DE BRETEUIL, NOTED PARIS FIGURE, DEAD

Marquis, Who Married American Girl, Was Friend of King Edward VII.

PARIS, Nov. 4.—The Marquis de Breteuil, a noted personage in Parisian society and an intimate friend of the late King Edward of England, is dead. He was born in September, 1848.

Henri Joseph Charles Le Tonnelier, Marquis de Breteuil, was best known on this side of the Atlantic as the husband of Miss Marcellite Garner, daughter of the late William T. Garner, vice-commander of the New York Yacht Club, who with his wife was drowned when his sloop Mohawk was capsized in a squall off Stapleton, Staten Island, on July 20, 1876.

The Marquis de Breteuil was the son of Comte Alexandre de Breteuil and Charlotte, daughter of Achille Fould, a wealthy Jewish banker, who was four times Minister of Finance of France under Napoleon III. He served with distinction in the Franco-Prussian war, was a knight of the Legion of Honor and twice was a member of the Chamber of Deputies. He was 42 years old at the time of his marriage to Miss Garner at Pau in March, 1891. She was his second wife.

The De Breteuil had a magnificent mansion, the Hotel de Breteuil, in the Avenue du Bois de Boulogne, and it was there that King Edward VII. met Parisian society. Both had been his intimate friends from the time he was the Prince of Wales. They frequently visited him at Sandringham, and also King George V. from the latter's boyhood days. In the spring of 1912 King George placed the sash of the seventeenth century Marquis de Breteuil and his American wife and he remained with them until the following fall.

The Marquis and Marquise spent some time traveling in this country in 1909. When they arrived here they declared jewelry which was valued by the customs officers at the time at $230,000.

A son of the Marquis, a corporal in the French army, was wounded and taken prisoner during the fighting in the north of France in the fall of 1914. The new Marquis is Francois Charles Le Tonnelier de Breteuil, who was born on February 28, 1892.

DR. JAMES D. MOFFATT

Was President of Washington and Jefferson for 33 Years.

WASHINGTON, Pa., Nov. 4.—Dr. James David Moffatt, for thirty-three years president of Washington and Jefferson college, a noted educator and a leading Presbyterian clergyman, died here today.

Dr. Moffatt was born at New Lisbon, Ohio, on March 15, 1848, the son of the Rev. John and Mary A. McNeelan Moffatt. He was educated at Washington and Jefferson, the college in whose service he was to play so important a part. After his graduation with the degree of Bachelor of Arts he spent two years at the Princeton Theological Seminary.

He was ordained in the Presbyterian ministry in 1873 and became pastor of the Second Church at Wheeling, W. Va. While holding this charge he was married, in 1876, to Elizabeth Dargatzis of Wheeling. He resigned his charge to become president of Washington and Jefferson College in 1882.

In the same year the degree of Doctor of Divinity was conferred on him by Hanover College in Indiana, and a year later he was similarly honored by Princeton. In later years he received the degree of LL. D. from the Western University of Pennsylvania, the University of Pennsylvania and the Missouri Valley College. Besides his college work Dr. Moffatt was assistant editor of the Presbyterian Banner of Pittsburgh, from 1893 to 1905. In the latter year he was moderator of the Presbyterian General Assembly.

In 1915, when he was with one exception the oldest college president in point of continuous service in the United States, he announced his retirement.

Caroline Amy Bade. Caroline Amy Bade died on Friday at the home of her parents, 312 Third street, Brooklyn. Miss Bade was born in Brooklyn and was a graduate of Paolter Institute. At the time of her death she was engaged to marry Dr. Alfred B. Cooke of 358 Senator street. Her parents, sister and two brothers survive.

Mrs. John M. Freeman. EAST ORANGE, N. J., Nov. 4.—Mrs. Anna A. Freeman, wife of John Milton Freeman, who served in the civil war, died today. She was 69 years old.

CHAUSSON'S MUSIC SUPERBLY PLAYED

Frenchman's Symphony Conducted With Much Feeling by Dr. Karl Muck.

The first matinee of the Boston Symphony Orchestra took place yesterday afternoon in Carnegie Hall. The programme comprised Chausson's symphony, Wagner's "Elie Faust" overture, Beethoven's grand fugue, opus 133, and Brahms's variations of Haydn's "Choral Anthem" theme. It was not a well arranged programme, but it served to hold the interest of a large audience except during the fugue. A piano teacher in this town once told an ambitious pupil who wished to study the great C minor sonata, "Beethoven is not for little girls." His fugues are not for matinee audiences. And this one is better in its original form. It was played in masterly style.

However, there was satisfaction probably for every one in the performance of the Chausson symphony. The work is not new to this town, but it has not been given so often as to make it strictly familiar. It is a deeply felt composition, revealing an imagination of lofty outlook and a virile temperamental force guided by a well concentrated intellect.

Chausson was a pupil of Cesar Franck the noble influence of that Belgian master, who brought into French music a deeper note than it had before sounded. It would be difficult to describe with accuracy the rhapsody such a performance as the symphony received yesterday. Dr. Muck proved clearly that he was in full accord with the thought of the composer. He had searched the score thoroughly and followed its exuberantly wrought melism in all its variations and all its polyphonic surroundings with an exquisite clarity and balance of utterance and with a genuinely poetic feeling.

The Brahms variations were well done and brought the concert to a pleasing close. As for the youthful "Faust" fragment of Wagner it holds its own quite well, even in these days of favored ideas and turbid expression. Some will continue to prefer to the "Faust" "Musikalisches Charakterbild" on the same theme, or even to Gounod's first act.

FREMSTAD IS BRIDE OF N. Y. MUSICIAN

Diva Married at Her Country Home in Maine to Harry Brainerd.

PORTLAND, Me., Nov. 4.—With no guests present to witness the ceremony and no attendants, Olive Fremstad, grand opera prima donna, was married to-day at her country home on the shore of Highland Lake, Bridgton, to Harry Brainerd, a New York musician.

The wedding was a surprise event to the townsfolk, with whom the singer is a great favorite. The Rev. S. T. Livingston, pastor of the village Congregational church, officiated.

The diva built a bungalow camp when she first visited Bridgton, which since has become a colony for singers and artists. This camp she gave yesterday to her secretary, Mary Watkins, as a token of five years' service.

Mr. and Mrs. Brainerd will spend their honeymoon in the $50,000 villa in which they were married.

This is Mrs. Fremstad's second marriage. On April 15, 1906, in Salt Lake City, she was married to Edson Webster Sutphen, a West Point graduate, who was an importer of English automobiles. Her romance was almost a tragedy, for three days later the Conried Metropolitan Opera Company, with which she was then singing, was in San Francisco and she and her bridegroom had a day of terror in the earthquake and fire.

Mrs. Fremstad obtained a divorce in April, 1911, after filing a petition accusing her husband of misconduct in hotels in this city and London.

Mrs. Fremstad was born in Sweden, but came to this country with her parents when very young. The family settled in Minnesota. In 1891 she came to New York and studied singing with E. F. Bristol. Two years later she went to Europe and subsequently studied with Lilli Lehmann in Paris. Her first engagement was at the Colonne Opera House. She was engaged for the Metropolitan in 1903 by Heinrich Conried.

After the divorce, she was a prominent figure among the artists of that company until two years ago. She sang here with the Boston Opera Company last season.

Mr. Brainerd, who teaches both vocal and instrumental music, with a studio at 675 Madison avenue, is 28 years old. He is a member of a well known Connecticut family and has lived in this city several years.
