

From the Louisville Courier-Journal: "Wampus is an ingenious fellow. 'What has he done?' 'When his automobile smashed up he constructed an aeroplane out of the wreck.'"

A HAPPY CHILD IN JUST A FEW HOURS

If cross, feverish, constipated, give "California Syrup of Figs."

Mother can rest easy after giving "California Syrup of Figs," because in a few hours all the clogged-up waste, sour bile and fermenting food gently move out of the bowels, and you have a well, playful child again. Children simply will not take the time from play to empty their bowels, and they become tightly packed, liver gets sluggish and stomach disordered.

When cross, feverish, restless, see if tongue is coated, then give this delicious "fruit laxative." Children love it, and it cannot cause injury. No difference what all your little one—if full of cold, or a sore throat, diarrhoea, stomach-ache, bad breath, remember, a gentle "inside cleansing" should always be the first treatment given. Full directions for babies, children of all ages and grown-ups are printed on each bottle.

Beware of counterfeit fig syrups. Ask your druggist for a 50-cent bottle of "California Syrup of Figs," then look carefully and see that it is made by the "California Fig Syrup Company." We make no smaller size. Hand back with contempt any other fig syrup.

ELOPED AT PICNIC WITH MAN WHO HAD WIFE AND CHILDREN

But Girl Bride Didn't Know It Until Baby Was Born.

When sixteen-year-old Josephine Howarth brought John Abt, a big iron worker, to the home of her mother, Mrs. Mamie Howarth, No. 222 West Forty-ninth street, and introduced him as her husband, Mrs. Howarth was astounded. She had never even heard of Abt, but when her daughter explained that they had met at a picnic, had been infatuated each with the other and had eloped, Mrs. Howarth determined to make the best of it and invited them to make their home with her.

That was on April 20 of last year. On Dec. 2 a baby girl was born. Mrs. Howarth declared that the child must be christened in her church, that of the Sacred Heart, in West Fifty-second street, and on Dec. 20 Abt held his baby in his arms and proudly declared himself the father.

Four days later the infant died. Abt seemed broken hearted and Josephine could scarcely be consoled. Mrs. Howarth was deeply grieved, too, but it didn't prevent her from noticing that Abt was usually away from home three nights a week and, somehow, his explanation that work was so heavy he had to sleep in the foundry didn't ring true. At last she demanded flatly to see her daughter's marriage certificate.

Abt and Josephine laughed at her mother's suspicions. Of course, they had been regularly married; she needn't worry. When this was all the reply she could get to her demand she summoned both of them to the West Side Police Court on March 2. It stormed hard that day, but Mrs. Howarth tried to court and waited all day. Neither Abt nor her daughter appeared and the night they did not return to Mrs. Howarth's home. Detective Burgess could get no trace of the pair till last night, when he learned that Abt lived at No. 73 Sutton street, Greenpoint. He went there and was admitted by a woman to whose skirts clung three small children, while she held an infant in her arms. "I am Mrs. Abt," she said, when Burgess asked for Abt, and, when the detective pointed to a girl who was asleep on a lounge and asked who she was, the wife replied: "She is a poor girl whom I took in because she was homeless. On last March 2 my husband came in late and told me there was an awfully pathetic case of a young girl, homeless, who had been robbed of her savings. He suggested that we might take her in and I agreed. She has been with us ever since."

It was Josephine Howarth Burgess. After he had explained the case to Mrs. Abt, he took Abt and the girl in his automobile and started for the station. He stopped at Mrs. Howarth's home to notify her that her daughter had been found, but the mother, seeing them from a window, rushed out and attacked Abt. Abt was charged with abduction and the girl was locked up as a witness against him.
