OUR TASK IN PORTO RICO

OUR TASK IN PORTO RICO. Educational, Financial, Political, and Social Problems that confront us.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 22.—"If Porto Rico is to become a credit to the United States," says Capt. Augustus P. Gardner, Assistant Adjutant-General, in his report on the educational, financial, political, and social conditions of the island...

In considering, says Capt. Gardner, the various elements which go to make up the social system of Porto Rico, the most worthy of a detailed examination is the method of education. It is on this branch that the fruits of reconstruction must be gathered in the future...

What purposes to be a census of the island is to be taken every ten years. But the only one reported, apparently, was that of 1887. This the population was 600,000, of whom 110,000 were of the color of the negro...

With respect to the system itself, different estimates are given. The best estimate is that the number of the island is 600,000, of whom 110,000 are of the color of the negro...

The city of San Juan, being the seat of Government, is comparatively favored in the number and quality of its schools. It has a normal school for each sex, a manual training school for each sex, and a school of agriculture...

The budget for 1898-97, which is shown as a sample in preference to the budget for 1897-96, is not shown in its original form...

The contribution of the State toward education amounts to about 1,000,000 pesos annually. This is distributed among the various schools...

Summarizing the situation as a whole, there is a general feeling of hopefulness as to the future of the island. It is believed that the reconstruction of Porto Rico will be a success...

Advertisement for FERRANIN TABLETS, a blood purifier and health tonic. Text: 'Blood Carries and distributes every ingredient necessary to nourish the whole body. The iron from all food (called ferratin) is the most important blood constituent, because it is the sole carrier of oxygen from the lungs to every tissue of the human system, creating warmth and strength, and maintaining life. Therefore, when in need of a tonic to build up the system, FERRANIN TABLETS are the best.' Includes a small illustration of a person.
