GIVE GOOD WIRING ALF CHARTZ ASKS

Editor, Appeal.—Calling the attention of the candidates for the legislature in every county, as I promised I would do:

The Truckee River General Electric Company put up their main lines, and evade doing the wiring for the lighting of structures, and delivery of power for any purpose. This is done by the individual or corporation. The object is to avoid the payment of damages for defective wiring, ostensibly. I consider this an exceedingly narrow, and even contemptible policy. In my opinion, they should forbid the private owner to do his own wiring, and insist upon the work being done by none other than the most competent workmen, under their own guidance, to the end that lighting and power be made as safe as possible, and create confidence in its use, and give a good name to the corporation, and save life and property. It seems only necessary to call attention to the fact to show how un-American is their policy; or, is it un-American? By forcing private users of electricity for light and power to do their own wiring, there is likewise forced the employment of Tom, Dick, and Harry to perform such very important work. The public service commission should take this matter up, and draft proper legislation to cover the case in point. The object and purpose of their incorporation is to deliver safe and convenient power and light, and their conduct is directly subversive of those objects and purposes. They thus obtain their franchise by false and fraudulent representations, and should be held liable the same as any one else who obtains property or property rights fraudulently.

ALFRED CHARTZ.

ELKO FISHERMEN SEEK UTAH FRY

Though fry and fingerlings from the state fish hatchery will not be available this year, because of extensive repairs which are now underway at the state hatchery, Elko sportsmen are making strenuous efforts to replenish the trout streams with fish, says the Independent. A telegram to the federal fish hatchery at Springville, Utah, ninety-five miles south of Salt Lake City, was forwarded petitioning for 300,000 trout fry for immediate delivery, if possible. The fry, if obtainable at the government hatchery in Utah, will be shipped to Elko and distributed in streams of Elko county. In addition to the telegraphic request forwarded to the Springville hatchery, a telegram has been sent to Senator Key Pittman at Washington, asking him to lend his support to the enterprise, and endeavor to insure the trout for the Elko sports-men.

IMPRESSIVE SERVICES MARK WILSON BROUGHER FUNERAL

MASONIC BODIES CONDUCT SERVICES WHICH ARE ATTENDED BY SCORES OF FRIENDS FROM ALL PARTS OF NEVADA

Carson City stopped her daily tasks this afternoon to pay humble respect to one of her greatest benefactors and one of the state's leading citizens.

With the impressive ritual of the Masonic fraternity, services for the late Wilson Brougher were conducted at Masonic hall while State officials, leaders of the state's mining industry, lodge brothers and scores of other friends of the pioneer paid their last respects.

The remains were accompanied here by his family from Oakland, at which place he died Sunday morning following a long illness and arrived this morning. The body was taken to Masonic hall and remained there until services started at two o'clock.

With the state capitol offices and local business houses closed, and scores of friends present from all parts of Nevada, the hall was filled when the formal service of the Masons was carried through and a striking eulogy delivered by Judge E. A. Ducker.

The worth of the deceased to the state, to his lodge, and to his family was recalled by the speaker and consolation was extended to the family.

Worshipful Master A. B. Karns of the Carson blue lodge of Masons presided and other officers participating in the service were Senior Warden Parvin Jones and Junior Warden Chester Taylor. Reno officers of De Witt Clinton Commandery, Knights Templar, followed the ritual of their lodge.

A choir rendered appropriate music for the occasion. At three o'clock the funeral procession started with Knights Templar and other Masonic members preceding the hearse. The cortege extended along Carson street for several blocks.

pallbearers were Ed Erickson, P. B. Ellis, George Gilson, Andrew Maute, W. Casson, and George Cowing. A truckload of flowers gave silent tribute from Mr. Brougher's many friends. At the cemetery further services were held by the Masonic organizations.

RECALLS SOUTH HISTORY THROUGH BROUGHER DEATH

In recording the death of Wilson Brougher, the Tonopah Times has brought on the discovery of Tonopah, with which Mr. Brougher was intimately connected. The Times has the following to say:

"Mr. Brougher was identified with the discovery of Tonopah through the fact that Jim Butler first showed him the sample of rock which his mule kicked over in crossing what later became known as Mount Oddie on the way to Klondyke. At that time Mr. Brougher was recorder of Nye county with offices at Belmont and already had accumulated a competence in business at the old county seat and also at Tybo where he was engaged during the boom days of that camp. He had also business interests at Ophir canyon coming from Iowa.

"The exact story of the finding of Tonopah has never been told," explained W. J. Douglass yesterday in relating the part played by Wils Brougher in that historical event. Wils and Frank Higgs were leasing at Klondyke when Jim Butler brought in a piece of rock which he asked to have assayed. At that time they assayed about once in every ten days, but in this case Higgs thought so little of the ore that he threw it out of the window and forgot all about it. Jim got tired of waiting for Higgs to run the sample and left the camp. Wils Brougher went out about the same time to attend the monthly meeting of county commissioners. Butler returned north by way of the scene of his find and securing other samples took them to Austin where Gahart reported an assay of $400 per ton.

When Butler returned to Klondyke he was accompanied by Wils Brougher who was given a three-sixteenths interest in putting up the money for the location work. Butler did not wait at Austin for the returns on the assay but went to his ranch at what is now included in the Potts ranch. When the richness of the ore was found, Gahart sent an Indian down to find Butler. Jim was busy haying and didn't come up for some time until he had his hay stacked and nobody knew where he got the ore until he finally showed.

"Wils became interested in the Gold Hill lease on what is now the Jim Butler, and then when Cal reached Tonopah the brothers extended their operation, taking interests in the Belmont, Midway and other ground," continued Mr. Douglas, adding: "This is what really gave Wils his big start in life. He realized three-sixteenths of $336,000 from the sale to the Tonopah Mining Company, making a stake of about $63,000, which he invested in the Arlington hotel in Carson City. He remained in Tonopah until 1905 or 1906 and during the intervening time invested his money jointly with Cal. The camp is indebted to these two brothers for the present Mizpah hotel which they were instrumental in having erected. From the day that Wils put up the location money for the Mizpah to the time of his death he retained a heavy interest in Tonopah and Divide."

DIPLOMAS PRESENTED TO GRADUATES TODAY

Some forty-odd young men and women will assemble in the university gymnasium today to be presented with diplomas of graduations, the Reno Journal reports. John J. Tigert, commissioner of education, will deliver the commencement day address and Prof. Walter Palmer, chairman of the scholarship committee, will announce the names of the scholarship winners. This bit of news is being expectantly awaited by members of the graduating class. Without waiting for the commencement exercises many of the students said good-bye to the friends on the campus Monday night and left for home. The exodus started with the completion of the examinations and only persistent pleadings on the part of the faculty members prevailed upon many of the students to remain for the exercises. At the conclusion of the exercises the graduates and members of the alumni will gather in the dining-room for the annual alumni banquet.
