It is to be constructed from a point on the eastern boundary line of the State of Nevada in White Pine county, to and through the counties of White Pine, Eureka, Nye, Lander, Churchill, Lyon, Douglas, Esmeralda, Ormsby and Washoe, to a point on the western boundary line of the State, in the county of Douglas.

Mrs. S. P. Davis and family left on the train last evening for Salt Lake. Mrs. Davis goes to join her husband at that place, where the family will make their future home. In leaving Carson Mrs. Davis leaves many warm friends behind, made during a long residence in our midst. Quite a number of friends were at the depot to say good-bye and wish her and the children a safe journey.

Theatrical Performance.

Max Fehrmann, as "Uncle Isaac," will appear at the Opera House Friday evening. Wherever Mr. Fehrmann has appeared he has been well received in the play of "Uncle Isaac." We believe we can safely make the assertion that our people will have a genuine treat in the rendition of this performance. From the Sacramento Record-Union, where the play was produced Saturday evening last, we take the following: "Uncle Isaac" was performed by Meade's New York Company again last evening, and Mr. Fehrmann proved even more entertaining in his admirable eccentric character and dialect part than on the first evening. The company appears to good advantage, and the favorable opinion formed of it Thursday evening was last night confirmed. The play itself is like a cheap frame to a good picture. It serves as the means by which some admirable acting is presented, and some of the very best of which is found in the capital disguise of a well known member of the dramatic profession, whose incognito is his own concern. If the success of a performance is to be judged by the pleasure it gives the auditors, then Mr. Fehrmann and his aids have scored a success.

A VERY BAD AFFAIR.

James E. Anderson Severely Beaten by W. J. Penrose.

About 7:50 o'clock last evening, says the Eureka Sentinel of Saturday, one of those sad occurrences took place which disturb a community. It had its foundation in a published article in the Leader of last evening. Grieved at what was written, W. J. Penrose of Ruby Hill came to Eureka about 7 o'clock and evidently looked for the author, James E. Anderson. Penrose met Anderson on Main street, midway between Jack Perry's corner and Tim Rouse's saloon opposite. Penrose addressed Anderson, "Hello, Jim." This was heard by some parties on the sidewalk. A moment afterward a scuffle ensued, and Anderson was knocked down. Some parties then rushed forward, and Penrose rushed to the Sheriff's office. Anderson was picked up, bleeding profusely from the head. Under Sheriff Mason and E. J. Butler were upon the scene immediately after the occurrence, and Mr. Butler assisted in carrying Mr. Anderson to Dr. C. A. Bishop's office. Upon examination, Mr. Anderson was found to have a severe wound on his head back of the right ear and a slight one on his forehead. He was for a time insensible, and recovering partially became delirious. The wound bled freely, and the blood oozed out of the right ear. An hour later Mr. Anderson was conveyed to his home on Nob Hill. The Doctor informed the reporter that the wound in the back of the head was very serious, but he did not believe the brain was affected.

A Sentinel reporter made every endeavor to find someone who had witnessed the struggle, but his efforts proved fruitless. A report was currently circulated that Penrose approached him from behind and struck him with a piece of stovewood. This same piece of wood, however, was found in Anderson's hands when he was picked up, and is said to have been placed there by some excited individual who rushed up after Mr. Penrose left.

In an interview with Mr. Penrose at the prison, he gave the following account of the affair to the reporter: "I met Anderson in the middle of the street and said, 'Hello, Jim.' He immediately went for his pistol and drew it. I struck him on the arm near the shoulder and it staggered him. I then grabbed him about the neck and bent him over. The blow I struck him on the arm evidently made him lose his grasp on the revolver, for he dropped it on the ground. I immediately reached for it, and still holding him by the neck I dealt him several blows over the head. I kept the revolver, and have delivered it over to the Sheriff. I had a revolver in my breeches pocket, but Jim drew his so quick I couldn't draw mine."

Later in the evening Mr. Penrose was released under bonds.

The following is the article, as published in the Leader last evening, which brought about the unfortunate affair.

In September the editor of the New York Mining Record wrote a business letter to the present editor of the Leader, who was then connected with the Ruby Hill Mining News. This letter, among other things, incidentally alluded to the fight the Record had inaugurated against the management of the Eureka Con. There was nothing, however, in the contents that any man in the camp was not welcome to read.

The letter, together with others, was laid away in a private drawer from which it shortly disappeared in a mysterious manner, only to turn up in the hands of W. J. Penrose, and the natural inference is that Penrose stole it, believing that it would prove the person who received it to be the author of the letters against the Eureka Con.

The services of this fellow Penrose, for good and sufficient reasons, had been dispensed with by the Leader, and he at once sought to injure the paper by a systematic course of lying, to which we paid no attention, for his opposition to anything or anybody is more preferable than his help. Finally, to make any headway against the paper, he conceived the idea of helping the cause by sending this stolen letter to Superintendent Read. The result was directly opposite to what he anticipated. It showed Mr. Read, who unthinkingly opened the letter, that the editor of the News was not the author of the letters in question, and gave him a true insight into the character of the contemptible scoundrels who were resorting to such dirty means to accomplish a dirty end. Penrose is a Deputy Sheriff and Constable of Ruby Hill. The Leader would respectfully represent to the Commissioners and Sheriff that a sneak thief is hardly the person to fill that position.

This medicine is for sale by respectable druggists and dealers in medicine everywhere.
