

Does the Modern Woman Know Too Much Or Too Little About Love?

Madeleine Marx Answers the Question in Her New Novel.

By Marguerite Dean.

WHAT are the modern woman's ideas of love? "She hasn't any—she doesn't know what it means!" snorts one cynic.

"She has too many—she analyzes it to death," growls another. A woman herself has answered this question, however, in her remarkable new novel, "You"—the author is Madeleine Marx.

The fact is that the modern woman's ideas of love are at least as numerous as the facets of a great diamond, and Mme. Marx holds the diamond at many different angles.

"Love! How naive you are! As if love existed minus money. Here, this is me. I like to go where there are shops. I say to myself: I should like to have that, and that and that."

Look Your Best

By Doris Doscher.

DEAR MISS DOSCHER: I am twenty-eight, 5 feet 7-1/2 inches tall and weigh 118 pounds. I think that I should weigh at least 140 lbs.

At twenty-eight years of age, 5 ft. 7 1/2 in. tall, 145 pounds would be only a normal weight. You need to change your mode of living to gain these extra pounds.

DEAR MISS DOSCHER: Will you kindly tell me what will remove pimples and blackheads from the skin and make the skin become white? Also please tell me what will remove liver spots.

WOGGLEBAUM is the brainiest millionaire in motion picture attraction. "But even if it was fixed up, as I suggested, it won't be no box office attraction."

Maxims of a Modern Maid

By Marguerite Mooers Marshall

Almost any modern girl is too kindhearted to turn a rich man down—particularly when she knows that the insurance company's doctor has done so!

Courtship and Marriage

By Betty Vincent

DEAR MISS VINCENT: In my acquaintance there is a young man, a nice sort of chap, educated and refined, who seems to be totally different from the rest of the men I know.

DEAR MISS VINCENT: I have given up my boy friend, who is eighteen, one year my senior. He is good looking and I thought that I cared a great deal for him until my girl friends discouraged me.

DEAR MISS VINCENT: For the last five months I have attended a business school in New York City and have fallen in love with one of the young instructors.

DEAR MISS VINCENT: I have simply what all high school girls call a "crush." The young man is at school to instruct, not to make love, and in all probability is engaged or has a mother to support.

Faulty Positions in Childhood

DEIGNED novelties are to be seen in sports wear, especially in the hand-knitted garments that are so popular this year. A fetching little slip-over jumper is in apple green and embodies several new style features.

Oyster Recipes for Lent

OSTER CROQUETTES. THESE can be made either with bread crumbs or mashed potatoes. In either case oysters should be thoroughly drained and dried between two cloths, the hard portion cut away and the soft oysters put through a meat chopper.

Oyster Pepper

Clean and drain one dozen large oysters. Add half a cup oyster liquor, two tablespoons butter, two tablespoons chopped peppers, one teaspoon tomato catsup and one teaspoon salt.
