A WASHINGTON ROMANCE.

A Letter From General Washington Acknowledging the Power of Love.

[From the New York Herald.]

In a collection of rare and valuable autograph letters which will be sold by Bangs & Co. this afternoon, we find the accompanying letter written by General Washington at the age of twenty-six and never before made public. The present owner purchased it in England for the sum of £15, where it was probably taken by members of the Fairfax family of Virginia. The letter was addressed to Sarah Fairfax, at Belvoir. The lady was a Miss Cary, to whom Washington at one time offered his hand, but was refused for his friend and comrade, George William Fairfax. Irving asserts that it was a sister of Mrs. Fairfax, Miss Mary Cary, afterward Mrs. Edward Ambler. We have the authority of Mrs. Constance C Harrison, a descendant of Lord Fairfax, who says in a paper called "A Little Centennial Lady," published in Scribner's Monthly of July last, that Sally Cary, Mrs. Fairfax, was the lady for whom Washington had a tenderness. Mrs. Harrison says:

It is fair to say that papers which have never been given to the public set this question beyond a doubt. Mrs. George William Fairfax, the object of George Washington's early and passionate love, lived to an advanced age in Bath, England, widowed, childless and utterly infirm. Upon her death, at the age of eighty-one, letters, still in possession of the Fairfax family, were found among her effects, showing that Washington had never forgotten the influence of his early disappointment.

It is hardly probable that Washington means to express his love for Mrs. Custis, to whom he alludes here, for her husband was then living—in fact, did not die until twenty odd years after the date of this letter. For the matter of that, Mrs. Fairfax's husband did not die until 1787. The following letter is, without doubt, one of those letters which Mrs. Harrison declares will "set this question beyond a doubt." It will be very interesting, as it shows Washington in quite a new light. Even as lover he has all the stateliness of the General and Father of His Country:

CAMP AT FORT CUMBERLAND, 12th September, 1758.

DEAR MADAM:—

Yesterday I was honored with your short but very agreeable favor of the first inst.—how joyfully I catch at the happy occasion of a renewing a correspondence which I feared was disrelished on your part, I leave to time that never failing expositor of all things—and to a monitor equally faithful in my own breast to testify. In silence I now express my joy. Silence, which, in some cases—I wish the present—speaks more intelligently than the sweetest eloquence..

If you allow that any honour can be derived from my opposition to our present system of management you destroy the merit of it entirely in me by attributing my anxiety to the animating prospect of possessing Mrs. Custis—when—I need not name it—guess yourself—Should not my own Honor and country's welfare be the excitement? 'Tis true, I profess myself a votary of Love—I acknowledge that a lady is in the case—and further I confess that this lady is known to you—Yes, madam, as well as she is to one who is too sensible of her charms to deny the Power whose Influence he feels and must ever submit to. I feel the force of her amiable beauties in the recollection of a thousand tender passages that I could wish to obliterate, till I am bid to revive them—but experience, alas! sadly reminds me how impossible this is,—and evinces an opinion which I have long entertained, that there is a Destiny, which has the sovereign control of our actions—not to be resisted by the strongest efforts of Human Nature

You have drawn me dear madam, or rather I have drawn myself, into an honest confession of a simple Fact—misconstrue not my meaning—doubt it not, nor expose it—The world has no business to know the object of my Love—declared in this manner to—you—when I want to conceal it One thing above all things in this world I wish to know, and only one person of your acquaintance can solve me that or guess my meaning—but adieu to this till happier times, if I ever shall see them. The hours at present are melancholy dull, neither the rugged toils of war, nor the gentler conflict of A— B—s is in my choice. I dare believe, you are as happy as you say. I wish I was happy also. Mirth, good humour, ease of mind and—what else? Cannot fail to render you so and consummate your wishes.

If one agreeable lady could almost wish herself a fine gentleman for the sake of another; I apprehend that many fine gentlemen will wish themselves finer e'er Mrs. Spotwood is possest. She has already become a reigning toast in this camp; and many there are in it, who intend (fortune favoring) to make honorable scars speak the fullness of their merit and be a messenger of their Love to Her.

I cannot easily forgive the unseasonable haste of my last express, if he deprived me thereby of a single word you intended to add,—the time of the present messenger is, as the last might have been, entirely at your disposal. I can't expect to hear from my friends more than this once before the fate of the expedition will somehow or other be determined. I therefore beg to know when you will set out for Hampton and when you expect to return to Belvoir again—and I should be glad also to hear of your speedy departure as I shall thereby hope for your return before I get down; the disappointment of seeing your family would give me much concern.—From any thing I can yet see 'tis hardly possible to say when we shall finish. I don't think there is a probability of it till the middle of November. Your letter to Capt'n Gist I forwarded by a safe hand the moment it came to me. His answer shall be carefully transmitted.

Col. Mercer, to whom I delivered your message and compliments, joins me very heartily in wishing you and the ladies of Belvoir the perfect enjoyment of every happiness this world affords. Be assured Dr madam, with the most unfeigned regard, yr most obedient and most oblig'd H'ble serv't.

G. WASHINGTON.

N. B. Many accidents happening (to use a vulgar saying) between the cup and the lip, I choose to make the exchange of carpets myself, since I find you will not do me the honour to accept mine.

CURRENCY IN AFRICA AND CHINA.

Africa, a country naturally destitute, so far as is known, of silver, has always been driven to strange expedients for a currency. In the Soudan, where an elephant's tusk represents so many able-bodied slaves—where a certain number of strips of cloth are equal to a calabash filled with beads or buttons—and a bean-pod brimming with gold-dust does duty for a bank-note, small change is urgently required. This want is partially supplied by those little shells called "cowries," which are found on the coast of India, and are often there used to adorn the horse-trappings of princes. In Angola and other parts of Central Africa, these same "cowries," two thousand five hundred of which, in India, are the equivalent of one rupee, and are the pocket money of native children of the poorest caste—rise to the value of five thousand to the pound sterling. Except in Egypt and Morocco no money is coined in Africa north of the Cape of Good Hope. It is wonderful that so highly organized and commercial a community as that of wealthy China should have contentedly remained so ill off in a monetary point of view. The Flowery Land, in this anomaly, as in others, has probably been enslaved by the tyranny of custom. Those long strings of perforated copper coin, technically called "cash," have been, of centuries untold, the only recognized money of the central kingdom; and even now, although the indigenous tsels and tungsteens, are largely supplemented by Spanish and Mexican dollars, a Chinese merchant prefers to make payments of silver, not by tael or by weight, but by measure. China, like India, no doubt contains a large proportion of the whole stock of the precious metals; but its absorbent qualities are so great, that what was anciently called the balance of trade is nearly sure to be against the outer barbarians.

THE OPIUM HABIT.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE SUN:—Sir: Is there any cure for the opium or morphine habit? I mean is there any cure without intense and long-continued suffering. If you will reply in your issue to-morrow morning, you will greatly oblige A VICTIM.

March 13, 1877.

The desire for opium in any of its forms, if confirmed by long use of the drug, can be cured, but only by a determined exercise of will and a resolution to patiently endure more or less physical suffering. In such a case the advice of an intelligent physician is of great service. But avoid all nostrums.

The feeling in Ireland in favor of the Sunday closing of places where liquor is sold has received a fresh illustration. A petition from the city of Dublin has been sent to Parliament, a mile in length, and bearing 60 000 signatures. Meetings are frequently held to protest against the exemption of large towns from the operation of the proposed law. A careful house to-house canvass of nineteen towns has shown that in them 100.000 persons voted for Sunday closing and only 11.331 against it. The bill is likely to pass at this session of Parliament.

Norwich Bulletin: "An English paper remarked some time ago that, in the constant development and progression of nature, the time would surely come when the mule would try to emulate the nightingale. And people were foolish enough not to believe it till they heard the tenor in one of the city churches the other evening."

At the Deadwood Theater, in the Black Hills, when the audience get tired of the can-can, the boys call out, "Give us some singing, or we'll clean out the place. We want something elevating'." The admission to this temple of the muses costs $2 50; reserved seats, $5.

"Well, Sambo, how do you like your new place?" "Berry well, Massa." "What did you have for breakfast this morning?" "Why, you see, misses biled three eggs for herself, and gave me the trof."

THE LAW OF BETTING.—The man who bets should make up his mind in advance to abide by the decision of the judge or referee. He can never be certain of winning, therefore he should always be prepared to lose. To become a convert so the theory that betting is pernicious and to attempt to recover your money under the Gaming Act after the wager has been decided against you is to prove yourself deficient in intellect and lacking integrity. In the village of Amsterdam, New York, a jury composed of the leading citizens of the place expressed a few days ago, a decided opinion in regard to the standing of a man who had bet on the Presidential election, lost, and then sued the stakeholder for the money deposited with him After investigating the facts the following verdict was handed in: "The jury in the case of P. Dargn vs. C. Moat do report that they find a verdict for the plaintiff to the amount of $15, and that the plaintiff be banished from the town, and that all persons are hereby cautioned against negotiating with said P. Dargen, as he is a squealer and unworthy of association. Signed by the jury." While the law was on the side of Dargen, public sentiment unmistakably was against him. Those who take all the chances to win and none to lose must not expect to be treated with distinguished consideration by their fair-minded fellow citizens.—[Turf, Field and Farm.
