

FOUR SONG WRITERS OFF TO WAR WITH POETS AND ARTISTS

"White Way" and Greenwich Draft Boards Send Regular Cabaret to Fort Slocum.

It was a regular cabaret that went away to war to-day, entraining at the Grand Central Station for a training period at Fort Slocum.

Know Jimmy Lee? He's the slim, dark eyed, nimble fingered music maker who wrote "Oh, You Beautiful Doll." And there he was, with a carnation in his buttonhole and a fancy vest and a pair of shoes better suited for the Billmore ballroom than for the mud of Picardy. But he was headed for Picardy, proud of it, eager to learn as much about the Browning gun as he knows about seven brands of pianos.

And right beside Jimmy Lee, also wearing a carnation and joyful clothes, was Joe Foy, whose specialty is writing "mother" songs. He guesses he'll get some good ideas for that sort of thing before he comes back.

Joe Goodwin was there, too, composer of the "Liberty Bell" song, and with him was Michael Fitzgerald, who collaborated on the song. All these men, and several others whose talents have tickled the dancing toes of Broadway, were drafted soldiers of Local Board No. 136, headquarters at 165th Street and Broadway. They call it the "White Way Board," and the men propose to make their part of the army cheerful, no matter who else may be glum.

But No. 136 had no monopoly of genius, for there was the contingent from Local Board No. 153, which draws from the Washington Square district. Modest sons those. They didn't want to name names, but they let it be known that they had some poets and artists—and Greenwich Village can never be the same while they are gone.

Two trains of draft men left the Grand Central to-day. In the morning 415 entrained, and at 1:10 P. M.
389 more. That is a total of 1,004 for the day.

The Station was crammed with their relatives, friends, admirers, and there were bands playing the music that some of the "cabaret contin-gent" had written. It was a great send-off, cheerful as anybody could have wished.

One man was missing from the quota of Board No. 129, which takes in the district around Columbus Avenue and 7th Street. The missing man was Charles Francis Phillips, who has long been classed as a deserter. He is the former Columbia University student whose reluctance to kill Germans or to let anybody kill them has brought him more than his share of newspaper space.

Elmer Rasmussen, whose uncle, Major Andrew Rasmussen, was killed in the Picardy battle, was one of the Board No. 129 men who departed to-day.

STATEN ISLAND NOTES.

Bishop Burch will preside this evening at the spring session of the Archdeaconry of Richmond at St. John's Church Parish Hall, Clifton. The session is preceded by supper with the members of the Staten Island branch of the Woman's Auxiliary to the Board of Missions, which is meeting this afternoon. At the women's meeting, Bishop Tyler of North Dakota is the chief speaker, and Mrs. Van Bokkelen will tell of the war work of the auxiliary.

Members of the Staten Island Women's League for Service will assemble at the Borough Hall to-morrow morning to bid farewell to the boys leaving for camp.

The graduation exercises of the Training School at St. Vincent's Hospital will be held to-morrow evening.

and R. St. George Walker will make Man Seesselberger, Mrs. Eduard Wisely, Assemblyman Curley, Berent Visscher four-minute speeches for the Red Cross Fund at the local theatre to-night.

Curly High School will hold a "rally for nurses" to-morrow morning to assist in filling the demand for nurses at home and abroad.

Members of the Staten Island Women's League for Service will assemble at the
bid farewell to the boys leaving for
camp.

The Red Cross is binding up and healing the wounds of war—it is bringing relief to the most terrible misery and suffering the world has ever known.

The work of the Red Cross is human and practical. It knows no boundaries of religion, creed or race.

It appeals to everyone who loves his fellow man.

GOOD ADVICE—Don't put aside something for a rainy day; get the thing that will do service when the sun shines, as well.
It's one of the Sun and Rain Umbrellas

Of course. It may be as inconspicuous in character as the most conservative of us could wish. It may be as novel in color and design as the most daring of us could ask. It is smart from the end of its stubby stem to the top of its decorative handle.

It is serviceable from the quality of its covering to the painstaking care with which its strap or bracelet handle is adjusted.

Its possession is a luxury but it costs no more than a mere necessity.

Illustrated—Umbrella of dark blue taffeta, with wide grosgrain border. Tip of tortoise bakelite, handle of the same with top and bracelet of ivory bakelite. $9.94

SHERWOOD ADJUSTABLE ALL METAL SCREENS

FIT ANY WINDOW

Assure yourself of real screen service and practice solid economy by using this neat looking, durable screen.

The adjustable metal frame operates easily in all kinds of weather and will not crack or rust. It comes in black enamel (baked on) or galvanized finish.

The wire mesh is locked in the frame—it cannot work loose. This screen may be used as a permanent outside screen—a great advantage, as it allows the bottom sash to be raised or lowered without removing the screen. It may also be used under the sash in the ordinary way.

It fits securely around the window frame, leaving no openings for flies to get through.
Two carloads of these screens just arrived. All sizes included. A few are listed below.
