The bood is beabig brighdly love The bood is beabig brighdly love
The sdars are shidly too;
While I ab gazig dreabily
Add thigkig love of you;
You caddot, oh, you caddot kdow,
By darlig, how I biss you—
(Oh, whalt a fearful cold I've got—Ck-tish-u! Ck-ck-tish-u!)

I'b sittig id the arbor love Where you sat by my side, Whed od that calb, Autabdal dight You said you'd be by bride. Oh, for wud Bobedt to caress Add tederly to kiss you; Budt do! we're beddy biles apart— (Ho-rash-o! Ck-ck-tish-u!)

This charbig evening brigs to bide
The tibe whed first we bet;
It seebs budt odly yesterday,
I think I see you yet.
On ten be, ab I still your owd?
By hopes ch, do dot dash theb!
Codfough ye old, 'it's cetting worse. By hopes ch, do dot dash theb! (Codfoud by cold, 'tis gettig worse-Ck-tish-u! Ck-ck-thrash-eb!)

Good-bye by darlig Bary Jade The bid-dight hour is dear, Add it is hardly wise by love For be to ligger here: The heavy dews are fallig fast, A fod good dight I wish you; (Ho-rash-o's—there it is agaid— Ok-thrash-ub! Ck-ck-(ish-u!) -Scribner's Monthly.

Women of the South .- Like the captive Hebrews, they sing not now the songs that once waked to music sweet their David's harp, for that harp now bangs upon the willows the river of Babylon, where they sit down and weep over fallen Judea True, they sing the songs of marriage feasts and vintage ingatherings yet they come with flowers and tears to testify their sympathy in the sorrow of their land, and their undying appreciation of their gallant dead. What better offering has sorrow or grief than the timid heart's ease, or the modest fern? What purer testi-monial of the heart than the humble violet, planted by beauty's hand over the loved one's grave? As the trees that grew over the grave of the daughter of Thrace, at stated periods. dropped the tears of their branches over the resting-place, so do these noble women come, when Spring flowers bloom, to plant the memo-rial shrub, and shed their tears of love over the human mounds that where our heroes sleep. For this I give them honor and praise, and unfeeling must be the heart that does not do homage to our Southern women—the perfection of beauty and the glory of the land. With them patriotism is a religion, and love an element of life. The hour of adversity is their hour of triumph. Does the storm gather and the tem pest sweep? Man, the Bashan oak falls before the fury of the blast, but woman, the willow by the waters flourishes, beautiful in her humility and luxuriant in her sorrow, when the tempest is over. Do the thunders crash or the lightnings strike? Man, the towering pine, is riven by the stroke. Woman, the humble flower, nestled among our garden plants, emits a sweet fragrance when the storm is hushed. Firm, constant devoted patrictism, pure as the waters from "Chindara's Fount," enthuses their bosoms and signalizes their lives. Meek, gentle, and confiding; a devotion and love, sweet as the fruits of the "Amrita tree" characterize their every action. Generous and self-sacrificing, they

How to TREAT THE DEPRAVED I care not how impure a man is in his personal life, if he will give me supreme control of his food and drink, I will pledge myself to so reform him as he shall become pure of his conduct in life. He may be a debauchee, a gambler, a profane man, a loafer, a man whose passions are uppermost, so that they riot and revel like a fire in a brushwood. Notwithstanding, I will agree to so regulate that man's life that penal courts and officers of retributive justice shall have no need to deal with him. There is only one pos-sibility of failure in such a case, which is that the man's vital force shall have become so ruinously used up that he is not able to stand the taxation which change in existing habits must necessarily impose. It he is physically incurable of any disease, I will not take him as an example. But if he have constitu-tion enough to undergo the neces-sary recovery, I will agree, under the conditions named above, to cure him, not only of his disease, but to make him outwardly a decent man I do not care how debauched or guilty such a man may be. I pledge myself that, given complete supervision of his table prepara-tions, I will bring him where he will cheerfully walk in the paths of morality and righteousness .- Dr.
