WAS CONSPIRACY AGAINST PRESIDENT

Representative Edward W. Pou, former chairman of the house rules committee, recently delivered a vigorous speech in the house charging that even before President Wilson sailed for the Paris peace conference there was a Republican conspiracy to harass him and weaken his influence at home and abroad.

The partisan conspiracy against the president, which embarrassed him in his negotiations with foreign nations at the peace conference, was without parallel, asserted Representative Pou. He referred to the introduction of resolutions to declare the office of president vacant while the president was negotiating the treaty for the peace of the world, and severely condemned the visit to the White House of Senator Fall, who went ostensibly to talk about the Mexican situation, but really to find out how sick the president was, according to Mr. Pou.

On his indefensible visit, Mr. Pou asserted, the Republican senator found the president's mind "clear as a bell."

"Men do not do desperate things without strong reason," said Representative Pou, "and I charge here and now that these contemptible attacks upon President Wilson before and during the Versailles peace conference were made for one purpose only; to wit, to promote the prospect of Republican success in the coming election."

"Surely there are times when the official head of a nation is in fairness entitled to the sincere, generous support of all the people of the nation. There are times when good men are glad to discard all political differences. There are times when every decent Democrat is proud to follow a Republican president, and every decent Republican is proud to follow a Democratic president."

"During every hour President Wilson spent in Europe, he was entitled to such unstinted support, but it seemed certain Republican politicians, even during that critical period, thought more of party success than they did of the great struggle to make war between nations less probable."

"Let us not forget this: Mr. Wilson was not only president, but he was also commander-in-chief of the army and navy, and the war was still on. The attacks upon him were just as unwarranted as the attack of a soldier upon his commander during battle."

Representative Pou then read the Walsh and Campbell resolution declaring respectively that at any time the president leaves the soil of the United States he shall be considered unable to perform the duties of the office and the vice-president shall serve, and forbidding the president to leave the territorial confines of the country.

"Against this man who had led America to heights never attained before," said Representative Pou, "the bill and the resolution I have just read were directed. While he was at Versailles striving for a just and righteous peace, we have such a performance. Can you think of anything more unfair? Do you think the people of America approve such treatment of the president?"

"But this is not all. After the president returned, another Republican introduced a resolution to investigate the tokens of appreciation given the president while in Europe."

"I charge here and now the whole scheme was in effect a conspiracy, because this is the only theory which will explain and square with the course pursued by certain Republican leaders through the long months during which the treaty was pending. The story is a tale of which every fair-minded American ought to be ashamed. I make this charge also: The attempt to foil and humiliate this great man had the support of every hyphenated, false American and every German sympathizer in this country to the last man."

DON'T SELL LIBERTY BONDS, THEY'RE A BARGAIN TO BUY

Over 20,000,000 of the American people bought Liberty bonds or Victory notes to help win the war. How many, do you suppose, are still holding them?

How many have clipped the coupons as they came due, and cashed them in or added these earnings to their savings accounts? Did you cash the coupons which were payable on Saturday last, the 15th?

Or are you one of those who have sold your bonds or exchanged them for some other form of security?

Your banker, or any sound financial adviser, will, if you ask him, tell you to hold on to your bonds in preference to parting with them. They are gilt-edged securities—none better. They are just as sound as the United States government, and they are just as valuable to you as an investment as they were the day that you bought them.

True, the bonds are quoted at less than par, as you will find if you attempt to sell them on the open market. You may get $85 or less for what cost you $100. But remember this: That now is the time to buy, when bond-prices are low, and not the time to sell.

Shrewd buyers are picking up Liberty bonds as fast as they can now, because they know that at maturity Uncle Sam will redeem them at full value, 100 per cent. And meantime those who buy at less than par will be drawing interest at a considerably higher rate than is nominated in the bond.

If, as alleged, Liberty bonds are gradually finding their way into the coffers of the rich, it means that thousands of individuals possessing bonds in small quantities are surrendering to others wiser than themselves the safest security the world affords.

If they are esteemed prizes by big bond-holders, then they are prizes for you. Keep them. Borrow money on them if you have to have money, but don't part with them—that's folly.

CONGRESS HAS SORRY RECORD

Bent upon adjournment or recess early in June, the present Republican congress will have written a sorry record. To date, of general legislation promised the people in the 1918 campaign, it has passed a railroad bill. Granting that it will pass a budget law and soldier bonus bill prior to June, neither of which is yet certain, its record will consist of three general pieces of legislation, added to the usual annual supply bills. It will have done nothing to adjust the tariff and revenue law inequalities; it will not have solved the problem of what to do with the merchant marine and will have done nothing to encourage foreign trade; it will have neglected its opportunity to create land settlements for discharged soldiers, and will have done nothing for the encouragement of better relations between capital and labor.

In a sentence, it will have done little but criticize the administration for what it has done and for what it has tried to do, but has been unable to do because congress blocked the way, and it has been in session approximately one year.

The people will hardly be fooled again by such promises as were made by the Republican leaders in the campaign of 1918.
