PARKHURST SCORED.

Lawyer Brooke Assails Him in Summing Up for Mme. Andrea.

Erving Too Ill to Appear and His Testimony Stricken Out.

Sentence in Hattie Adams's Case Put Off Until Thursday.

John Langdon Erving, Dr. Parkhurst's assistant in his crusade against disorderly houses, who broke down under severe cross-examination yesterday at the trial of Marie Andrea in the Court of General Sessions, is to-day suffering from nervous prostration at the home of James A. Seymour, 100 East Twenty-first street. He is not seriously ill.

Erving's cross-examination was not concluded. He became confused under fire, contradicted himself repeatedly in describing scenes said to have been enacted in Mme. Andrea's house, at 42 West Fourth street, and finally appealed to Judge Fitzgerald for relief, saying that he was sick. He was excused and taken to the District-Attorney's office, where he broke down completely and cried like a child, declaring that he had been disgraced by being compelled under cross-examination to describe things so revolting.

His family having gone to their country home at Rye, Erving was taken to the house of his friend Seymour by Dr. Parkhurst. He will join his family to-night.

When Mme. Andrea's trial was resumed to-day there was a big crowd in court.

HATTIE ADAMS'S SENTENCE POSTPONED.

It had been expected that sentence would be imposed upon Hattie Adams, convicted last Friday of keeping a disorderly house on the evidence of Dr. Parkhurst, before any more witnesses were examined in the Andrea case. Assistant District-Attorney Rollins, on the bench, however, directed William F. Howe and Assistant District-Attorney McIntyre into a consultation with him, after which it was announced that Hattie Adams would not be called up for sentence until Thursday.

It developed that the reason for the postponement was that Lawyer Howe had not finished the preparation of his points in a motion for a new trial.

Judge Fitzgerald declined this morning to say anything positive to the effect he received on Friday from Dr. De Costa appealing for mercy for Hattie Adams, or to say that he would not sentence the woman until after the Andrea case was disposed of.

When the Andrea case was called Assistant District-Attorney McIntyre explained that Erving's condition prevented the attendance of counsel, and Lawyer Beckwith, for the defense, agreed to let Erving's cross-examination go over until he was in condition to continue it.

DR. PARKHURST CALLED TO THE STAND.

Rev. Dr. Parkhurst was then called as the first witness of the day. He told of discovering his way into the Madison Avenue Presbyterian church and quickly forming the conclusions.

Coming down to the visit of his party to Mme. Andrea's early in the morning of March 15, he described the surprise that Mrs. Parkhurst showed on their entrance into the hall.

The time, he said, was about 1.30 o'clock. He and Mrs. Andrea, three and several girls.

"Some one of our party," said Dr. Parkhurst, "said that we had come to see her for any needs. Mrs. Andrea, who by the way has the money, replied in the negative, but added that she could give a better entertainment.

Beer, light wine and drinks and Mrs. Andrea proceeded to name to the the acts which would be included in the entertainment she suggested we should witness.

Dr. Parkhurst then related that the party went upstairs, witnessed the proposed entertainment and then left the house.

Mr. Brooke began his cross-examination by asking the divine if he had been interviewed lately by a reporter for a morning newspaper in relation to Dr. Parkhurst's testimony. Mr. McIntyre offered a strenuous objection to the question.

Mr. Brooke insisted on being allowed to ask the witness whether he had the reporter that he was not trying to reform the city, but trying to procure evidence in support of his views, which had been questioned by the press.

Mr. McIntyre insisted upon his objection and Judge Fitzgerald ruled the question out.

Then Mr. Brooke surprised the prosecution by asking Dr. Parkhurst if he had seen Mr. Erving looking pleased, slapped down from the witness chair.

William B. Hawes, a private detective and one of the four who visited the Andrea house on the night in question, was next called. He is a handsome youth. His testimony was in contradiction of that given by Gardner, Erving and Dr. Parkhurst. On cross-examination he said he saw the Andrea woman take the "marked money" from the detectives who "pinched" her, but did not see any of them.

THE CASE FOR THE PEOPLE CLOSED.

Edward Cooney, formerly a war detective and for the three years a police station, was called by Mr. McIntyre to testify to the character of the Andrea house. He swore that it was a house of ill-fame.

Detective Sergeant Gallagher, attached to the central office, testified that he arrested the Andrea woman at 42 West Fourth street on the evening of March 12 and afterwards locked her up in the Mercer street station.

McIntyre here closed his case for the people.

Mr. Brooke made a formal motion for the dismissal of the case, and in the course of his argument charged that under section 79, of the penal code, Mr. Parkhurst had by his action had committed a crime by appearing in the apartment of such offenders as had been detailed in their evidence. The motion was denied.

ERVING'S EVIDENCE STRICKEN OUT.

A motion to strike out the testimony given by Erving brought Mr. McIntyre to his feet.

"There can be no discussion on this matter," said Judge Fitzgerald. "I desire to be fully informed as to Mr. Erving's true condition."

Mr. McIntyre conferred with Dr. Parkhurst, and then informed the Court that Erving would not be able to appear for several days. "His condition is such," continued Mr. McIntyre, "that it has been found necessary to send him to the country."

The explanation did not satisfy the Court or Mr. Brooke, who insisted that his motion was proper and should be disposed of at once.

In view of the fact that the witness Erving is unable to appear," said Mr. McIntyre, "I will consent to his evidence being stricken out. I think I have enough evidence to convict this woman, anyway."

Erving's evidence was accordingly stricken out, and Mr. Brooke presented the case for the defense.

When he had concluded his presentation, Mr. Brooke called Dr. Parkhurst to the stand to identify a slender, dark-eyed young woman named Louise Marcat, who lived with Mrs. Andrea. Dr. Parkhurst failed to recognize her as one of the women present in the Andrea house on the night in question.

Next Gardner was next recalled. He thought that the girl looked like one of those who took part in the entertainment gotten up for Dr. Parkhurst.

At this juncture Mr. Brooke declared that the defense would rest on the evidence of the people, to go to the jury. He made something of a stir by interjecting a motion for a dismissal of the indictment on the ground that it was defective. He declared that the indictment originally bore the name of Jane Doe, which was afterwards changed without authority to that of Marie Andrea.

Mr. McIntyre explained that Mrs. Andrea had entered a plea on the indictment under her proper name, and Judge Fitzgerald denied Mr. Brooke's motion.

SUMMING UP FOR THE DEFENSE.

Mr. Brooke then began his address to the jury. It was necessary, he said, in order to prove the crime charged to show that the defendant had habitually disturbed the neighborhood. In this case there was a specified absence of evidence of that character for the people.

Concerning Dr. Parkhurst's part in the gathering of evidence, as well as that of Erving, he would say nothing. He would not question the motives that prompted them in their work or securing evidence, but would merely remark that if their intentions were good they might have been carried out in a better way."

RATHER SEVERE ON DR. PARKHURST.

"What Dr. Parkhurst's experiences were you will find in his own utterances. He a minister of the Gospel, came down from the pulpit and witnessed things frightful enough to warrant the belief he should go right under lock to those places and tell others there's shown only to illustrate the existence of vice."

"It is a shocking spectacle, that of a divine urging people to violate the law, to degrade humanity beyond any conceivable limit, and then resort to an attempt to fill in the service and support of morality."

Referring to Erving, Mr. Brooke exclaimed: "See the effect of Dr. Parkhurst's example on this pure-minded young man.

He had never witnessed such things until he saw them in company with his pastor. Is not Dr. Parkhurst responsible for the moral degradation which that young man feels has come upon him?"

"What a sad picture we have here: This minister of the Gospel taking this spotless youth from brothel to brothel, from orgie to orgie, merely to illustrate the existence of vice. No wonder Erving's letter is so terrible to-day! No wonder he is conditioned as to be unable to appear in Court! No wonder the District-Attorney has been forced to consent to the striking out of his testimony! These are the results of the mistaken work of Dr. Parkhurst."

The conduct of the Saviour in going among the outcasts to reclaim them, was referred to in contrast with the action of Dr. Parkhurst, and the Mr. Brooke went on: "This minister of the Gospel in this enlightened age goes among the outcasts, and says in effect to the public, you disgrace yourself, and I will help on and pay you by giving this he seeks to send them to prison, so that we may pose as a great moralist and the saviour of society. That is noble and Christian work."

Mr. Brooke finished his address at 1.50 o'clock and a recess was taken.

THE DAY IN WALL STREET.

Another Sharp Attack on Northern Pacific Stock.

WALL STREET, Tuesday, May 10.—The stock market was a little ragged at the opening, and some shares yielded ½ a 1%. Reading-Valley soon showed the greatest decline, selling down to 34¾, against 37 last night. The Northern Pacifics were subjected to a sharp assault, and the preferred dropped from 69¼ to 57¾, the selling movement being accompanied by rumors about the deplorable financial condition of the property.

Late in the day Reading rose 2¾ to 37⅛; Lehman to 45; Delaware & Hudson to 124; Lackawanna to 144; Jersey Central to 87½, and Baltimore & Ohio to 88.

OUT OF A BLAZING BUILDING.

Eight Families Rescued from an Early Morning Fire.

Three Firemen Were Injured and 21 Horses Suffocated.

Fire broke out at 2 o'clock this morning in some frame structures in the rear of the coal yard and stables numbered 224 and 226 West Sixty-fifth street, which, beside it was gotten under control, caused the injury of three firemen, the suffocation of twenty-four horses and the turning out of eight families from a tenement-house No. 228, which was imperilled.

Policeman discovered the fire, turned in an alarm and then roused the inmates of the tenement-house, who came out in their night clothes and found shelter in the Consolidated Coal Company's office opposite. All got out safely.

In the stables were quartered, all told, thirty-nine horses. Of these fifteen were gotten out, the others perished. Ten of the animals were the property of Isaac & Uri, proprietors of the stable. The others were boarders. Isaac & Uri's horses were saved.

Fireman James Ryan, of Engine 54, who knocked off a ladder by the collapsing of the wall he was helping to tear down, is believed to be dying. An effort to resuscitate him by pulmotor, at Engine 57, was nearly successful and was resumed with great difficulty.

An ambulance call was sent to Roosevelt Hospital, but the response was made, while Coroner Cook was injured, much to the hospital authorities' chagrin, by a wagon, but was taken to his home. The other injured were taken to the hospital without delay.

Two alarms had been sent in, and the trouble got the flames under control at 4.30 A. M.

Isaacs & Co.'s losses on stock are estimated at $10,000, and the building was damaged about $3,000. The horses suffocated were worth about $6,000. The cause of the fire is unknown.
