HOUSEHOLD FURNITURE THREE THOUSAND YEARS AGO.

The people who lived at this remote era of the world's history would doubtless have been very much surprised at many of the articles found in the houses of to-day. Helen of Troy would have been puzzled how to use a sewing machine, and the matrons of Thebes or Babylon would have regarded a packet of pins as a priceless luxury. Luxurious furniture was not unknown; and there are evidences still remaining at the time Cheops was building the great pyramids in Egypt, and King David leading the Jewish warriors in Israel, the dainty Assyrian dames reclined in scented boudoirs, the appointments of which would not be despised by a modern belle. From the hieroglypic-covered munuments of the East, it is shown that while the Israelites had not advanced beyond their coarse rug or skin, the inhabitants of Egypt had stools, chairs, ottomans, couches and tables; and it is known, too, that in the residences of the rich these pieces of furniture were made of the rarest woods, with costly carvings, and inlaid work of gold and ivory. Their apartments were hung with elaborately-wrought tapestries, and similiar richly woven and embroidered stuffs covered the seats and backs of chairs and settees. Their couches, we have reason to conclude, often served by night as bedsteads, having cushions then laid over them which were sometimes piled so high that bed steps were used to get upon them. The head-rests which with them often served the purposes of pillows, were short pillars, topped with pieces shaped like a crescent, sometimes of wood, and sometimes of ivory or alabaster, with occasionally cushions fitted into their hollows. The poorer folk slept in their cloaks, with a stone for their pillows, as Jacob did when on his journey to Padanaram. What we know now as the camp chair, in which the seat of cloth, carpeting, or leather permits the folding up of this piece of furniture, is only a revival of the style which the ancient Egyptians had in common use. Herodotus tells us that those who lived in the marshes slept at night in the nets with which by day they fished. Our cane seat chairs are an adaption from the time when strips of leather were interlaced for the same purpose. Long before the days of the first Pharaoh the Egyptians had carved couches, bedsteads of iron, and, it is believed, of bronze. Carpets were on the floors of the wealthy. They had metal mirrors, and a great profusion of kitchen utensils, and dishes of all sorts for the table.

Nor were the Assyrians at all behind the Egyptians in the profusion, convenience, ornamentation and elegance of their household furniture. Among the Assyrian sculptures, we find representations of double seats, some of which are very elegantly formed. The ordinary fashion of the chair legs was in imitation of some wild animal, usually a lion, the foot being raised and supported on a short pin, and what is remarkable, the skill of their present cabinet maker, even in the early era of Joseph, had already done away with the necessity of uniting the legs with bars.

At Thebes was discovered an Egyptian chair in fine preservation, inlaid with ivory and ebony, of very handsome form, and put together entirely with wooden pegs. The Egyptian tables are round, square or oblong. The former, which was their dining-table, consisted of a flat slab, often supported by the carved figure of a captive slave, some were made with solid sides and some were of stone or metal.

As a rule, the Egyptian bedstead, or couches, appear to have been made of wood, but some were constructed of metal, the more costly being decorated with gold and silver. Although there seems to have been considerable diversity in the shape of their canopies, and the means by which they were decked with hangings, and although they some times resembled the modern four-poster, yet generally in form they were similar to our couch. Theymanifest a considerable amount of taste; one end was raised and descended in a graceful curve; the legs were some times straight, some times curved, and their feet were oftened fashioned to resemble the claws of animals. Their fittings by day seemed to have been different to those used at night. In the daytime there were spread over them coverings, on the gorgeous decoration of which those who were able were lavish in their expenditure.

A young English writer, describing the boudior of an Egyptian lady, says it was not devoid of an air of luxury and refinement particuliarly congenial to our modern taste. "A stand near the window supported vases of flowers which filled the room with delicious odors; a soft carpet overspread the floors; two or three richly-carved chairs and an embroidered fauteuil afforded easy an inviting seats, and the lotus and papyrus were frescoed on the walls. Besides the brazen mirror, other accessories of the toilet were arranged on the ebony table, and boxes and caskets grotesquely carved, some containing jewels, others furuished with oils and ointment, took their place with quaintly-cut smelling-bottles, wooden combs, silver or bronze bodkins, and, lastly, pins and needles, although the latter would be thought very clumsy nowadays."

THE ANGORA GOAT.—The Pajaronian, in a long article on this subject, says: The propagation of the Angora goat bids fair to become a leading enterprise of this coast, Messrs. Landrum & Rodgers, of this place, having already established a large business in this line, to say nothing of numerous other firms in other portions of the State. Actual demonstration has overcome most of the stubborn prejudices against the goat, and they are now fast taking the lead among our domestic animals, and are supplying far better food and raiment. While droughts deplete our sheep and cattle, the Angora continues to thrive on the dry, brush-covered mountain and hill-sides. It may be interesting to our readers to know something of the market price of Angora fleece. This year's clip of Landrum & Rodgers, of this place, was sold in New York City, June 28th, by Kitching & Co., for 65 cents and 42 cents per pound, the cullings, only amounting to 48 pounds to the 1,000, selling for 24 cents per pound. The question, "Who will buy the mohair?" is solved. There are now three factories in the United States prepared to purchase and use the mohair of our country. The above quoted sale, by the way, was not the full value of the fleece, by more than 25 per cent. It was sold under its value, for reasons which we have not now time to explain. Landrum & Rodgers are pursuing Angora goat breeding with a zeal only equaled by their success. Not only are they largely interested here, but have important interests in the Guadalupe Island Company, which is looked upon as one of the most important goat enterprises in the world. The Company of which Mr. Landrum is President own the whole island, containing 166,400 acres of land, upon which are 20,000 common goats and about 1,500 fine Angora goats, with the progeny of 50 fine bucks, put on the island in May last, with the common goats.

THE WAY THE MONEY GOES.—Congress will be amazed when it comes to look closely into the expenditures, to find how many unsuspected cracks the money runs into. Here are the families of secretaries, and other high officers of state riding about Washington in bretts and landeaus, purchased with the "contigent fund" of the departments. Here is the Engraving Bureau of the Treasury Department turning out bushels of visiting cards for the ladies and gentlemen of the court. Here are prequisites and allowances to the valne of $50,000 a year going to the White House, and pickings and stealings of every kind in the inferior departments of the Government. The footman who waits on you when you dine with Mr. Secretary So-and-so, is paid by the United States as an "extra clerk." The coachman who drives the Secretary's wife, when she shops or visits, draws his pay from the department as a "laborer" or a "fireman," and the gardner's name appears, perhaps, on the rolls, as a "messenger."—[N. Y. Tribune.

CUSTOM HOUSE ABSURDITIES. — The anomalities of Custom House regulations will never cease. A recent order has been promulgated by the Treasury Department that 10 per cent. of all packages imported shall be sent to the Appraisers. Heretofore it has not been considered necessary to send so many, especially when the cargo consists of raisins, figs or bags of pepper; but on account of a suit recently decided in New York, where a Government truckman, employed to truck goods, sued to recover because as many as the law required were not sent, the Government was mulcted in heavy damages. A cargo of pepper, containg 4,000 bags, from Singapore, now lies at Damon's wharf, and 400 bags will have to be transported to the Appraiser's store and back, at an expense of $80, were ten bags would have answered.—[Ex.

—OF—

Walker House.

HAVING THIS DAY PURCHASED THE Walker House, we are now in possession of the two best hotels in Salt Lake City. Of the Walker House we deem it unnecessary to say anything in its behalf, its splendid design and elegant equipment being so well known to the public.

The CLIFT HOUSE, though not so well known as the Walker House—having been open but a few weeks—is first-class in all its appointments, the building being new and the furniture of the most fashionable and elegant style. The location of this house is central and commands a splendid view of the lake and over snow-clad mountains and surrounding scenery. Its local reputation is superior to that of any other house in the city.

With the above facilities at our command we feel assured in guaranteeing satisfaction to all.

Respectfully, etc.,
