SOCIETY FACES EXTRA ACTIVE WEEK

Horse Show, Beginning To-morrow, to Be Given for United War Work Fund--Few New Faces at Opera This Season

MUCH will be crowded into this week, which will mark the beginning of the fashionable season. There will be the great semi-public function, the opening of the regular season at the Metropolitan Opera House, the annual Horse Show at the Madison Square Garden and the big drive for the United War Work fund. As far as the opera is concerned there will be no evident change in the audience that will assemble. Opera boxes are held as much a part of social life as are town houses, and the owners rarely give them up, and then only on account of mourning. There will not be what are called "new" faces in the two rows of boxes or in the other sections of the opera house. The list of subscribers reads practically the same as for the last ten years, and as far as the orchestra stalls are concerned subscribers hold on to them as tenaciously as the owners of boxes. One of the features of the opera audience is the Metropolitan Opera Club, which this year finds a full complement of members notwithstanding that many of them have joined the army or navy. The club as usual will occupy the omnibus box of the grand tier. The officers for this year are Henry Dodge Cooper, president; Gen. William W. Skiddy, vice-president; Frederic Potts Moore, secretary and treasurer. The other members of the board are E. de Peyster Livingston and T. Henry Walter.

The Horse Show, which will open to-morrow, will close on Friday night, and its purpose this year will be in touch with society's present aim, as the entire receipts will be devoted to the United War Work fund. Last year the show netted for the Red Cross more than $60,000, and for this year it is hoped that the amount will be much greater. The entire cost of the show will be borne by the directors of the National Horse Show Association of America. Mrs. Arthur Iselin is at the head of Sparkes, David Bispham, Riccardo Martin, Sascha Jacobsen and Irving Berlin. There will be included in the programme a drill by a battalion of the Twenty-second Infantry Regiment and also music by bands from Forts Totten and Hamilton.

Associated with Mrs. Bacon on the entertainment committee are Mrs. Joseph W. Burden, Mrs. Oliver Perin, Mrs. Elliot C. Bacon, Mrs. Monroe Douglas Robinson, Mrs. Charles G. Cornell, Jr., Mrs. John E. Curran, Miss Olga Schulof, Mrs. J. Lloyd Derby, Mrs. Maxwell Stevenson, Mrs. A. Butler Duncan, Mrs. E. F. Eberstadt, Mrs. Francis M. Weld and Frank R. Southard. There is a long list of patronesses, among whom are Mrs. Charles Evans Hughes, Jr., Mrs. Paul Dana, Mrs. Arthur Curtis James, Mrs. Cornelius B. Mitchell, Mrs. Walter B. James, Mrs. John V. B. Thayer, Mrs. Frank L. Montague, Mrs. Austen Gray, Mrs. Paul Jones, Mrs. John Henry Hammond, Mrs. Peter B. Olney, Mrs. Paul G. Pennoyer, Mrs. George P. Montgomery, Mrs. Cleveland H. Dodge, Mrs. George H. Hodenpyl and Mrs. Otto H. Kahn. Boxes and tickets may be ordered from Miss Doane, 15 West Thirty-fourth street. Those who may not care to purchase either seats or boxes are requested to send contributions to the fund to Miss Doane. As the members of the entertainment committee and patronesses all have relatives in the service it is expected that the entertainment will be a great success in every way.

Since its organization the Junior League has been identified with many philanthropic schemes and for years the members of the organization, who comprise debutantes of each season as far as the new membership is concerned, have directed their efforts toward sustaining a settlement house in New York and ministering to unfortunate ones who have been confined in the hospitals of the city.
