

Above—Piles of Airplanes ready for the torch at Colombe-les-Belles, France. Below—the planes burning. These photographs illustrate part of the so-called "million dollar fire," in which "perfect" and "practically new" material is alleged to have been destroyed by order of American officers. The fires burned on for days. Congress is investigating to ascertain whether this destruction was the wanton procedure it is represented to have been—and if so, who wanted to keep the material off the market.
Copyright, Underwood & Underwood.

Three generations of the Bankheads of Alabama. Left to Right Col. H. M. Bankhead, U. S. Senator J. H. Bankhead, and Representative W. B. Bankhead. The Colonel is the youngster.
Copyright, Press Illustrating Service.

Chairman W. B. Colver of the Federal Trade Commission is now to be War Industries Board boss of wood pulp products, including all paper. Photo, Press Illustrating Service.

Copyright, Western Newspaper Union.

These recent immigrants have re-considered. They can hardly wait to board the ship that takes them home. Part of the great Back-to-Europe Movement now going on.
Copyright, Press Illustrating Service.

Here's material for a future historical painter. The President is seen presenting the roosters "Lloyd George," "Clemenceau," "Foch," "Orlando" and "Wilson" to thirty Alabama citizens who will auction them off to help pay for the Dixie Highway bridge over the Tombigbee. "Wilson" is the bird that is being dished up.
Copyright, Press Illustrating Service.