

QUAKER MUSINGS.

Even the rainbow follows its natural bent.

Many a man is as dull as his point of view.

Some people won't steal as long as they can borrow.

Even the left-handed man may feel that he does everything right.

It is sometimes hard for a man to be on the level and climb upward.

We would all rather profit by the mistakes of others than by our own.

Good habits require constant cultivation, but bad ones grow like weeds.

The hen that has just laid an egg cackles almost as much as a woman who has just told a secret.

Virtue is its own reward, as the fatted calf discovered when he got it in the neck for the prodigal son.

"It's the little things that count," quoted the Wise Guy. "That's right," agreed the Simple Mug. "A microbe isn't as big as an elephant, but it does more damage."

"Why don't you stop begging and look for work?" demanded the man who had been touched. "What's the use of giving up a sure thing for an uncertainty," replied the beggar.—Philadelphia Record.

Sleep.

When to soft sleep we give ourselves away,
And in a dream as in a fairy bark
Drift on and on through the enchanted dark
To purple gray daybreak—little thought
We pay
To the sweet bitter world we know by day.
We are clean out of it, as in a lark
So high in heaven no human eye can mark
The thin swift pinion cleaving through
The gray.

Till we awake, ill fate can do no ill,
The roosting heart shall not take up again
The heavy load that yet must make it bleed;
For this brief space the loud world's voice is still,
No faintest echo of it brings us pain,
How still it be when we shall sleep, in-doubt?

—T. B. Aldrich.

FROM THE PENCIL'S POINT.

Offensive wives make defensive husbands.

It's the worst kind of luck when you have that kind.

But few men who say nothing have the wood-sawing habit.

Everybody knows that a busybody has a nose for scandal.

At the age of 50 a girl begins to realize that she misses the "Mrs."

A man either makes more or less money than he says he makes.

Regrets for the past seldom keep a woman from accepting the present.

Put a man under the X-ray machine if you would find out what is in him.

Rather than stand up for their principles some men sit down and let money talk.

In after years a man has a mighty poor opinion of a young man who likes to dance.

Our idea of a real genius is one who invents a way to make a good living for his family.

Some men look for work with about as much enthusiasm as they would look for a case of smallpox.

It's almost as hard for a rich man to enter the kingdom of heaven as it is for a poor man to break into the United States senate.

Astrologer's Letter to Van Buren.

An astrologer's letter to President Van Buren, forecasting the results of his election in 1849, is a recent acquisition of the Library of Congress. It is a unique specimen, and perhaps gives a crude idea of some of the fallacies of our grandfathers. The following is an extract: "I have opened the horoscope for Gen. Harrison, which accords with the chief events of his past life and which, if right, he will not fill the office of president during the next term, even if elected. And the danger I apprehend to yourself is not from your public opponents, but from those on whom you repose confidence." Those who are superstitious may be inclined to credit this astrologer with some measure of wisdom, for Harrison, although elected, died a month after his inauguration.

Famous Old Washington Store.

Mention Stuntz at any club or dinner or social gathering in Washington and the floodgates of reminiscence are opened. Through the dark days of the civil war and reconstruction, in days of national plenty and panic, the little candy shop kept open all day and through the evenings to satisfy the wants of children and brighten the lives of fathers and mothers.

Joseph Stuntz died in 1864, before the close of the war, but the fame of his shop had spread, and it already had been necessary for the wise-managing wife to add to their stock with toys from Baltimore, imported from the old country. What little boy in Washington, whether northerner or southerner, was not made happy in those days with soldiers in nice German non-committal colors?

FLASHES OF FUN.

Some mortals are overloaded with motives.

Do not waste your time in trying to get even.

Some homes are merely well-regulated excuse factories.

Nothing can convince a lazy man that he is not a victim of bad luck.

Why was Eve like Sunday? Because she was the first of the weak.

He—How can a man rest on posterity?
She—On the lapse of time.
