

PRINCE PU HAS A BUSY TIME

He Understands the Bull and Bear Wall Street Situation, but the Lamb Question Puzzles Him.

SEES THE THEATRE AND GOES BEHIND THE SCENES.

Has Arranged to Visit Gravesend Race Track To-Day, and Will See the Harbor on a Yachting Trip.

Under ordinary circumstances the son of a Chinese Emperor is a difficult person to approach in quest of an interview, especially when he speaks only his mother tongue. If you object to his first visit, his Oriental mind being still wound with miles of ticker tape, throbbing with the click of a thousand-doll tape writers, burning with the words of welcome of the President of the Chamber of Commerce and ravelled in shreds over weird references to bulls, bears and lambs, you are leaning up against something solid, if not inflexible. Therefore, an Evening World reporter who penetrated at the Manhattan Hotel the maze of apartments distributed to the comfort and use of Prince Pu Lun, kinsman of Kwangse, the dragon-faced ruler of the Chinese Empire, wearer of the royal ruby button and first josh-stick ruler of the Forbidden City, was not surprised to find Attaches Ping, Pong, Ching, Cheng and Fong quite distrustful. Even the placidity of Sir Chentung-Liang-Cheng, the Chinese Minister, was somewhat ruffled, and Deputy Commissioner Wong-Kai-Kao was altogether up in the air.

Persevering, however, the reporter reached the second ante-room to Pu Lun's boudoir. There he found six plumed retainers practicing their evening salaam, three bellboys, patting their knees enthusiastically as if they were attending a wing dance, as the Chinese rose and fell on their elbows, grunting "wang, dong, dong - wang-ding."

A few minutes later Mr. Ping and Mr. Pong came forth. They were dressed in plain, civilian jackets embroidered with red peacocks and dodo birds. Mr. Ping was smoking a Turkish cigarette, which he naively swallowed when the reporter asked to see His Highness. Mr. Pong raised his eyes to the ceiling and, with quiet grace, doubled up like a jack-knife.

As these preliminaries were rather disconcerting he was asked: "Will you inquire of His Augustness if he was impressed with Wall Street?" "Was he impressed?" queried in reply Mr. Ping with a short whistle that sounded like a messenger boy running. "May the roses of the Himalayas ever cool in ice," interjected Mr. Pong, "but

His Lordship was impressed. Even now Mr. Pong rubs the princely brow with orange ointment and explains that the wild beast mob in what you call the pit, was not hurrying in at His Highness."

"What did he think of the race of the Exchange?" asked the reporter. "What didn't he think of it?" put Mr. Pong to Mr. Ping, who was absentmindedly picking out his queue into a jardiner as if to tempt a trout.

Anxious About the Lamb.

"Ah," said Mr. Ping. "By the sun-spots on our forefathers' pagodas the Prince is attemper in deep thought. Mr. Cheng and Mr. Ching are explaining to him the difference between a bull and a bear in your Wall Street." Here Mr. Ping looked at Mr. Pong and both smiled as prettily as a Chinaman can smile without upsetting the slant of his eyes. The smile had humor in it nevertheless, for it conveyed a thanksgiving for the Ping and Pong feet were not at that moment in the China and Cheng sandals.

"But," interjected Mr. Ping suddenly, "we are to explain to his Imperial Highness the nature of a lamb on 'Change.'"

"What is a lamb?" addressed Mr. Ping to the reporter, quite suddenly. "Yes, what is a lamb?" echoed Pong. "A lamb," replied the reporter, staggering at the thought of being interviewed. "—"

"Yes," cried the Ping-Pong duet. "A lamb," continued the reporter, grasping at the air for support, "is—"

"—a sheep," he said. "No," Mr. Pong pressed his fist in his mouth to keep from shouting with delight. "Didn't I tell you to tell him a lamb was a young sheep?" he hurried at Ping.

"True," retorted Ping, "but didn't I say to tell him a lamb was a sheep's young?"

Pong-Yoh did; but is a sheep's young a young sheep?

Ping-It must be, for when a young sheep grows up it's a sheep, and when a sheep's young grows old it, or they, are no longer young and must be grown up like the sheep, and—"

A Letter to Home.

"Will you ask the Prince if he enjoyed the tall buildings?" was asked, thus opportunely interrupting what might have terminated as a fatal argument. Mr. Ping, glad to quit with the last word, sped toward the royal apartment. He appeared in a few minutes and made a high sign to Mr. Pong.

"Mr. Ping says," said Mr. Pong, "that His Highness begs to be excused, as Mr. Cheng has just caught the bull by the horns, and Mr. Cheng has driven the bear into his cave. The son of the Sun is now talking to himself over the telephone to relieve his mind from the strain of the day."

Here a bell-boy arrived with what appeared to be a note of business, a stout pail and a bundle of brushes. "I beg you to excuse me," said Mr. Pong, "I must write some letters to the folks at home," or words to that effect.

Met the Show Girls.

A novel experience for His Highness was his visit to the New York Theatre. Where he witnessed a performance of scenes to meet the players and see the scene set for the next act.

He was the guest of Gen. Charles A. Whittier, and others in the party included Sir Chentung-Liang-Cheng, Wong Kai Kah, the Deputy Commissioner, Frank D. Miller, the artist; J. B. Haggis, F. W. Whitbridge, Hon. John Barrett, J. W. Scherwin, Vice-President of the Pacific Mail Steamship Company; J. C. and John Poore.

Back of the scenes after the first act the Prince was introduced to Miss Vinnie Daly, who plays the part of an octonoon.

He could not understand her makeup until she rolled up her sleeve and showed him the white skin of her arm.

Going to the Races.

He complimented Elsie Fay, through his interpreter, Wong Kai Kah, for her vivacity, and remarked that Chinese players should take a few lessons from the mummery of this country.

As the party was being led through the ball room to the stage Senator Dewey remarked that a visit to the regions back of the footlights was a dangerous experiment for him.

Prince Pu will be the guest of Perry Belmont at luncheon to-day and will visit the Gravesend race track. To-night he will be the guest of Samuel R. Gertrude at dinner at the Metropolitan Club. To-morrow he will be the guest of Charles R. Flint on a yachting trip about the bay and harbor, and on Sunday the distinguished visitor and his suite will depart for St. Louis via Washington.

STRAW HAT CAUSED IT ALL.

Policeman in Rescuing Its Owner from Trolley Knocked Over.

Joseph Kilian's new straw hat caused serious injury to Policeman Wendenberg, of the East One Hundred and Twenty-sixth street station, to-day.

Kilian, who lives at No. 314 East Ninety-fourth street, was walking on Madison avenue when the blow came at One Hundred and Twentieth street and landed in the middle of the uptown track.

There was a car coming and the hat fell across the rails. The trolleyman could not stop the car. Kilian was stunned and could not rise. Of the way of the car himself and was knocked down and painfully hurt. He went to his home. Kilian's hat was uninjured.

VICTIM OF PIER FIRE FOUND.

Mate of Barge Escaped Flames, but Was Drowned.

The body of John Hanrahan, the missing mate of the barge Allen C. Church, one of the vessels burned in the Lackawanna pier fire last Sunday, was found to-day at the foot of Thirteenth street, Jersey City. Hanrahan met death by drowning, there being no burns on his body.

The police are looking for Hanrahan's family, who boatmen say live in Warren street. Hanrahan was the only one lost in the fire so far as known.

Hyomei's Success in New York.

Cured Many Serious Cases of Catarrh—Hegeman & Co., of No 200 Broadway, Will Refund Money if It Fails.

No other medicine or treatment for catarrh has ever achieved such quick and remarkable success in New York as Hyomei. The fact that Hegeman & Co., when they first introduced Hyomei, sold it under a positive guarantee to refund the money in case it did not cure, contributed largely to its successful introduction. A guarantee from a firm like Hegeman & Co. gave people confidence at the start.

If it had not possessed unusual merit an offer like this would have resulted in an enormous loss. But curing as it did, Hyomei soon gained an enviable reputation and made many friends, who recommended it far and near. Its success here in New York has been remarkable, and Hegeman & Co. are still selling it on their personal guarantee to refund the money in case it does not give satisfaction.

F. F. PROCTOR IS ON HIS HONEYMOON

Theatrical Manager of Chain of Continuous Houses and His Bride Have Gone to the St. Louis Exposition.

Frederick F. Proctor, the well-known theatrical manager, and his bride are now on their honeymoon journey to St. Louis. The bride was Miss Georgiana Eliza Mill, a recent graduate of the Misses Ely's school and the daughter of an old Knickerbocker family. The ceremony which was private, was performed by the Rev. Richard Bobden, of St. John's Episcopal Church, Larchmont.

Mr. Proctor has been prominently identified with the uplifting of vaudeville enterprises in this country and conducts a chain of theatres in New York and the East in which many prominent stars have found their initial appearance in this line of work.

Porpoises in Rivers.

Porpoises sometimes find their way into the mouth of the Nen from the Wash, and ascend the river for some distance. One is reported lately to have been shot from a boat near Peterborough, between Woodstone and Orton Stanch. It measured four feet in length, two feet four inches in girth and weighed over forty pounds.

NEW AUTOMOBILE LAW GOES TO-DAY

Hereafter Any One Caught Speeding a Machine at More than Twenty Miles Will Be Fined $100

The new law permitting a fine of $100 for breaking the speed limit in an automobile goes into effect to-day. The chauffeur who is caught going at the rate of twenty miles an hour in the park or along the avenue to-day will feel the pinch of the law in his purse if the bicycle policeman who catches him can prove his rate of speed to have been excessive.

Despatches from Albany say the Secretary of State expects to have the seals which are to replace the old certificates in the hands of all automobile owners that have filed application with him within a day or two. The chauffeurs' badges have not yet been received from the manufacturer. They will probably be sent out within a week or ten days.

Exchange Membership at $55,000.

A Stock Exchange membership sold yesterday at $55,000, a decline of $2,500 from the last previous transfer, which was at $57,500. It was reported that H. D. Spears was the seller and D. H. McAlpin, 24, the buyer.
