in and loading the logs.

PROHIBITION THROUGHOUT CANADA.

(Toronto Daily News.)

The retail sale of intoxicants has been abolished throughout Ontario, Manitoba, Saskatchewan and Alberta. Prohibition has carried the British Columbia, so that a few months hence alcohol will be unobtainable in bars, shops or clubs anywhere between the Ottawa river and the wide waters of the Pacific. Two-thirds of the population in Quebec are dry, and from the eastern boundary of Quebec prohibition prevails throughout New Brunswick, Prince Edward Island and Nova Scotia to the Atlantic coast.

Notes of Interest From State Museum

(SPECIAL CORRESPONDENCE TO MORNING JOURNAL.)

Santa Fe, Oct. 25.—Santa Fe is now one of the Big Six in the Archeological Institute of America, having to-day crowded Baltimore into seventh place with its 106 members. However, Santa Fe's ambition is to be one of the Big Four and to do this must crowd Rochester with its 127 members into sixth place, and Philadelphia with 134 members into fifth place. Perhaps, too, before very long, it can crowd New York with its 159 members into fourth place and be at the head with Washington, D. C., and Boston, Mass., of the fifty societies in Canada and the United States.

The ethnology of the Teva Indians, of which advance copies were received today from the government printing office, comes up to expectations in interest and completeness. The four volumes on the Teva Indians and which include the physiography by Director Hewett; the geography by J. P. Harrington; the climate by Junius Henderson, and W. W. Tolpelt; the geology and topography by Junius Henderson; and the geology by Harrington and Henderson, altogether a monumental work completed under the auspices of the School of American Archeology by its men. As the Teva Indians occupied the country tributary to Santa Fe, the books are of special interest here, going deeply into the folk lore and legends of the Teva Indians. As soon as the school receives its quota of the ethnology which is the product

MONTEREY.

We were not many—we who stood before the iron sheet that day. Yet may a militant spirit would give half his years if he could have with us been at Monterey. Now here, now there, the shot it heard. In deadly drift of fiery spray. Yet not a single soldier quailed. When wounded comrades round them would Their dying about at Monterey.

And on—still on our column kept. Through walls of flame its wither-slay. Where fell the dead, the living slept. Still charging on the guns which swept The slippery streets of Monterey.

The foe himself recoiled against. When, striking where the strongest lay. We swooped his flanking batteries past. And braving full their murderous shot.

Storm'd home the towers of Monterey.

Our banners on those furrows wave. And there our evening bugles play. Where orange bonfires above their grave.

Keen green the memory of the brave. Who fought and fell at Monterey.

We are not many—we who presided. Beside the brave who fell that day. But who of us has not confessed He'd rather share their warrior rest Than not have been at Monterey? —Charles F. Hoffman.

Canadian Pacific Strike Off.

EXPECT SADIE BLACK TO TESTIFY AT TRIAL

(BY MORNING JOURNAL SPECIAL LEADERS WIRE.)

Galveston, Tex., Oct. 25.—Sadie Black, adopted daughter of William Black, who was an accomplice of her father's killing at Marshall, Tex., in February, 1915, was partially disfigured today when attorneys said they expected her to arrive in Galveston and testify for the state at the trial of John Copeland. Miss Black's present location was not ascertained.

OLD OREGON GUEST OF HONOR AT KEEL-LAYING

(BY MORNING JOURNAL SPECIAL LEADERS WIRE.)

Valuing, Oct. 25.—The battleship Oregon, built on the Pacific coast many years ago, was the guest of honor today at the keel laying of the new battleship California at Mare Island navy yard. The Oregon came from San Francisco earlier in the day with the California congressional delegation headed by Senator James H. Hahn and some 200 civilian guests. The California is to be ready for launching January 1, 1918, and in commission the following year. She will have a displacement of 32,000 tons, a speed of 21 knots and will carry 58 officers and 1,922 men.

Deafness Cannot Be Cured

(Local application, as they cannot reach the diseased portion of the ear. There is only one way to cure deafness, and that is by constitutional remedies. Deafness is caused by an inflamed condition of the mucous lining of the Eustachian tube. When the tube is inflamed, you have a running or imperfect hearing, and when the inflammation is not removed, you will lose your hearing. Deafness is often caused by catarrh, which is nothing but an inflamed condition of the mucous surface. We will give one hundred dollars for any case of deafness (caused by catarrh) that cannot be cured by Hall's Catarrh Cure. Send for circulars, free.)

Sold by Druggists. See F. J. CHENEY & CO., Toledo, O. Take Hall's Family Pills for constipation.
