"BE CAREFUL WHAT YOU SAY"

[Joseph Kronthal, in O. C. Store News]

In speaking of a person's faults,
 Pray don't forget your own;
 Remember, those with homes of glass
 Should seldom throw a stone.
 If we have nothing else to do
 But talk of those who sin,
 'Tis better we commence at home,
 And from that point begin.

We have no right to judge a man
 Until he's fairly tried;
 Should we not like his company,
 We know the world is wide.
 Some may have faults—and who has not?
 The old as well as young;
 Perhaps we may, for aught we know
 Have fifty to their one.

Then let us all, when we begin
 To slander friends or foe,
 Think of the harm one word may do
 To those we little know.
 Remember, curses, sometimes like
 Our chickens "roost at home;"
 Don't speak of others' faults until
 We have none of our own.

MAKING CAPITAL FOR POSSIBLE CANDIDATES

A widely published story in Washington, in effect, giving President Harding almost exclusive credit for the limitation of navies program has caused a lot of political commotion.

By giving Secretary Hughes credit for the proposals now under consideration, the press of the world started something. Friends of the president and some members of the cabinet not in the limelight just now are watching the Hughes wave of popularity with fear lest it turn into a presidential boom. For several weeks a very subtle movement has been on foot to popularize an Old Guard leader for the presidency. Mr. Harding is not one of the men in mind.

About the hotel lobbies at the capital it has been quietly but cleverly stated by visiting Republicans from big Republican states that Mr. Harding is "a one-term man." This had become very common, and those mentioned in connection with it were of the protectionist wing of the party. Secretary Weeks was often referred to. Immediately after the American proposals were made to the arms conference, the name of Secretary Hughes began to be used. It was instantly apparent that Old Guard leaders disliked that and would try to check it. Mr. Hughes is not popular with the Old Guard Republican members of congress.

This interesting sub-rosa situation flared when the carefully written story, giving President Harding full credit for the proposition submitted to the arms conference, appeared. Members of congress were busy all day speculating as to the inspiration for the story and were disposed to charge friends of the president with putting it out to curtail the Hughes talk.

It was pointed out that Senator Borah introduced his resolution for a conference on arms four months before Mr. Harding manifested any public interest in the subject.

Two efforts in congress to give the president full credit have been made within the last few days. Senator New and Representative Butler of Pennsylvania gave out statements saying Mr. Harding and not Secretary Hughes was responsible.

The tendency to assign credit for the conception of the conference to one individual or another, or to ascribe to some specific person the development of the American plan, has led to the statement in a high official quarter that the American delegation and officials are free from all hatred and jealousy, and that if the conference is successful there will be enough glory for all.

The question to which individual the plaudits should go has become one of the most interesting subjects of discussion in Washington. The view of one high official was that the plan may be called the "Hughes plan," the "American plan," the "Administration plan" or any other plan without incurring the bad wishes of the president. It was stated that as personal feeling has not been aroused and no rival factions have come forward, the administration is most hopeful and confident of the parley's success.

In an official quarter it has been asserted the story of the calling of the conference will not be made public until the thing is over and the results are seen. However, the statement was offered that the American delegation had been working on the proposition in co-operation with the executive, which would indicate the completed proposal probably was the result of more intellects than one.

It is definitely known the American conferees did not have a proposition presented to them when they got together. And that one of their first concerns was to build up a definite plan. According to the same spokesman, the thing that will blast the hopes for the conference, if it is doomed to failure, will be personal jealousy, and it will not be in the United States delegation. In such international attempts, he deemed that no more destructive thing could enter than individual jealousy.

It is the apparent desire of administration leaders that the question of who gets the credit should be stilled while the conference is yet in its infancy.

No attempt was made by the high official who referred to the question of crediting the proper source of the arms plan to enter the politics of the situation, which is one of the points arousing much interest, in view of previous assertions that the arms conference might make one of three men—Harding, Hughes or Underwood—the next president.

"SUBMERGED MILLIONS"

The delegate from Portugal at the opening session in Washington made a speech of but three sentences, states the Philadelphia Public Ledger, yet he said more than some others said in addresses considerably longer.

With a brevity that may have had for its pattern the eloquent restraint of Lincoln at Gettysburg, he reminded his hearers of the "submerged millions" whose will is sure to be felt and whose voice will make itself heard if "national egotism" threatens to defeat the purpose for which the conference has assembled.

It is time the millions had their turn. They have been waiting through the ages for their day in court. It has come, and they are going to use it for all that it is worth. As Viscount d'Alte said, the millions have had "every feeling outraged by the intolerable anguish suffered," and their one paramount desire is for an "enduring peace." They are sure to summon to a stern reckoning those who stand in the way of it.

THAT WORD "AFFORD"

When a merchant talks about "affording" advertising, he is getting ready for the live merchant to take his trade away from him. People do not "afford" advertising any more than the man who needs a suit of clothes "affords" them. It is not a question of "affording" advertising, it is a vital necessity.—Sanford (Fla.) Herald.

MERELY LOST HIS LIFE

A newspaper editor relates this story about a green reporter. He was hurried off to write up the murder of a wealthy manufacturer. After describing the details graphically he concluded with this sentence: "Fortunately for the deceased, he had deposited all his loose money in the bank the day before, so that he lost practically nothing but his life."—Cheyenne (Wyo.) RESOLUTION OF THE BOARD OF TRUSTEES OF CARSON SCHOOL DISTRICT NO. 1.

Carson City, Nev., Nov. 22, 1921.
 The board of trustees is apprised that a number of requests have been received from parents, addressed to the principal of the Carson City high school, requesting him to dismiss their children on every Monday from 11:15 a. m. to 12 m. for the purpose of receiving religious instruction.

We have requested the principal to report to what extent, if any, such dismissal will interfere with regular class work. His report indicates that it will be necessary for four students to leave the music class once a week, eight to leave the oral English class, three to leave typewriting and sixteen to leave the study hall. The principal also reports that further requests will undoubtedly be received before the end of the week. We are of the opinion that this constitutes a serious interference with the regular order and class work of the school, notwithstanding the fact that the principal informs us that the interference at this period is less than what it would be at any other period.

Furthermore, in view of the fact that the schools at the present time are laboring under a great and serious handicap owing to the loss of the school building, that a number of school days have already been lost, and that a heavy rain falling on the building at the present time would render it untenable and cause the loss of further time, that the teachers and students are laboring without proper facilities in temporary quarters, all of which conditions tend to decrease the normal efficiency of the instruction.

We believe in view of these facts that this time is particularly inopportune for the introduction of any new courses, which, as pointed out above, will tend, in any way, to interfere with either regular class work, or take from the pupil that which is equally as important—regular school time which he would ordinarily use in the preparation of his lessons.

The board of trustees is thoroughly in sympathy with the high ideals and principles that have motivated those who make these requests, and with the work of the men who are devoting their lives to the great and important task of making better men and women. We believe that an important work of the schools is to aid them in every way possible by not neglecting moral training of the boys and girls in our schools. But we do not approve of any system of instruction that takes the pupils out of the school during the regular school hours and places them under others at a time when the regular class room teachers are under pay for that purpose. We believe that the proper time for religious instruction is on Sunday, and if further instruction is necessary on days and hours when the public schools are not in session; therefore, be it

Resolved, That the board of trustees of Carson school district No. 1 authorize and direct the principal of the high school to refuse any and all requests of parents to excuse their children for the purpose of religious instruction during school hours.

By order of the board of trustees, Carson school district No. 1.
 W. N. EVANS, President.
 F. E. MEDER, Clerk.
