

WOMAN FOUGHT MOB OF 2,000 TO ARREST DRIVER

Miss Campbell Tells How She Held to Horse While Crowd Struggled.

Miss Catherine Campbell, Secretary of the Bids-a-Wee Home, to-day told how she battled for an hour yesterday afternoon in front of her home, No. 429 Fourth avenue, with a crowd of 2,000 persons, because she insisted upon arresting an eighteen-year-old driver for kicking his horse in the stomach.

The crowd turned unexpectedly against the valiant woman and tried to take her prisoner away from her. She was dragged a block clinging to the horse's bridle. The animal was knocked down three times by the struggling mob, each time limping to his feet, with Miss Campbell still clinging to his head.

Miss Campbell, still angry and bruised, told the story of her fight to a reporter to-day, after which she appeared in Jefferson Market Court against two members of the crowd, one whom she charged with assault, and the other with inciting the crowd against her.

They are Louis Newman, twenty-nine years old, of No. 115 Irving street, Mount Vernon, and Harry Kronenthal, a Bellevue nurse, of No. 1470 Brook avenue.

When the prisoners were arraigned before Magistrate O'Connor to-day Kronenthal was fined $5 on a charge of disorderly conduct and Newman had his case adjourned until Tuesday next.

Edward O'Donnell, the driver who Miss Campbell accused of cruelty, was arraigned last night in the Night Court and fined $5. Miss Campbell said to-day that O'Donnell turned out to be her only friend in the crowd after she had arrested him. He tried to help her up on the seat of his wagon, so that he could drive her out of the crowd, offering to take her to the station house.

DRIVER LAUGHED AT HER WHEN SHE CALLED TO HIM.

"I am all black and blue from the fight with that mob yesterday," said Miss Campbell to-day. "You see I have only been off crutches less than a week, recovering from a broken leg."

"I was here late yesterday talking to a woman friend who had dropped in, when I was attracted by a noise in Fourth avenue. I listened, and heard a horse neighing pitifully. I looked out of the window and saw O'Donnell kicking his horse in the stomach."

"I threw a peach stone out of the window to attract his attention. When he looked up I called to him to stop abusing his horse. He only laughed. That made me angry, so I immediately slipped a coat and shirt over my house gown and went down to the street. He tried to get away. I clutched the horse's bridle and told O'Donnell that he was under arrest."

"He tried to whip up the horse and drive away, but I still held on. A crowd collected, and they didn't seem to understand that I was doing a humane act and had the authority to arrest the driver of the wagon. All they did was leer at me and tell me to let O'Donnell alone."

"The crowd closed in about me and tried to drag me from the horse. It was then that I noticed Kronenthal who was yelling at me and telling the mob to drag me away.

"Three times the crowd, by sheer weight, as they pressed in about me, knocked the horse over. Each time the animal managed to struggle to his feet. In spite of his fright he seemed to know instinctively that I was a friend and he looked my face and did everything a dumb brute could do to show me that he was trying to obey."

"Finally after I had been dragged a block Policeman Connel came from the West Thirtieth street station and arrested the three men on my complaint."

WALL STREET.

Early trading in the stock market to-day was a repetition of the previous sessions this week—a brisk upward movement in progress in nearly all of the active features. The only change in the character of the market was the shifting back of Steel and Reading to their customary place as market leaders. Both these issues rose to a new high level for this movement. Steel was persistently purchased during the first hour, the price as a consequence moving up to 63 1/4. Reading was equally prominent with a 1 1/4 rise to 164 1/2.

Other shares trailed along with large fractional gains. Further gains were established at midday. Reading, Steel, Canadian and Union Pacific all bettered their initial prices by almost 1 point.

Large realizing wiped out the early gains, however, and closing sales were around the lowest of the day, with many of the leading stocks sustaining losses of 1 point.

LEHAR'S NEW OPERETTA REHEARSED IN VIENNA. "Eva" Has Dramatic Incidents and Fascinating Music—Many Managers Listen.

VIENNA, Nov. 24.—Franz Lehar's latest operetta, "Eva," had a dress rehearsal yesterday at the Wiener Theatre.

The book is by Willner and Bodansky. It deals with the adventures of a working girl, who, after some dramatic incidents, finally joins her lover, her former employer, whose overtures she had previously rejected.

There are some captivating songs and waltzes, which doubtless will become popular. Nevertheless, the critics think that Lehar shows a decline in originality, his work
