BIGAMY.

Akron Man Arrested.

Achille Phillion the Spiral Tower Artist.

He Is Alleged to Have Another Wife.

Says He Abandoned Her Eleven Years Ago.

Married Miss Belle Melvin In This City.

Achille Phillion, who married Miss Belle Melvin of this city, Sept. 20, 1894, is under arrest in New York city on a charge of bigamy.

Some time after his marriage in this city, letters were forwarded to Akron by a woman in Brooklyn, N. Y. She signed herself Mrs. Achille Phillion and claimed to be his wife. She asked for particulars of his marriage. At that time the affair created a decided sensation. Phillion is now in New York with Sells Brothers and Forepaugh's circus, doing a turn on the spiral tower. His Akron wife is with him.

The New York Journal has the following in reference to the case:

"CIRCUS MAN DOES A 'TURN' IN POLICE COURT."

"ACHILLE PHILLION HALED 'THERE BY WIFE NO. 1 AND 'ORDERED TO PAY HER $15 A WEEK."

The marital relations of Emma Phillion, of No. 286 Broome st., and her actor husband, Achille Phillion, now with a circus, had an airing yesterday before Magistrate Pool, in the Centre Street Police court.

Phillion was charged with abandonment and non-support. Mrs. Phillion testified that she had not seen her husband in eleven years until Friday, when she had him arrested. They were married in Venezuela in 1875. Mrs. Phillion said her husband had left her and their two children in destitute circumstances.

Phillion said he had procured a divorce from her and remarried. The court ordered the defendant to pay wife No. 1 $15, and held him in $1,000 bail to insure payment.

The Sun, of Saturday, says:

"Achille Phillion, 47 years old, one of the spiral climbers of Forepaugh's circus, was arrested yesterday afternoon by Policeman Farrington on a warrant issued by Magistrate Pool. Phillion is accused of abandonment by a woman from whom he says he was divorced in 1894. Phillion was brought to the Oak street police station. He was bailed out by Frank C. Joslin."

Phillion resided in Akron during the winter. His wife is a tall and striking blonde.

IN THE FIGHT.

Had Active Service.

Lieut. A. L. Conger Returned to His Home.

Interesting and Exciting Experiences.

The Funeral of Col. Conger In This City.

Services at His Late Residence, Irving Lawn.

Lieutenant A. L. Conger arrived in Akron Sunday morning at 6 o'clock. He left at 9:35 in the evening for Columbus, to obtain a leave of absence.

He will then return to Akron. He is second lieutenant in the Eighteenth regulars, having enlisted about a year ago in New York city. On the merit shown in his examination he was soon promoted to a lieutenant. September last he left for the Philippines. At that place his company was under General Miller.

During his short visit with his mother at Irving Lawn many old soldiers called on him. He very willingly related some of his interesting experiences.

His mission to Akron is to look after the funeral of his father, whose remains are at Des Moines, Ia., but will be forwarded to Akron this week. The funeral will be held next Saturday at 2 o'clock at Col. Conger's late home, under the auspices of the G. A. R. and Whitman & Barnes Manufacturing Co.

Lieutenant Conger has been in the thickest of the fight in the Philippines. For the past six weeks fighting has been continuous, bullets flying in the air, buildings burning and scores being killed every day. Mr. Conger says the Filipinos are better marksmen and are not so easy to capture as at first. However, nothing can be accomplished by either side, if it not done before the rainy season sets in, for then the country is flooded and it is absolutely impossible to do any fighting. He was located at Jaro before embarking for America. He was in command of the ship returning to America. Smallpox broke out and it became necessary for him to enforce the rules of the letter and make all possible restrictions.

FOUR SETS

Of Lantern Slides—Arranging For Public Display.

The meeting of the Akron Camera club tomorrow evening promises to be one of unusual interest.

The regular program will be omitted and the evening devoted to lantern slides. There are four magnificent sets here from the exchange, one from Portland, Oregon and Denver, Col., and two from the East. The Western sets are full of beautiful mountain scenery and all who are fortunate enough to see them will enjoy a rare treat.

The club is preparing for a grand public exhibition of the work of its members, which is to be held Wednesday, May 17, and all members are expected to have something ready for exhibition on this occasion. The time is short now and those who will bring in their prints should get them ready as soon as possible.

He says if Lesser is arrested he will take a look at him, as he knows he can identify the party who called on him with the "doctored" money.

PETER'S FACE

Was a Horrible Sight.

The Greatest Contest of Recent Years.

Macon's Comment on the Big Fight.

Ruhlin Matched Against the Irish "Champ."

Baseball Games Played Saturday—Sporting News.

The fight between Gus Ruhlin and Peter Maher at the Lenox athletic club, in New York, will go down in pugilistic history as one of the greatest of heavy weight contests.

Macon, in commenting on the fight in the Enquirer, says the following: "Those who could, but didn't, see the fight between Peter Maher and Gus Ruhlin before the Lenox club last Tuesday night will only regret the failure once and that will be as long as they live, for it was, far and away, the best heavy weight contest ever fought under Queensberry rules. As the advertisement writers say about funny farces, 'there wasn't a dull moment in it,' and when it was over and Charley White's verdict, 'a draw,' was proclaimed, the happy 5,000 lovers of fisty sport who witnessed it were radiant with delight.

"How human flesh could stand the buffeting each man was giving and taking was a wonder to the spectators. A dozen times it seemed as though the end would come the next moment, but either the gong would prevent or the men would spar a moment for wind and unexpectedly freshen up. That each had trained hard and well was shown by the way they endured their fearful punishment and the quickness with which they recuperated from it. Maher's face was a fearful sight. No such visage was ever seen in a ring since the old days of the London rules, and no caricature of a beaten mug in a comic paper was ever half as bad as this. Ruhlin's countenance was also badly disfigured, but his body under his heart and left ribs were as raw and as red as beefsteak. Still Maher was the aggressor, but neither man had agility enough left to plant a knock-out blow. 'I wish it could be ended now,' said Martin Dowling during the fight. 'It's anybody's battle and a chance hit may decide it. I like boxing as well as any man, but this is too hard for me.' I confess I felt as Dowling did."

"In order to reinvigorate them each man was plentifully dosed with whisky between the rounds. Ruhlin was given the most. He was miserably seconded. Most of the time he was allowed to sit bolt upright, with no rest for his back, and it was not until about the twelfth round that his legs were stretched out and rubbed. He was hardly allowed a moment for breathing. He was either being dosed with tea or whisky or made to suck a piece of lemon. This treatment called out very strong comments from Tommy Ryan, Sam Kelly and Jack Daly, while Billy Delaney manifested his disgust at such handling in language that would hardly do to print.

"I saw Maher in his room five minutes after the end. He was a horrible looking object and he complained greatly of pain in his left arm near his elbow. Some parties who came out of Ruhlin's room told me that he was acting like a crazy man. I presume the large amount of liquor he had taken somewhat affected his head. He rose visibly in the estimation of the spectators and many were of Jim Jeffries' opinion that Sharkey's punch, which knocked him out atONEY Island was but a lucky fluke."
