AN ADDRESS THAT WILL LIVE

The late Franklin K. Lane wrote and said many wise things, but no words of his will live longer than those contained in his epitome to the Flag, spoken in an address to the clerks of the department of the interior in 1914, right at the beginning of the World war. The address, which is regarded as a classic, is as follows:

Let me tell you who I am.
The work that we do is the making of the real flag.
I am not the flag—not at all. I am but its shadow. I am whatever you make me, nothing more. I am your belief in yourself, your dream of what a people may become. I live a changing life, a life of moods and passions, of heartbreaks and tired muscles.
Sometimes I am strong with pride, when men do an honest work, fitting the rails together truly.
Sometimes I droop, for then purpose has gone from me, and cynically I play the coward.
Sometimes I am loud, garish and full of that ego that blasts judgment.
But always I am all that you hope to be and have the courage to try for.
I am song and fear, struggle and panic, and ennobling hope.
I am the day's work of the weakest man, and the largest dream of the most daring.
I am the constitution and the courts, statutes and statute-makers, soldier and dreadsnaught, drayman and street-sweep, cook, counselor and clerk.
I am the battle of yesterday and the mistake of tomorrow.
I am the mystery of the men who do without knowing why.
I am the clutch of an idea and the reasoned purpose of resolution.
I am no more than what you believe me to be, and I am all that you believe I can be.
I am what you make me, nothing more.
I swing before your eyes as a bright gleam of color, a symbol of yourself, the picture suggestion of that big thing which makes this Nation.
My stars and stripes are your dreams and your labors. They are bright with cheer, brilliant with courage, firm with faith, because you have made them so out of your hearts for you are the makers of the flag, and it is well that you glory in the making.

HOW WILL IT END?

Here's an alliteration that is causing many of the Old Guard to sit up and take notice:
Harding, Hughes, Hoover, Harvey, Hell.

WONDER HOW THEY LIKE IT

It takes some nerve for an ambassador to sit down or stand up at the banquet board and declare the policy of the administration that has appointed him. But that is just what Colonel George Harvey, ambassador to Great Britain, did in London a few nights ago.

Wonder how President Harding and Secretary of State Hughes like it to have another fellow use their prerogatives?

Before he got done talking Harvey remarked that he had better quit or he might say too much, but it looks as though he bridled his tongue too late.

It will be interesting now to wait and see what Harvey's superiors will do at the gratuitous affront tendered them.

PREVENT FIRES—SAVE PROPERTY

The week beginning Sunday, May 22d, ushered in "Forest Fire Prevention week," and teachers, clergymen, Boy Scouts and other organizations and all who have opportunity of making public addresses are urged during this week to take every opportunity to impress upon all the supreme necessity of protecting the forests and preventing fire.

The national and state forest services, in co-operation with private owners of large areas of timber land, maintain during the summer a very effective fire prevention service, which each year grows more efficient, as more trails are made, more watch towers and telephones are constructed and more airplanes put into service. A really great forest fire is not controllable by man, as tremendous air currents are created which carry blazing torches over the heads of the fighters, starting new fires behind them.

Only those who have seen a great area of burned-over land can have any conception of the resulting devastation. During the five years ending with 1920 the forest fires burned over 56,488,307 acres, destroying stumps and other property to the computed value of $85,715,747. We are paying for that loss in increased prices of every foot of lumber which goes into any structure. Easily accessible timber is nearly gone. The farther we work back into the rough mountain country the more it costs to build and furnish a house. It pays every one of us to help prevent fires.

HIGHEST AND LOWEST POINTS IN THE WORLD

The difference between the highest and lowest points of land in the United States is 14,777 feet, according to the United States geological survey, department of the interior. Mount Whitney, the highest point, is 14,501 feet above sea level, and in Death valley there is a depression that lies 276 feet below sea level. These two points, which are both in California, are less than ninety miles apart. This difference in height is small, however, as compared with the difference in the height and depth of land in Asia. Mount Everest rises 29,002 feet above sea level, whereas the shores of the Dead Sea lie 1,290 feet below sea level, a total difference in height of 30,292 feet. Mount Everest has never been climbed.

The greatest depth yet found in any ocean is 32,088 feet, the depth at a point about forty miles north of the island of Mindanao, in the Philippine Islands. The bottom of the sea at this point is therefore more than eleven and a half miles below the summit of Mount Everest.

It was three R.'s that once nearly played havoc with the Democratic party. But that isn't a circumstance to the five H.'s now worrying the Republicans.

The utmost that the Germans could pay, less than a year ago, was $13,000,000,000. They have now discovered that they can pay $47,000,000,000. That country is getting rich fast.—Boston Transcript.
