TRUTHS.

A good life expands as it progresses.
Anticipation of evil is the death of happiness.

It's a good principle that adapts itself to any situation.

Nothing is so reasonable and cheap as good manners.

Childhood shows the man as morning shows the day.

Any man's worst fault is not to be able to say "no."

Some people seem to have been born with their hearts out of joint.

The pearly chain of the virtues begins and ends with humility.

He who gives you fair words feeds you with an empty spoon.

An honest public opinion is more to be dreaded than dynamite.

Compliments cost nothing, yet many people pay dearly for them.

Sweep first before your door before you sweep before your neighbor's.

Humility never falls short of its demands nor overleaps the modesty of its character.

So live that when the summons comes you won't fear the constable that serves it on you.

They who teach the children to-day are moulding the character of the next generation.

The people whom we never contradict are those whom we either love most or respect most.

Evil habits are webs which are too light to be noticed till they are too strong to be broken.

The power of a man's virtue should not be measured by his special efforts, but by his ordinary doing.

Four things come not back. The broken word, the sped arrow, the past life, and neglected opportunity.

It is a pretty saying of an old writer: That men, like books, begin and end with blank leaves—in fancy and sensibility.

The simplest and most familiar truth seems now and wonderful the instant that we ourselves experience it for the first time.

Taciturn people always inspire respect. It is difficult to believe that one has no secret to keep but that of his own insignificance.

The man of enlightened understanding and persevering ardor has many sources of enjoyment which the ignorant man cannot reach.

A little stealing is a dangerous part, but stealing largely is a noble art. 'Tis mean to rob a hen-roost of a hen, but stealing thousands makes us gentlemen.

His Own Fault.

Customer—"See here, sir, this medicine is a fraud. You said it was good for colds and you charged me $2 a bottle for it and it isn't worth a cent."
Medicine vender—"Oh, I guess you didn't take it right."
"Take it right! I began on the horrid stuff just as soon as it came on."
"That's what's the matter. You should have begun two days before the cold came on."

Job Printing of every description will be neatly and promptly executed at this office.

A MOVING CITY.

The Virginia Chronicle says that from recent surveys it has been ascertained that the entire city of Virginia has moved over thirty inches toward the east since the big fire of 1875. The Maynard block in Gold Hill is known to be gradually sliding down in the direction of Gold Canyon, and has moved nearly two feet since its erection. This movement is so gradual that it does not affect in any manner the safety of the buildings, as the ground to the depth of nearly a hundred feet to the bed-rock is known to be continually sliding. It is a well-known fact among practical miners that the ground upon which Virginia City is built is what is termed a slide, and it is necessary to sink nearly 100 feet to find the natural bed-rock. These slides are caused by the constant crumbling of the rocks on the mountain sides. The debris thus accumulated through incalculable ages is constantly gravitating downwards, and in a few hundred thousands of years what is now known as the site of Virginia City will be nothing but barren bed-rock, worn as smooth by the action of the elements as the southern slope of Sugar Leaf mountain, and were it possible for structures built by human hands to stand the decay of time, the entire city itself would then have been forced out on the flat between the mouth of Six Mile Canyon and the Carson river.

He Only Wanted to See.

Judge Gerald Cummings is a respected resident of Fort Worth, Texas, notwithstanding that he is immensely stout and a member of the legal profession. He tried many anti-fat remedies to reduce his weight without any satisfactory result. He finally went to the Hot Springs in Arkansas, and much to his joy he lost considerable adipose tissue, and returned to Fort Worth in a most happy frame of mind. He thought and talked of nothing else but his loss of flesh.

He went to the market one morning recently and said to the butcher: "Cut me off twenty pounds of pork."

The request was complied with. The Judge looked at the meat for some time and then walked off.

"Shall I send the meat to your house, Judge?" asked the butcher.

"O, no," was the reply, "I don't want it. I have fallen off just twenty pounds, and I only wanted to see how much it was."—Siftings.

A Head for Business.

Algernon: "Ah! my dear boy, so glad to see you; and how is your suit with Miss De Rich coming on?"

Augustus: "Weally, my boy, I can't say that I've made much progress so far, but I've hit on the right idea now. Do you see this dawg?"

"Of course. what a delightful English pug. Just like the one that Miss De Rich admired by the way."

"It's the very one, my boy. She went into ecstasies over it at the dawg show."

"Ah, I see: so you've bought it for her?"

"No, for myself."
"For yourself? What good can that do you?"

"Why, my boy, can't you see? Bajove, the dear girl will have to take me or lose the dawg, you know.—Philadelphia Call.

Smith and Jones.

John Smith was reading the morning paper. Suddenly he exclaimed: "Jones is dead. I must go to his funeral. He went to mine, and one good turn deserves another."

"What do you mean by saying that he attended your funeral? That's all nonsense," said Mrs. Smith.

"No it ain't. Last year Jones read that John Smith was dead, and he thought it was me, so he attended the funeral, and now of course I ought to return the compliment."

"Well, before you go tramping through the mud, and standing in a graveyard catching your death of cold, take a square look at the remains, and see that you are following up the right corpse. If you are going to attend the funeral of every Jones who dies you will never get through," remarked Mrs. Smith.

The Esthetic Name for Roller Skating.

"Can you tell me where the rink is?" asked a man on a Springfield avenue car of the conductor.

"The charioteer will inform you," was the reply.

The passenger sought the jehu by the brake and repeated the inquiry.

"Wait until the postillion attaches the third horse and then I will have time to answer, said the lynx eyed head light on the car, referring to the boy with the superannated nag who is posted opposite the court house.

"The colosseum where they rotate on casters is just at the brow of the acivite," he said a moment afterward.

"I am going to stop there myself to revolve an hour or two."

"To what?" asked the passenger eyeing the victim of rinkomania curiously. "To revolve. That's the esthetic slang for skating," said the driver as he threw the lines to his relief and made a break for the rink. —New York Evening News.

She Was a Good Deal Disappointed.

An English Lord who visited this country was at a dinner given in his honor at a private residence in San Francisco. A little daughter of his host, who was too well bred to stare, but who eyed him covertly as the occasion presented itself, finally ventured to remark: "Are you really and truly an English lord?"

"Yes," he responded pleasantly, "really and truly."

"I have often thought I would like to see an English lord," she went on, "and, and—"

"And now you are satisfied at last," he interrupted, laughingly.

"N-o," replied the truthful little girl, "I not satisfied; I'm a good deal disappointed."

Imitating Adult Generosity.

Scene—Two little girls playing that they are grown-up people: You must accept this ring as a present."

"Oh, no, I couldn't think of it."
"Really you will oblige me if you will take it; you know it doesn't become my complexion."

"Thanks; and in return I beg you will receive this pocket-book."
"I believe I must decline."
"Please don't. I was just about to throw it in the ash barrel."

The Nevada gold-seekers have discovered a new use for fowls. It is a common sight there to see men and women carrying a hen under one arm and a basket of chickens under the other. When they reach their destination the hens are picketed, and being already hungry, begin to scratch and eat. After two or three days honest toil they are killed and their craws examined for gold. As much as $8 has been found in one craw.—Ex
